2. The ESRC-funded Research Centre for Economic Performance at the London School of Economics received £118,000 from November 1991 to August 1992 from the EC for its Technical Assistance Programme to the Russian Government.
3. The ESRC-funded Research Centre for the Study of African Economies at the University of Oxford attracted direct funding from the EC of £63,000 for a project "Sixth European Development Fund: MSc teaching at Addis Ababa University".
4. An ESRC-funded project entitled "Farm Structures and Household Pluriactivity in Europe" is being undertaken by Arkleton Trust Research Ltd. over a period of three years and nine months, at a cost of £45,932 per annum.

EDUCATION

English Tests

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) pursuant to his answer of 19 March, Official Report, column 408, if he will publish the name of the agency, commissioned by the School Examinations and Assessment Council, to undertake an internal evaluation of the 1992 pilot English tests for 14-year-olds; and what was the cost of the evaluation;

(2) pursuant to his answer of 19 March, Official Report, column 408, if he will place a copy of the report of the evaluation commissioned by the School Examinations and Assessment Council, of the 1992 pilot English tests in the Library.

Mr. Forth: The evaluation was undertaken by the Northern Examinations and Assessment Board (NEAB) as part of its contract with SEAC to write tests for 14-year-olds in English. The total cost of the contract was £206,000, covering the period September 1991 to September 1992. It is not possible to disaggregate the cost of the evaluation in particular.

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many and what percentage of officers in each grade from 1 to 7 and overall in his Department are (a) women, (b) from ethnic minorities and (c) disabled people.

Mr. Boswell: The number and percentage of women and disabled staff in each grade requested and the overall number in the Department as at 1 March 1993 are as follows:

Grade	Women	Per cent.	Disabled	Per cent.
5	14	32	1	2
6	1	6	0	0
Overall	1,280	59	68	3

The figures for disabled staff cover only those registered as disabled. The Department also has members of staff with disabilities who have chosen not to register.

We do not hold information on the ethnic origin of all our staff but of those who have responded to date to the ethnic monitoring survey—98·5 per cent.—those from ethnic minorities are as follows:

Grade	Number	Per cent.
Overall	173	8

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education when his Department last conducted surveys of (a) ethnic origins and (b) the number of women among its employees; when it next plans to do so; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Boswell: A survey of the ethnic origins of staff was undertaken in 1990, since when our database has been continuously updated as new staff join the Department. We currently hold ethnic origin data on 98·5 per cent. of our staff. The number of women in the Department is monitored annually in December.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what steps he has taken to recruit women, members of ethnic minorities and disabled people, respectively, in top grades of employment at his Department.

Mr. Boswell: Recruitment of grades above administrative officer is undertaken by the Recruitment and Assessment Services Agency on behalf of the civil service commissioners. Recruits to the senior grades, as to any grade in the civil service, are selected on merit on the basis of fair and open competition, unless one of the exceptions permitted under the Civil Service Orders in Council 1991 applies. Various steps have been taken by the civil service commissioners to aid recruitment from all sectors of the community. These steps include extending links with institutions of higher education; equal opportunities training for those involved in selection; and using validated selection procedures.

Undergraduates (Tuition Fees)

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the total expenditure in respect of tuition fees for undergraduate courses in universities and polytechnics for 1991-92; and how much of this was for students not qualifying for a mandatory maintenance award on grounds of high parental income.

Mr. Boswell: The total expenditure in the academic year 1991-92 by local education authorities in England and Wales on fees paid by them as part of mandatory awards for students attending first degree courses is provisionally estimated at £1,021 million. It is not possible to estimate how much of this expenditure was for students not qualifying for a mandatory maintenance award on the ground of high parental income. However, about 27 per cent. of all first degree students in receipt of a mandatory award received no maintenance grant as a result of means-testing.

Further Education

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what conditions are attached to the disposal of Exchequer-funded land and buildings by colleges in the new further education sector.

Mr. Patten: The conditions will be the same as those which have applied to universities since 1985, and to institutions in the Polytechnics and Colleges Funding Council sector since 1989—Official Report, 15 January 1985, columns 91-92 and 26 March 1991, column 359. They will similarly allow colleges in the further education sector to retain the proceeds of sale of Exchequer-funded land and buildings, within specified limits agreed by the Secretary of State, without reference to the annual supply procedures. These conditions are among those set out in the financial memorandum between the Department and the Further Education Funding Council, a copy of which I will be placing in the Library.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Squatting

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he proposes to take to change the law on squatting; and what conclusions he has reached as a result of responses made last year to his consultative paper on unlawful occupation of property.

Mr. Jack: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer which I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Chelmsford (Mr. Burns) on 3 February 1993 at column 203.

Keith Twitchell

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will be in a position to conclude whether there are grounds to refer the conviction of Keith Twitchell to the Court of Appeal under section 17(1)(a) of the Criminal Appeal Act 1968 following representations made by Mr. Twitchell's solicitors in June 1991; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: My right hon. and learned Friend expects to be in a position to reach a decision shortly.

Data Protection

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in reaching a common position with respect to the European Commission's proposals for a data protection directive; and what level of support the United Kingdom Government have obtained from other member states with respect to (a) the inclusion of manual files, (b) data subject consent, (c) restrictions on the processing of sensitive personal data and (d) notification to the data subject of the first disclosure made by a third party.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The council working party has not yet concluded its initial consideration of the revised text of the draft directive. The range of views expressed on each of the matters mentioned by the hon. Member is very wide, but it would not be appropriate for me to disclose the negotiating position of individual member states. The extent of agreement with the United Kingdom position varies from issue to issue. A closer alignment of views may be expected as negotiations continue.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has which relates to the costs already experienced by other member states who have extended data protection to (a) include manual files, (b) require data subject consent, (c) place restrictions on the processing of sensitive personal data and (d) include notification to the data subject of the first disclosure made by a third party.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I have no such information.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the estimated costs of the United Kingdom satisfying the European Commission's data protection directive in relation to (a) the inclusion of manual files, (b) data subject consent, (c) restrictions on the processing of sensitive personal data and (d) notification to the data subject of the first disclosure made by a third party.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Home Office has asked a wide range of organisations for their views on, and estimates of the cost of complying with, the draft directive. Only a proportion have felt able to make such estimates, and there is insufficient consistency in the methods used for any composite figures to be meaningful. It is clear, nevertheless, that the cost implications for many sectors would be substantial.

Data Protection

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what effect the cancellation of the Taurus computer system by the stock exchange has had on the need for the Data Protection (Regulation of Financial Services etc.) (Subject Access Exemption) (Amendment) Order 1992; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter LLoyd: The continuing need for the order will be considered following the report of the task force on securities settlement which has been set up by the Bank of England to consider the way forward following the cancellation of the Taurus project.

Police Forces (Wales)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what consultations he has had in Wales with (i) the Magistrates Association, (ii) chief police officers and (iii) the Assembly of Welsh Councils, concerning changes in the organisation of police forces;

(2) if he will meet the Assembly of Welsh Councils; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: My right hon. and learned Friend made a statement about the future of the police service in England and Wales on 23 March. On the same day he met the president of the Association of Chief Police Officers and the chairman of the Association of County Councils to discuss the proposals which were set out in his statement. He has no plans at present to meet the Assembly of Welsh Counties, the Magistrates Association or individual chief police officers.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which police headquarters he has visited in Wales.

Mr. Charles Wardle: None.

Dog Attacks

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his best estimate of the number of attacks carried out by dogs on (a) human beings and (b) other animals each year; and what information is available on the type of dog responsible in each case.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Magistrates Association

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he met the Magistrates Association.

Mr. Jack: My right hon. and learned Friend last met members of the Magistrates Association at its Nottinghamshire branch on 19 February. He will be meeting the chairman and other representatives of the association shortly.

Coroners

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many complaints have been made about coroners in 1992.

Mr. Charles Wardle: We have received 25 such complaints.

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many and what percentage of officers in each grade from 1 to 7 and overall in his Department are (a) women, (b) from ethnic minorities and (c) disabled people.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: On the most recent figures for those who have responded to ethnic origin surveys carried out by the Department, in the unified grades 1 to 7, 42 —that is 10 (5·2 per cent.) at grade 5; 24 (10·5 per cent.) at grade 6; and eight (0·7 per cent.) at grade 7—classified themselves as being of ethnic minority origin, representing 0·2 per cent. of the total number who responded in all main grades.

On 25 March 1993, 180 staff in the unified grades 1 to 7 were women, representing some 22 per cent. of staff in those grades. In the unified grades, 7 (28 per cent.) staff at grade 3, 22 (23 per cent.) at grade 5, 10 (10 per cent.) at grade 6 and 141 (25 per cent.) at grade 7 were women. There are no women in grades 1, 2 or 4.

On 1 July 1992, the latest date for which figures are available, 185 members of staff in the Home Office were registered disabled, representing 0·4 per cent. of all staff. There were no registered disabled staff at grades 1 to 7. The Department employs many other people with disabilities who have chosen not to register, but no record has been kept of such staff.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken to recruit women, members of ethnic minorities and disabled people, respectively, in top grades of employment at his Department.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Most senior posts in the Department are filled internally by promotion. The Home Office is committed to ensuring that all staff—regardless of race, gender, disability or any other relevant factor—have equal access to opportunities for training, promotion and career development. A wide range of measures is in place to give effect to this policy.

Recruitment direct to specific senior posts is generally conducted by the Recruitment and Assessment Services on behalf of the Home Office, on the basis of fair and open competition.

In the prison service, particular efforts have been made in recent years to recruit women and members of the ethnic minorities to the accelerated promotion scheme, which prepares staff for senior positions in the service.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when his Department last conducted surveys of (a) ethnic origins and (b) the number of women among its employees; when it next plans to do so; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: All non-industrial staff in the Home Office who had not responded to earlier surveys were asked to state their ethnic origin in a further voluntary survey, conducted over the past 12 months. This has significantly increased the database of staff ethnic backgrounds, which now covers 90 per cent. of staff in the Home Office (non-prisons) and 74 per cent. of non-industrial staff in the prison service. Further steps will be taken to maintain and increase the database. People seeking posts in the Department are asked to state their ethnic origins when making their applications. No survey of industrial staff in the Department has yet been carried out, but measures are in hand to address this. There is no need for a survey of women since the gender of employees is identified in staff records.

Crime

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what proposals he has to reduce the level of crime committed by those of school age in the north-west region;

(2) what action he proposes to take to combat crime in the north-west region of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Jack: The Government have encouraged the police and other agencies in the development of effective crime prevention programmes and have funded a number of initiatives aimed at tackling crime, including youth crime. The Home Office safer cities projects in the north-west —Rochdale, Salford and Wirral—are major crime prevention initiatives which include schemes aimed at diverting the young away from crime. We have also established local drugs prevention teams in Manchester, Salford and the Wirral with the aim of tackling the spread of misuse, particularly amongst the young. In addition the probation service grant scheme provides funding for eight projects in the north-west region, which in the main provide programmes of supervision or support for young offenders and defendants. There are also over 16,000 neighbourhood watch schemes in the region covering almost 500,000 households.

The Department for Education announced recently that Lancashire and Manchester are each to receive £147,000 under its grants for education support and training (GEST) programme for youth crime prevention schemes in 1993-94. School community action teams are also in operation in secondary schools in Lancashire carrying out a range of crime prevention activity. Diversionary projects for young people and other schemes to reduce crime and the fear of crime, including property security measures, will be financed under the Department of the Environment's city challenge programme in Wirral, Manchester, Liverpool, Blackburn, Wigan, Sefton and Bolton.

Under its estate action programme Lancashire will receive £7·9 million, Greater Manchester £29 million and Merseyside £36·8 million in 1992-93 for improvements to run down council estates. These improvements will, among other things, led to reduction in crime and vandalism.

As part of its programme of action on youth crime for 1993, the Government-supported independent organisation Crime Concern is planning a series of regional seminars, one of which is to be held in the north-west, on best practice in diverting young people away from crime. The Government recently announced plans to introduce a new sentence of detention to secure facilities for 12 to 15-year-old boys and girls who persistently re-offend and for whom supervision in the community has been ineffective.

Violence Against Women

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to adopt the draft international declaration on violence against women into British law.

Mr. Jack: The Government take very seriously the need to tackle violence in society and have taken a number of steps in recent years against violence against women. A summary was given in my reply to the hon. Member for Redcar (Ms Mowlam) on 29 March at columns 103-04. We have strongly supported the development of the draft United Nations declaration on the elimination of violence against women, and share its aims of encouraging internationally both condemnation of violence against women and commitment to its elimination. Any implications of the final declaration for the law in this country will be considered carefully.

Domestic Violence

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish arrest rates for cases of domestic violence for each police authority area.

Mr. Jack: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Market Testing

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which professional services within his Department have been subjected to market testing within the last 12 months and with what result; and which will be subjected to market testing within the next 12 months.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: My Department is in the process of market testing its internal audit and accountancy advice services and we expect to reach conclusions by the end of September.

The market testing programme for 1993-94 has yet to be settled.

Sexual Crimes

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what statutory commitments are currently in place to help victims of sexual crimes to resume a normal life; and what plans he has to extend such statutory provision.

Mr. Jack: Some of the most important means of helping victims of all crimes recover from their experiences are non-statutory. These include the work of the national charity Victim Support which, with Home Office funding, provides much-appreciated emotional support and practical help to victims, including victims of rape and other serious crimes of violence. Victims of sexual offences, as of other crimes of violence, are also eligible for compensation from the non-statutory criminal injuries compensation scheme.

Statutory provisions, in addition to the national health service—which may be able to provide counselling for victims—and Department of Social Security benefits, include the power of courts to order offenders to pay compensation to their victims, and protection—for the complainants' lifetime—from publicity in cases of rape and sexual assault.

There are no plans to extend statutory powers in this area.

Royal Households (Police Protection)

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to make the police officers assigned to protecting royal households supernumerary to the force establishment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: No. Where there is a permanent need for protection duties, additional posts are approved and incorporated into force establishments.

Gloucestershire Constabulary

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to ensure that Gloucestershire constabulary is staffed to the level recommended by the chief constable; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Under the present system, approvals of bids for extra posts for police forces are given on the basis of relative need. As a result of current economic circumstances, no increases have been approved for the coming financial year.

Parole

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidance has been given for the Parole Board to take into account when considering the release, transfer to open conditions and recall of mandatory life sentence prisoners.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: For reviews of mandatory life sentence prisoners which begin at the prison from 1 April, the parole board will be giving reasons for recommendations and Ministers will be giving reasons for their decisions. It is important, therefore, that the board and prisoners have a clear understanding of the criteria against which recommendations and decisions are made. I have, therefore, written to the chairman of the parole board giving him directions under section 32(6) of the Criminal Justice Act 1991 setting out the matters which the parole board should take into account when discharging its functions. I have also provided the board with guidance for the training of its members. Copies of the letter, the directions and training guidance have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Rave Parties

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he intends to take to tackle the problems caused by illegal raves and by mass trespass on land.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment today announced a package of proposals designed to tackle illegal camping as a consequence of his review of the Caravan Sites Act 1968.

The Government recognise that these measures alone will not be sufficient to deal with all types of illegal camping. Since the enactment of the Public Order Act 1986 there has been special provision for dealing with aggravated trespass: that is, trespass where, either because of the sheer numbers involved or because of the behaviour of trespassers, it is right that the police should have powers to intervene. Section 39 of the 1986 Act has worked well, but the Government believe that it can be made more effective. Therefore, we propose to apply section 39 to a wider range of circumstances, principally extending it to minor highways—including green lanes and byways open to all traffic—and reducing the number of vehicles required to trigger the powers from 12 to six.

We also propose to take additional measures to deal with the illegal large raves which made life so miserable for so many people last summer. We propose to provide new powers to enable the police, where they reasonably believe that 10 or more people have gathered on a site and that a rave will take place with the result that a local community will suffer serious distress on account of music played during the night, to direct those people to leave. Failure to heed such a direction will be a criminal offence. In order that the police may enforce this effectively, we propose to provide them additionally with powers to turn back within a radius of five miles anyone they reasonably believe is intending to go to the rave site.

These measures are unusual, but the Government believe that they are justified in the light of the serious mischief they are seeking to prevent and that they will be welcomed by law-abiding citizens throughout the country.

Immigration

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for introducing an independent element into the procedures for handling complaints against the Immigration and Nationality Department.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Complaints against the Immigration and Nationality Department—including those involving the immigration service—are thoroughly investigated, and complainants informed of the outcome. My right hon. and learned Friend has, however, decided that confidence in the complaints system would be enhanced if there were an independent means of monitoring the health of the system. He intends to appoint a complaints audit committee, comprising three members. The committee's remit will be to satisfy itself as to the effectiveness of the procedures for investigating complaints; to draw IND management's attention to any weakness; and to make an annual report to my right hon. and learned Friend. The committee will have access to all papers on complaints investigations, but will not be involved in the investigation of individual complaints or decisions in individual cases. The powers of the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration are unaffected.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Indirect Taxes

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update his answer of 25 November, Official Report, column 684, on the level of indirect taxes, giving figures for 1993-94.

Sir John Cope: At this time it is possible to give the answer only in respect of current duty levels. The figures in the table therefore relate to duty rates immediately after the Budget. This is different from the method used in the previous answer which covered the whole financial year, so for comparison the equivalent figures for 1992-93 are also shown. These differ from the answer of 25 November also because the method of calculating real increases has been adjusted. Ad valorem taxes have not been covered, except for cigarettes where the ad valorem element is included in addition to the specific duty. Aviation gasoline was not subject to duty in 1978-79.

Bank of England

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many occasions since 1963 the Treasury has exercised its power under section 4 of the Bank of England Act 1946 to give directions to the Bank of England.

Mr. Nelson: None.

Family Expenditure Survey

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he hopes to publish the results of his Department's family expenditure survey; what has been the cost of carrying out this survey; if he will send the hon. Member for Don Valley a copy of the questionnaire that interviewees were asked to complete over a two-week period; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nelson: I hope to publish the 1992 family expenditure survey in October 1993. The running cost of the family expenditure survey for the year 1992-93 is approximately £3·4 million. A copy of the 1992 questionnaire and diary has been sent to the hon. Member and a copy has been placed in the Library of the House.

Market Testing

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which professional services within his Department have been subjected to market testing within the last 12 months and with what result; and which will be subjected to market testing within the next 12 months.

Mr. Nelson: No such services have been tested within the last 12 months. The Treasury's market testing programme for the period up to 30 September 1993 was set out on page 64 of the first report on the citizens charter (Cm 2010) and covers a number of professional services including economic model building and development, internal audit and consultancy inspection services. No decisions have been taken about market testing in 1993-94.

National Debt

Mr. Shore: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the current ratio of United Kingdom national debt to gross domestic product; and what it will be in 1997-98 on the assumption that the public sector borrowing requirement will increase as set out in table 2B.5 of the financial statement for 1993-94.

Mr. Lamont: I refer the right hon. Member to the reply given to my right hon. Friend the Member for Westmorland and Lonsdale (Mr. Jopling) on 29 March 1993 at column 17.

Overseas Securities

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what regulations he intends to introduce to implement the legislation for the lending of overseas securities and for payments of manufactured overseas dividends on such securities.

Mr. Dorrell: Regulations are being laid today to bring into effect the new legislation on payments of manufactured overseas dividends in section 58 and schedule 13 of the Finance Act 1991. Further regulations will shortly be made under the provisions contained in schedule 23A of the Income and Corporation Taxes Act —introduced by schedule 13 of the Finance Act 1991—to set out the arrangements for accounting for tax on manufactured overseas dividends. Regulations will also be made at the same time to bring into effect, for overseas securities, the amendments to the stock lending rules contained in section 57 of the Finance Act 1991.

The amendments to the stock lending rules will allow lending chains to contain more than three parties without tax charges arising on disposals of securities from one party to the next. This relaxation is designed to enhance the liquidity of the London market in overseas securities and the role of London as a major financial centre.

The arrangements for accounting for tax on manufactured overseas dividends have been discussed in detail with market representatives over the past two years. They differ from the proposals outlined by my predecessor in the Committee stage debate on schedule 13—introduced as schedule 12—of the 1991 Finance Bill. However, the new arrangements, like those originally envisaged, aim to balance freedom for the markets with adequate protection for the Exchequer against the main risks of tax loss.

Inheritence Tax

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many landowners in (a) Pendle, (b) Lancashire and (c) England have been conditionally exempted from inheritance tax.

Mr. Dorrell: Figures are not available on a constituency basis but in Lancashire six properties have benefited from conditional exemption from inheritance tax or capital transfer tax. There have been 121 designations of land for conditional exemption from inheritance tax or capital transfer tax in England and 104 designations of historic buildings in England.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 19 March, Official Report, column 418, what criteria are used in determining the extent of the publicity on public access to land where the owners are claiming exemption from inheritance tax by virtue of section 31 of the Inheritance Taxes Act 1984.

Mr. Dorrell: The heritage advisory agencies will discuss, with each owner, the appropriate level of publicity to be given to public access arrangements agreed in return for conditional exemption from inheritance tax or capital transfer tax. Each case is considered individually and all relevant factors, including the existing level of publicity, are taken into account.

VAT

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for each VAT office the number of registrations and deregistrations for each year since 1989.

Sir John Cope: The information requested is as follows:

	Registrations				Deregistrations

"Other Receipts"

Ms Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will, provide a table disaggregating the series "other receipts" published in table 2B.4 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1993-94" into its principal components together with a table indicating how these figures compare with the equivalent series in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1992-93".

Mr. Portillo: A detailed breakdown of "other receipts" for 1992-93 and 1993-94 can be found in the general government column of table 6.9 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report" (FSBR). They comprise lines 6, 7, 10, 11, and 28 to 31. The 1992-93 figures can be directly compared with projections made in the same table in the 1992-93 FSBR. For the medium term, 1994-95 and beyond in the 1993-94 FSBR, 1993-94 and beyond in last year's FSBR, the figures are stylised projections.

Lloyd's Names

Mr. Adley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what effect the changes in tax treatment for Lloyd's invested premium, set out in his Budget, will have for names currently benefiting from capital gains tax indexation allowances under current arrangements.

Mr. Dorrell: Under my right hon. Friend the Chancellor's proposals gains and losses on assets held by Lloyd's names in a premiums trust fund will be brought within the computation of trading profits chargeable to income tax. Capital gains tax treatment, including the availability of indexation allowances, will therefore no longer apply.

Taxpayers

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the numbers of additional income tax payers in 1993-94 as a result of freezing rates of personal allowances; and how much extra income tax will be raised as a result.

Mr. Dorrell: Compared with statutory indexation, the revenue yield from not changing personal allowances will be about £700 million in 1993-94, and about 300,000 more people will pay tax.

Gilt-edged Securities

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about purchases of gilt-edged securities by individuals.

Mr. Nelson: Over recent months, there has been an increase in interest among personal investors in finding out about the gilt market and the investment opportunities in gilts.

The Government have decided to respond to that interest in two ways.

First, the Bank of England will be issuing on 5 April a new booklet providing clear information for the personal investor about the gilt market and how it works.

Secondly, the Department for National Savings will be improving the service it offers to personal investors through the National Savings Stock Register (NSSR), with effect from 7 April. The upper limit on the amount that may be invested in any one existing stock which can be bought on any one day will go up from £10,000 to £25,000. This is the first increase in this limit for 10 years. The upper limit on the nominal amount of stock bought in a public offering which personal investors may ask to have registered on the NSSR will also go up from £10,000 to £25,000. The increase in this limit is the first for over five years. The order to put these changes into effect was laid before the House on 18 March. And in future, DNS will arrange for all existing stocks to be available through its system.

The costs of producing the booklet will fall to the Treasury's 1993-94 vote (class XVII, vote 1). Parliamentary approval for this new expenditure will be sought in a supplementary estimate for this vote. Pending that approval, urgent expenditure of £309,000 will be met by repayable advances from the contingencies fund. The resulting increases in the Treasury's cash limit and gross running costs limit will be fully offset by a reduction in the Bank of England's cash limit and will not therefore add to the planned total of public expenditure.

Customs and Excise

Mr. Channon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the relocation of HM Customs and Excise headquarters work from the south-east to the north-west is proceeding to timetable; and if he will make a statement.

Sir John Cope: To date 350 Customs and Excise headquarters posts have been relocated on schedule to Liverpool and 270 to Manchester from London and Southend. But organisational changes, efficiency savings and market testing are significantly reducing the size of the Department's central operations and particularly its ability to absorb surplus staff in Southend. In addition, turnover of the Department's staff at Southend is at an historic low and the planned changes would therefore lead to considerable compulsory redundancy. The board of Customs and Excise has therefore reviewed its relocation programme. The board and I have decided to rephase the programme by creating in Liverpool some 300 more posts in the next phase rather than the 850 extra posts previously planned.

This rephasing not only represents best value for money for the taxpayer but also strikes a balance between the need for jobs both in Southend and Liverpool and the business needs of Customs and Excise. The position in Southend will, however, be reviewed in four years' time, in 1997, in the light of the economic situation and job prospects in both Southend and Liverpool.

I recognise that this decision will be disappointing for the people of Merseyside and for the many organisations which have worked with Customs and Excise to make a success of relocation. But I do not believe that it would have been acceptable to have continued with a relocation programme which would have created new jobs in Liverpool but which in the changed circumstances would have left some hundreds of people in Southend facing compulsory redundancy. Customs and Excise will still be a major employer on Merseyside with more than 1,000 staff and a major headquarters office.

National Insurance and Income Tax

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the total revenue raised from (a) national insurance contributions and (b) income tax in each year from 1978-79 to 1996-97 in (i) cash prices and (ii) 1978-79 prices.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 29 March 1993]: Available information on receipts of income tax and national insurance contributions is as follows:

Households (Negative Equity)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the number of households with negative equity in each region in each year since 1987.

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 9 March 1993]: There is considerable variation in estimates of the number of households with negative equity, reflecting the uncertainties involved in such calculations. I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 23 February to my hon. Friend the member for Hazel Grove (Sir Tom Arnold) by the Minister for Housing and Planning at column 522. The following table provides figures for the north and south calculated on the same basis, which excludes those who have increased their indebtedness since buying their house, and those who have since sold or had their house repossessed; it is based on the DOE house price index. It would not be possible to produce a more detailed regional breakdown without disproportionate cost.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Sports Aid Foundation

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what support his Department is giving to the Sports Aid Foundation Charitable Trust in 1992-93.

Mr. Brooke: We have paid to the Sports Aid Foundation Charitable Trust grant of £17,000 for the current year in respect of its administration costs. This is a new service to be provided within class XII, vote 5 of my Department's estimates provision for 1992-93. The full amount of the grant will be met from savings made from other sub-heads within vote 5.

Items in Lieu of Tax

Mr. Andrew Hargreaves: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what offers in lieu of tax have been accepted or allocated since his last announcement on 26 March, Official Report, column 729.

Mr. Brooke: Since my last announcement on 26 March, Official Report, column 729, I am pleased to inform the House of the acceptance of two offers in lieu of taxation. The offers consist of the Barrington archive together with a model gun ship which will satisfy £147,000 tax and a group of chattels from Nostell priory which will satisfy £30,820 tax.

The Nostell priory chattels will be allocated to the National Trust and will remain "in situ" at Nostell priory. This allocation is in accordance with the conditions on which the offer was made. No decision has yet been made on the allocation of the Barrington archive, or on the model gun ship.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

South Africa (Nuclear Devices)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information Her Majesty's Government have on the nuclear devices produced by South Africa in the 1970s.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 29 March 1993 to the honourable Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) at column 46.

UAE

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations the British embassy in the United Arab Emirates made regarding the two men recently sentenced to have an arm and a leg amputated for theft.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Her Majesty's Consul-General raised with the Fujairah authorities on 23 March the case of two men convicted of piracy and sentenced to have an arm and a leg amputated. He was informed that the case is going to appeal. A final decision on sentencing will be taken only then. While the sentences were passed in accordance with UAE federal criminal judicial procedure, the Government of the United Arab Emirates can be in no doubt as to our views on such punishments and on human rights generally.

Embassy Staff

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his policy in relation to the appointment to the staff of British embassies of individuals with experience in manufacturing industry.

Mr. Goodlad: We attach great importance to strengthening the diplomatic service's links with industry and to our programme of interchanges with the private sector. It is also our policy to recruit as locally engaged commercial officers business men with appropriate experience, including those from the manufacturing industry.

Hong Kong

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many retired civil servants of the Hong Kong Government were registered at the latest available date.

Mr. Goodlad: There are some 41,000 retired Hong Kong Government civil servants.

HEALTH

Information Technology

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what was the total bill to the national health service for computer systems including software in the last 10 years; what is the current projected budget for computers over the public expenditure planning period; and what is the nature and cost of each child surveillance computer system for each region in the last 10 years;

(2) what were the total amounts written off in respect of ineffective computer systems in each of the last three years per region.

Mr. Sackville: Expenditure incurred by health authorities in England on computers and related costs became separately identifiable in their annual accounts from 1983-84. Figures for the financial years 1983-84 to 1991-92, which cover all relevant expenditure incurred by the health authorities in their management and direct provision of all hospital and community health services (HCHS), are shown in the table.

Comprehensive information on health authorities' projected expenditure on computers, on the costs incurred on child surveillance computer systems, and on any ineffective computer systems is not available centrally.

Sources:

(a) Annual accounts (1983-84 to 1990-91) and annual financial returns (1991-92) of regional and district health authorities in England and those of the special health authorities for the London postgraduate teaching hospitals.

(b) 1991-92 annual financial returns of the first wave NHS trusts.

Notes:

1. HCHS covers all services directly managed or accounted for by the health authorities and NHS Trusts including hospital, community health, patient transport (ie ambulance), blood transfusion and other services.

2. Revenue "purchases" may include elements for rent and leasing. There is some discontinuity in the series of figures for "maintenance" and "contract services" as since 1987-88, the latter category is intended to include only expenditure incurred on contracts for data processing services.

3. The figures for 1991-92 (which are derived from annual financial returns rather than accounts) are provisional. Following the introduction of capital asset accounting and changes to the analyses provided in annual financial returns the figure for capital expenditure is not comparable to those for earlier years. It represents expenditure only on mainframe information technology (IT) systems and excludes additional expenditure on computers within a total of some £103·5 million for "office and IT equipment" and which is not separately identifiable centrally.

4. The table excludes the comparatively small costs incurred by family health services authorities and special health authorities providing central services to the National Health Service.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Kevin Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how the strategy for implementing "The Health of the Nation" is going to take into account the needs of people from black and ethnic minority groups.

Mr. Sackville: The White Paper "The Health of the Nation" (Cm. 1986) and the supporting key area handbooks, copies of which are available in the Library, identify particular health needs of people from black and ethnic minorities and indicate that health authorities and others must concentrate efforts on such needs if the White Paper's targets are to be achieved. I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave my hon. Friend the Member for Bury, South (Mr. Sumberg) on 23 March at column 589, which stated that we have set up a task force to examine and recommend action at all levels in the Department, and in the national health service to ensure the application of current best practice in the provision of health services for black and ethnic minorities.

Image Training

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much of the budget of the management training for women in the health service is to be spent on image training; how many women this involves; and at what levels in the health service.

Mr. Sackville: Individual positive image sessions are no longer available through the women in the national health service management development programme.

Prescription Charges

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received on evidence which compares chronic conditions related to the pre-payment certificate scheme.

Dr. Mawhinney: Prescription pre-payment certificates, which offer real savings to anyone who needs more than 14 prescribed items in a year, or more than five in a four-month period, are not linked to any medical conditions. They are available to anyone who is not entitled to free prescriptions on application, and payment of the required fee, to their local family health services authority.

Market Testing

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which professional services within her Department have been subjected to market testing within the last 12 months and with what result; and which will be subjected to market testing within the next 12 months.

Mr. Sackville: The citizens charter first report published Departments' plans for their initial market testing programmes covering the period to 30 September 1993. The Department's programme includes the following professional and related services:

—internal audit
—the Department of Health library service
—certain statistical support functions

The market testing process for these services has begun.

Infertility Treatment

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what amount of money has been allocated in each of the financial years ended March 1991, 1992 and 1993 by Waltham Forest health authority for the treatment of patients requiring IVF; how many patients have been refused IVF because of insufficient funds on (a) primary cycle and (b) subsequent cycles; and what is the current waiting time from referral to primary treatment and from primary to subsequent treatment.

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally. The hon. Member may wish to write to Miss Delva Patman, chairman of Redbridge and Waltham Forest health authority, for details.

GP Fund Holders

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will place in the Library copies of letters and reports sent by the Audit Commission to her Department on fund holding in 1991-92.

Dr. Mawhinney: Formal audit reports covering matters of major concern, which are reports in the public interest (RIPI), are issued under section 20(3) of the 1990 National Health Service and Community Care Act and are public documents. No RIPIs have been issued concerning general practitioner fundholding in 1991-92. Management letters, summarising matters arising during the course of an audit are routinely sent to each family health services authority. These are not available centrally.

Paracetemol Overdoses

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information she has on the number of suicides and suicide attempts arising from overdoses of paracetemol in the latest period for which figures are available.

Mr. Sackville: The latest available figures for the number of people who have been recorded as having committed suicide and where paracetemol is mentioned in the records is shown in table 1. Table 2 combines the information provided in table 1 with statistics on the number of people where paracetemol is mentioned in the records and where it was undetermined whether death was accidentally or purposely inflicted. Information on the number of people who have attempted suicide by use of paracetemol is not available centrally.

A recent article[1] published by the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys in conjunction with the Department of Health and the Communicable Disease Surveillance Centre, suggests that a significant number of the undetermined deaths are in fact suicides. A copy of this article is available in the Library.

NOS Not otherwise stated.

The inclusion of a substance in this list does not imply that it is necessarily toxic. Where two or more substances are mentioned together the contribution, if any, of each to the death is unknown; even where one substance is listed alone there may well be other factors with an important bearing on the death.

Drug Prescribing

Mr. Alexander: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her Department's timetable for introducing the new selected list regulations to cover 10 additional therapeutic categories of NHS medicines; and what parliamentary procedures will be applicable for debating the new regulations before they are enacted.

Dr. Mawhinney: Orders to amend the list of drugs which cannot be prescribed under the national health service are made under the negative resolution procedure. They are normally made twice a year. We expect the next order to be made before the summer recess.

Blindness

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information she has on the incidence of blindness caused by unsatisfactory contact lenses; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: Three per cent. of the population in the United Kingdom use contact lenses. There are no available figures to indicate that using contact lenses may cause blindness. There are indications that although the risk is low, contact lens wearers do have an enhanced exposure to factors that can result in ocular infection and keratitis.

The Department, in co-operation with the professional bodies concerned, is producing information documents to help wearers of contact lenses and eye care practitioners.

Mental Health Review Tribunals

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how members of mental health review tribunals are appointed; what training they are given; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: The Mental Health Act 1983 provides for the appointment of legal, medical and lay members of mental health review tribunals (MHRTs) by the Lord Chancellor, after consultation with the Secretary of State for Health in respect of medical and lay members. Candidates are appointed on the basis of their professional background, qualifications and other relevant experience. Training includes courses provided by the Judicial Studies Board in tribunal practice generally; MHRT induction training and peer conferences provided under the auspices of regional MHRT chairmen; and observation of hearings. All training takes account of the detailed rules of procedure laid down in the MHRT Rules 1983, made under the 1983 Act by the Lord Chancellor.

Medicines

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the proposed new regulations to limit the number of medicines available to NHS patients in 10 new therapeutic categories will apply to hospital doctors.

Dr. Mawhinney: The regulations giving effect to the selected list scheme apply to prescriptions issued by hospital doctors for dispensing in community pharmacies, but not to prescriptions dispensed in hospital pharmacies.

Limited List Prescribing

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received from patient, consumer and medical groups in respect of the proposal to extend the NHS limited list regulations to 10 new therapeutic categories; and if she will place copies of her replies in the Library.

Dr. Mawhinney: We have received and replied to a number of such representations. It is for the parties concerned to decide whether such correspondence should be made public.

Census Data

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the current position on the statement of policies governing the confidentiality and security of personal data held within the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: The Registrar General for England and Wales and I attach the greatest importance to maintaining the confidentiality and security of personal data about members of the public held within the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys (OPCS). A comprehensive review of how this could best be achieved was completed in 1992. A draft statement of policies was produced, and a copy was placed in the Library. The Registrar General has sought the views of a range of outside bodies before formally adopting the statement. In particular the Data Protection Registrar has commented that it serves to confirm the ongoing OPCS commitment to maintain high standards in the handling of information about individuals. The consultation process is now complete, with the statement reciving general support. The statement as adopted has been published today, and a copy placed in the Library.

London Ambulance Service

Mr. Tracey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her response to the proposals made by the South West Thames regional health authority for improved accountability arrangements for the London Ambulance Service; and if she will make the proposals public.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: Following publication of the independent Inquiry into the operation of the computer aided dispatch system of the London ambulance service (LAS), I asked the South West Thames regional health authority chairman, Professor Marian Hicks, urgently to draw up proposals to strengthen lines of management accountability for the LAS. I have decided to accept the proposals she has put to me.

Under the new arrangements, the LAS board will be replaced by direct managerial accountability to the regional health authority. The LAS chief executive will be directly answerable to the regional health authority for all aspects of the performance and management of the LAS. Through the existing lines of national health service accountability the regional health authority will report to me. I shall expect to be kept in close touch with developments and have asked the authority to publish a report in the autumn on progress in implementing the recommendations of the independent inquiry into the LAS.

A special sub-committee of the regional health authority is to be established to assist in the oversight of LAS performance. The sub-committee will have available to it the expertise of a small group of external specialists who will be appointed to advise the LAS on matters such as information technology. These advisers will have direct access to the regional chairman in the event of their having any concerns they believe are not being addressed by the line management system.

The LAS will also be open to greater public scrutiny. Its performance will be regularly considered in the public meetings of the regional health authority and it will publish an annual report. Regular performance reports will also be made available to Members, community health councils and other interested public bodies.

I am satisfied that these arrangements will provide an effective framework for accounting to the public for the performance of the LAS. Details of the arrangements are being placed today in the Library.

Archives (Microfiche)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to place information regarding births, marriages and deaths on microfiche and make it available at archive houses; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: All but the more recent indexes held in the public search room of the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys are already available in microfiche form in many local libraries and record offices.

The Government White Paper, "Registration: proposals for change" (Cm 939) published in 1990, recommends that in England and Wales the civil registration records older than 75 years should be opened to public scrutiny. These records are held in hardcopy form and on microfilm. The Government proposed in the White Paper that the provision of a central record library should be offered as a contract to those who might wish to run it outside government, either as a non profit-making trust or a commercial concern. A decision on whether the microfilm should be converted to microfiche and/or other media would have to await the outcome of negotiations with interested bodies. Open public access to the information contained in these records requires legislative change which the Government will introduce when a suitable opportunity occurs.

Dentistry

Mr. Dover: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements are proposed for those who are unable to obtain a national health service dentistry service to be recompensed for the additional costs of treatment and travel involved in obtaining alternative dental treatment.

Dr. Mawhinney: There is no need for any patient to seek alternatives to national health service dentistry. Patients experiencing any difficulty in obtaining NHS dental treatment should contact their local family health services authority, which will be able to help.

Royal Marsden Hospital

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had with the Charity Commission over the refurbishment of offices at the Royal Marsden hospital; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: The Charity Commission has been in contact with my officials concerning the refurbishing of the reception area at the Royal Marsden hospital.

Carbon Monoxide Poisoning

Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many deaths from carbon monoxide poisoning in the home have occured in each year since 1980.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Veterinary Medicines Directorate

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the current membership and outline the constitution of the veterinary medicines directorate.

Mr. Soames: Membership of the Veterinary Medicines Directorate, together with its aims and objectives, is set out in the VMD annual report and accounts for 1991-92, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information he has concerning the current level of costs associated with submitting an application by a manufacturer for a licence from the veterinary medicines directorate for a product licence.

Mr. Soames: The level of costs associated with submitting an application for a veterinary medicine product licence will vary considerably, dependent on the target species, active ingredient, indications for use, and type of application. In some cases, the simplified licensing procedure introduced in 1990 may be appropriate. As a consequence, no information is held centrally on such costs. Ultimately, it is for the individual pharmaceutical company to decide what investment may be needed to meet the licensing requirements of safety, quality and efficacy, and whether that can be justified bearing in mind the likely return from the market.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what information he has concerning the number of applications for a veterinary medicine product licence which have been considered in total by the veterinary medicines directorate in connection with the implementation of the European directive on these matters; how many of those applications were accepted; how many were withdrawn; and how many were declined;

(2) what information he has concerning the number of veterinary medicinal products which were formerly available in the United Kingdom but for which manufacturers have not applied for a product licence from the veterinary medicines directorate either on the grounds of the cost of making such an application, or upon other grounds.

Mr. Soames: I assume my hon. Friend is referring to the EC wide review of pharmaceutical veterinary product licences issued before 1984, which is currently being undertaken in the United Kingdom in accordance with directive 81/851/EEC. At 2 March 1993, 2,731 products had been called for review. Of these, 504 reviewed licences have been issued, 506 applications are still under assessment, and 1,721 licences have been withdrawn or expired at companies request. The grounds for decisions either to apply for, or to withdraw, licences are a commercial matter for the companies concerned.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to ensure that the interests of the relevant industries and professions are fully represented among the membership of the veterinary medicines directorate.

Mr. Soames: The veterinary medicines directorate holds regular meetings with representatives of consumer organisations, the National Office of Animal Health, the British Veterinary Association, and other representative organisations and professional bodies to ensure that their views are fully represented.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the total cost of the veterinary medicines directorate in each year since its establishment; and what percentage of these costs have been raised by fees from industry in each of those years.

Mr. Soames: The veterinary medicines directorate (VMD) was established on 3 April 1989, and as a next steps agency of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on 2 April 1990. The total annual costs of the VMD, and the percentage raised by licence fees, have been as follows:

	£'000	Per cent. raised by licence fees
1989-90	2,300	65
1990-91	3,100	68
1991-92	3,700	65
1992-93[1]	3,800	63

Medicinal Products

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to ensure that British farmers and veterinary surgeons continue to have access to the full range of medicinal products which are available in the United Kingdom and in other member countries of the European Community.

Mr. Soames: Community law currently requires that no medicinal product may be marketed in a member state, unless there is a market authorisation issued in that member state. In the United Kingdom that means a United Kingdom product licence. Subject to that requirement, the licensing authority will continue to take advantage of any developments in the EC arrangements for the control of veterinary medicines, intended to make it easier for applicants to obtain licences to market products not previously available in the United Kingdom.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those veterinary medicinal products of which he is aware for which a licence has been given by the French authorities, but for which a licence has been either declined, or not sought in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Soames: I understand that the National Office of Animal Health (NOAH) has identified approximately 70 veterinary medicinal products available in other member states but not licensed in the United Kingdom. For reasons of commercial sensitivity, however, NOAH has felt unable to identify the individual products concerned so that the circumstances can be explored. I regret therefore that such a list cannot be compiled, although I remain willing to look into any specific examples of products licensed in one member state but not in the United Kingdom.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the progress which has been made since 1981 in implementing the European requirement for all veterinary medicinal products to be licensed.

Mr. Soames: It has been a requirement of United Kingdom law since 1972 that all veterinary medicinal products must be licensed before they can be marketed.

VMD

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from the National Office of Animal Health about alternative ways of meeting the costs of the veterinary medicines directorate.

Mr. Soames: I regularly receive representations from the National Office of Animal Health about alternative ways of meeting the licensing costs of the veterinary medicines directorate. The latest have been in response to a consultation letter on options for 1993-94 fee levels issued in December 1992. As with previous representations these are being given full and careful consideration. I hope to announce my decision shortly.

Mr. Bates: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what performance targets he has set for the veterinary medicines directorate in 1993-94; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The chief executive of the veterinary medicines directorate (VMD) has submitted his proposals to me and I have agreed that the VMD should be set the following performance targets for 1993-94:

—full cost recovery for the three business activities of licensing, policy work and residues monitoring;
—70 per cent. of new licence applications to be issued within 120 clock days; 95 per cent. within 200 days;
—an overall efficiency gain of 2 per cent.

These are challenging targets, given the increased volumes being forecast for the VMD's business. They will build on the improvements already made in the efficiency and quality of service provided by the directorate since its establishment as a next steps agency, and for which I commend the chief executive and his staff. In addition, I have agreed the VMD's corporate plan for 1993-94–1995-96, and copies are being placed in the Library of the House and the Public Information Office.

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Janner: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he has taken to recruit women, members of ethnic minorities and disabled people, respectively, in top grades of employment at his Department.

Mr. Curry: Recruits to the senior grades as to any grade in the civil service are selected on merit, on the basis of fair and open competition, unless one of the exceptions permitted under Civil Service Order in Council 1991 applies. Various steps have been taken by the civil service commissioners to aid recruitment from all sectors of the community including:

(a) extending links with institutions of higher education;
(b) equal opportunities training for those involved in selection;

and

(c) using validated selection procedures.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when his Department last conducted surveys of (a) ethnic origins and (b) the number of women among its employees; when it next plans to do so; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: The Department completed its survey of the ethnic origin of staff in 1987 and keeps this up to date with information on new staff and leavers. Some 96 per cent. of staff have volunteered information on their ethnic origin. The Department's personnel records include details of the number of men and women and there is, therefore, no need to undertake particular surveys on the number of women employed. The Department is fully committed to the programmes for action to achieve equality of opportunity in the civil service for people of ethnic minority origin and women.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many and what percentage of officers in each grade from 1 to 7 and overall in his Department are (a) women, (b) from ethnic minorities and (c) disabled people.

Mr. Curry: The information for MAFF and its executive agencies is as follows:

Grade equivalent	Women		From Ethnic Minorities		Registered Disabled People

Badger Setts

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the number of badger setts, by county, closed or otherwise, seriously interfered with by or under licence from his Department's officials in each month from October 1991.

Mr. Soames: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to him on Tuesday 30 March 1993.

Milk Development Council

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to create a milk development council; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: The Government will consider any proposals from the milk industry for the establishment of a development council. Ministers would decide whether to make an order establishing such a development council in accordance with the provisions of the Industrial Organisation and Development Act 1947. This requires them, among other things, to be satisfied that this is desired by a substantial number of persons engaged in the industry.

The Agriculture Bill would enable an agricultural development council to collect a levy through intermediaries. This provision is designed to facilitate the efficient operation of such a council. The industry may, therefore, wish to consider making proposals after the enactment of the Bill.

Dairy Crest

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to change the status of Dairy Crest to a private limited company; if he will allow it to have access to outside equity; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: Dairy Crest Ltd. is a wholly owned subsidiary of the England and Wales milk marketing board. The Agriculture Bill would enable the board to apply to Ministers for approval of formal proposals for the future ownership of its assets. The board currently intends that Dairy Crest should be established as an independent company listed on the stock exchange. This would enable it to raise equity capital.

Integrated Administration and Control System

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food who will have access to the information stored in the computer database which is to be set up under the integrated administration and control system; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: Access to the information held on the IACS computer database will be restricted to officials who need to have access. All officials with access to the information will be bound by the provisions of the Data Protection Act 1984. If external contractors were to be used, they would be bound by the normal rules of confidentiality.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will accept integrated administration and control system forms submitted by farmers where they have calculated their land size in acres rather than hectares; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: The explanatory booklet explains clearly that farmers are required to submit details of areas in hectares and not in acres. If a farmer nevertheless gives the figures in acres, we shall be able to accept the application only if we are satisfied that it meets the rules relating to genuine errors referred to in the explanatory booklet.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what funds he will make available to help farmers who incur costs when having to complete the integrated administration and control system forms; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: No funds are available for this purpose. The costs incurred in completing the IACS forms and supplying supporting information will, for most farmers, represent a small proportion of the payments for which they are applying. They are a normal expense of the farm business.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in what circumstances farmers will be allowed extensions to the deadline for completing their integrated administration and control system forms; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: The EC regulations do not include provision for any extensions to the deadline of 15 May for the receipt of IACS applications. The rules provide that, except in cases of force majeure, farmers whose applications are received after the deadline will lose 1 per cent. of the aid to which they would otherwise be entitled for each working day that the application is late. However, if the application is received 20 or more calendar days after the closing date, no aid will be payable under the affected schemes.

Central Science Laboratory

Dr Twinn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what performance targets he has set for the central science laboratory in 1993-94; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The efficiency of the agency will continue to be judged primarily through cost recovery. Additional performance measures relating to the objectives of the agency will also be used to measure operating efficiency and quality of service.

The financial targets for the central science laboratory for 1993-94 will be:

100 per cent. cost recovery of full costs;
an overall efficiency gain of 2·5 per cent;
a reduction of 5 per cent. in real term of representation unit costs for services;

The targets for delivery of services by the central science laboratory will be:

at least 90 per cent. of work completed to time and within budget; at least 95 per cent. of contracts delivered to the customer's satisfaction;

The central science laboratory will continue to implement during 1993-94 arrangements for the independent assessment of the quality of the scientific work and publications. The measures of performance for the agency are set out in the central science laboratory framework document.

Central Veterinary Laboratory

Mr. Bates: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what performance targets he has set for the central veterinary laboratory in 1993-94; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: The chief executive of the central veterinary laboratory has submitted his proposals to me and I have agreed that the laboratory should be set the following strategic performance target for 1993-94:

Financial Performance—full cost recovery for all CVL services
Efficiency—an overall efficiency gain of 2·5 per cent.
Service Delivery—80 per cent. of ROAME R & D milestones achieved Service Quality—achievement of a satisfactory report from a Visiting Group —achievement of laboratory accreditations of the Quality Control Unit

These are demanding targets which challenge the laboratory to build on its achievements to date. I commend the chief executive and his staff for the improvements they have already made and wish them well in their endeavours in 1993-94.

Pesticides Safety Division

Mr. Faber: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress has been made towards establishing the pesticides safety division as an executive agency; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I am pleased to confirm that pesticides safety division is to be established as an executive agency of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on 1 April 1993, when it will become the pesticides safety directorate.

I have set the directorate the following targets for 1993-94, relating to financial performance, efficiency and the delivery of pesticide approval services.

The financial and efficiency targets will be:

100 per cent. recovery of full costs; and an overall efficiency gain of 2 per cent.

The targets for delivery of pesticide approval services will be:

Type of approval	Applications completed	Maximum processing time (working days)
Technical secretariat stream
Normal	400	450
Administrative fast	250	20
Fast	370	125
Experimental permits	70	200
Off label (emergency)	150	60
Rapid	75	125
Upgrade	100	—
Committee stream
Sift	21	120
Active ingredient	15	250-290

For 1993-94, the targets for maximum processing time will apply to 75 per cent. of the applications received in the year. This percentage is planned to increase progressively in future years.

In addition, the scientific quality of the directorate's work on the evaluation of pesticides will be monitored by the chairman of the Advisory Committee on Pesticides.

A copy of the directorate's framework document is being placed in the Library of the House.

Food Science Laboratories

Mr. Faber: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress has been made in his review of the status of the laboratories dealing with food science.

Mr. Gummer: I have concluded that it would be right for the food science laboratory, Norwich and the Torry research station, Aberdeen to achieve agency status. The best and most efficient mechanism is to merge both laboratories with the existing central science laboratory agency with effect from 1 April 1994. I intend to proceed accordingly. There are no plans to move the laboratories at Norwich and Aberdeen from their present locations. Both will continue to support the food safety work of the Department.

Slaughterhouses

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he is able to report on the outcome of the independent review of slaughterhouses, and of the recent consultations on the Government's proposals to limit meat inspection charges; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: I am pleased to announce three measures to ensure that veterinary supervision of slaughterhouses is provided in a manner which will enable small slaughterhouses to meet proper hygiene requirements without placing unnecessary burdens on them.

I am determined that cost-effective, consistent and proportionate arrangements for veterinary supervision should be put in place so that public health is protected and the whole industry given the best chance to provide an efficient and competitive service.

There has been considerable concern about the cost of veterinary supervision which has been widely quoted at sums of £40 or more per hour. My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary (Commons) in my Department has been consulting closely with the British Veterinary Association about the fees being charged by veterinary surgeons. The House will be interested in the results of a survey of veterinary costs recently carried out by the Association. This survey attracted responses covering over 400 official veterinary surgeons working in more than 600 plants in over 200 local authority districts. The average hourly rate being charged was £25·70. This yardstick will ensure that industry and local authorities can more easily check that they are obtaining a cost-effective service.

Up to now, the arrangements for supervising hygiene in slaughterhouses have been carried out by local authorities. It is obviously important that they should provide this service at a reasonable cost. In small slaughterhouses in particular it is an appreciable component of the overheads. We issued proposals on these costs for consultation on 14 January. Although in most cases inspection services are being provided within reasonable limits, the Government are concerned to protect the interests of slaughterhouses where charges have been unnecessarily high. As a result we are introducing a strict upper limit of £40 for up to four livestock units and £6.30 per livestock unit thereafter. Where the cost of existing or prospective arrangements would exceed the limit, local authorities will have the option of renegotiating contracts with veterinary practitioners. They will no doubt find the British Veterinary Association survey useful in this.

The third measure I am announcing today will enable small slaughterhouses to make use of local large-animal practitioners to provide the veterinary supervision service. Already, the Government have issued guidance to enable large-animal practitioners to carry out ante-mortem inspection work. We will shortly issue additional guidance to help them carry out the full veterinary supervision of low throughput slaughterhouses. Most small abattoirs have at least one such veterinary practice within five miles. Slaughterhouses will be able to seek a service from practitioners who are willing to provide it, and this alternative ought to ensure cost-effective and competitive provision. Above all, a great deal of expensive waiting and travelling time will be avoided. In the rare event that a local authority is not prepared to sanction such an arrangement, there can be a direct appeal to the Minister.

The Government will shortly consult on proposals on monitoring hygiene standards in meat plants. The proposed monitoring system is intended to assist local authorities in ensuring that the level of veterinary supervision is proportionate to the risk arising at the individual premises, so that plants operating to high standards can benefit from lower levels of supervision.

I have also received the report I commissioned from two independent experts, Dr. Johnston and Mr. Spurr, on hygiene and structural standards in slaughterhouses. This has been placed in the Library and I commend it to the House. The authors concluded that overall the improvements being required by the state veterinary service do not go beyond what is necessary to rectify structure-related hygiene problems. I shall continue to ensure that we do not ask anything more of the industry than is essential to achieve this end. I shall also seek to carry forward the other recommendations of the Johnston/Spurr report.

Ministers are taking the closest possible personal interest in the way these regulations are enforced. We are very conscious of the importance of slaughterhouses to the local economy of the countryside. As I have made clear on many occasions, there is no question of any slaughterhouse being refused a licence under the new regulations without a personal decision by myself or my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and Wales.

We recognise that the process of implementing these regulations has been a difficult one for the industry and enforcement authorities. In applying them, we will continue to seek practical solutions to problems and to avoid placing unnecessary burdens on businesses. In this context as in all areas of food law, the Government are committed to ensuring that the requirements imposed by the legislation are proportionate to the risk involved. We propose where necessary to continue discussions between slaughterhouse operators, local authorities, veterinary surgeons and meat inspectors with a view to achieving high standards and harmonious working relationships during the transition to the proposed national meat hygiene service.

Farmers (Suicides)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from Wales on the levels of suicides among farmers and their families.

Mr. David Hunt: I have been asked to reply. None.

EMPLOYMENT

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many and what percentage of officers in each grade from 1 to 7 and overall in her Department are (a) women, (b) from ethnic minorities and (c) disabled people.

Mr. McLoughlin: The numbers and percentages of women and ethnic minority officers in grades 1 to 7 and overall in the Department at 1 April 1992 are set out in the tables. Information on disabled people cannot be provided in the form requested, but overall numbers were 2,066 registered disabled people, or 3·4 per cent., at 1 July 1992.

Women in the Employment Department Group (Grades 1 to 7) at 1 April 1992

Grade 2	1	20·0
Grade 3	2	7·1
Grade 4	0	0
Grade 5	22	15·6
Grade 6	31	13·4
Grade 7	165	15·6

The Department employed 41,555 women who comprised 66·5 per cent. of the total staff.

Table 2
Ethnic minority staff in the Employment Department Group (Grades 1 to 7) at 1 April 1992

The Department employed 3,607 staff from the ethnic minorities who comprised 6·4 per cent. of respondents to the ethnic origin survey.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps she has taken to recruit women, members of ethnic minorities and disabled people, respectively, in top grades of employment at her Department.

Mr. McLoughlin: Recruits to the senior grades, as to any grade in the civil service, are selected on merit on the basis of fair and open competition, unless one of the exceptions permitted under the Civil Service Order in Council 1991 applies. Various steps have been taken by the Civil Service Commissioners to aid recruitment from all sectors of the community including:

extending links with institutions of higher education;
equal opportunities training for those involved in selection;
using validated selection procedures.

Additionally, the Department:

has developed and run pre-recruitment training for ethnic minority candidates to its Management Trainee Scheme; was one of the first employers to join the Opportunity 2000 campaign; has signed up to the 15 per cent. benchmark figure for the proportion of women holding posts in the Senior Open Structure by 2000.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when her Department last conducted surveys of (a) ethnic origins and (b) the number of women among its employees; when it next plans to do so; and whether she will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: The survey of the ethnic origin of staff which took place in 1986 is continually updated to take account of those entering and leaving the Department. No survey for women is needed as the gender of employees is identified in staff records.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the average number of unemployed in each travel-to-work area in Gloucestershire in each year since 1979; and what percentage of the work force this represented.

Mr. McLoughlin: The information requested is available from 1983 and can be obtained from the NOMIS database in the Library.

Travel-to-work-areas do not correspond exactly to county boundaries. Gloucestershire is made up of the TTWAs of Gloucester, Stroud, Cirencester plus parts of Cheltenham, Evesham, Cinderford and Ross-on-Wye, Malvern and Ledbury and Swindon.

Miners' Redundancy Payments

Dr. Liam Fox: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when she plans to start the £75 million package of additional assistance for redundant miners announced in October 1992.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: Contingency plans drawn up by TECs for additional assistance for redundant mineworkers and others will be implemented if we reach a position where two thirds of the work force employed at the pit in October 1992 have left.

This arrangement will apply to collieries on which British Coal is already consulting about closure and to collieries announced as being put on a care and maintenance basis. This will also apply to two collieries which are remaining open, but making substantial redundancies for which contingency plans were originally drawn up and to the colliery which will be put under development.

European Regional Development Fund

Mr. Moss: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what public expenditure cover will be made available in 1993-94 for European regional development fund projects relating to her responsibilities.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: This Department will be providing public expenditure cover in 1993-94 for applications for European regional development fund support in respect of the Department's responsibilities. The amount of cover necessary is estimated to be £4 million in 1993-94.

Restart

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment for each region and for Great Britain as a whole how many unemployed people were referred to Restart courses by Employment Service counsellors (a) between April 1991 and March 1992 and (b) from April 1992 to the latest available date, showing for each period how many of them were unemployed for over two years, how many attended and completed the course, what were the outcomes of the participants and how many had benefit penalties imposed for not attending or failing to complete their attendance at the Restart course; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin [pursuant to his answer, 12 March 1993, Official Report, col 747-48]: The chief executive has written further to the hon. Member.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Ms Clare Short, dated March 1993:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State has asked me to write to you direct to respond to your Parliamentary Question to her about Restart Courses. These are matters which fall within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

Unfortunately, due to an administrative error, our reply of 12 March did not include the figures about Restart courses. This reply now contains the tables; please accept my apologies for any inconvenience caused.

As you will know from our previous correspondence, Restart Courses are short courses aimed at helping people who are having the most difficulty returning to work. They are not an alternative to regular job search or other employment or training programmes. Essentially they provide people with the opportunity to explore all the options open to them and give them confidence to take the next step back to work.

Since 1990, people who have been unemployed for 2 years or more who refuse or fail to take up a place on an Employment Department employment or training programme at their Restart interview, are asked to attend a Restart Course.

As your question has raised a number of specific points, I am setting out the information you have asked for in the four tables attached. Tables 1 and 2 deal with all Restart Course attenders, and tables 3 and 4 refer to those covered by the requirement to attend. As explained in previous replies, we collect at a Regional level the number of people who are referred to the course who are also unemployed for 2 years or more. We have not, however, felt it necessary to keep similar figures for all those referred. The Benefits Agency (BA) make the decision on whether an individual's benefit should be reduced for failure to attend or complete the course. Their figures are compiled by BA Districts which have different boundaries to our own Regions. To avoid confusion, I have given the national figure only.

I hope that this is helpful.

As decided by the Administration Committee of the House of Commons, Chief Executive replies to written Parliamentary Questions will now be published in the Official Report. I will also place a copy of this letter in the Library of the House.

Health and Safety

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if she will list the successful prosecutions undertaken at the Crown court for breaches of the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974 during 1992 and in 1993 to the most recent practicable date together with the sentences imposed.

Mr. McLoughlin [pursuant to his reply, 5 February 1993]: I regret that in my original reply the table of prosecutions was incomplete. The revised table is as follows:

Hepatitis B

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total cost of recall for hepatitis B screening of patients treated by the surgeon in Wrexham, both at his current and previous hospitals of employment.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The estimated cost to date of screening these patients is of the order of £27,000.

Welsh Development Agency

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of Welsh Development Agency factory floorspace is currently not in productive use.

Mr. David Hunt: At the end of February 1993, 15·7 per cent. of the agency's property portfolio was vacant and available for letting.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give the percentage of unused lettable floorspace in Welsh Development Agency factories for every year since 1986.

Mr. David Hunt: This information is published in the Welsh Office departmental reports Cmnd 1916 and 2215, copies of which are in the Library of the House.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what will be the changes in real terms of the Welsh Development Agency financial allocations for the next year; and what projects will be undertaken to provide work due to the closures of coal mines.

Mr. David Hunt: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Carmarthen (Mr. Williams) on 11 March 1993, Official Report, column 653.

Last week I announced that a further £660,000 would be made available in addition to the £43 million which I announced last October to support an integrated programme of regeneration in the areas affected by the coal review.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish details of the land reclamation schemes undertaken by the Welsh Development Agency during 1991-92.

Mr. David Hunt: Details of land reclamation schemes to be undertaken in 1991-92 were published by the Welsh Development Agency in the document "Landscape Wales". The agency's report and accounts for 1991-92 described the progress made.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a table of capital expenditure allocated for the Welsh Development Agency for each year since 1985.

Mr. David Hunt: The information is set out in he following table:

	Capital expenditure cash (£ million)
1985-86	49·9
1986-87	45·5
1987-88	63·1
1988-89	74·1

Child Care

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what plans he has to provide extra funds for the new unitary authorities taking on extra professionals to deal with child care when responsibility is transferred from the police and health;

(2) what plans he has to lessen the management costs of independent providers of child care who will cover several of the new unitary authority areas;

(3) whether the new unitary authorities will buy in the full range of child protection services;

(4) how the liaison work between police, health and the new unitary authorities in Gwent will operate in relation to area child protection committees.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The full legislative requirements concerning child protection currently met by the social services departments of county councils will become the responsibility of the new unitary authorities. How they will carry out these functions, including the extent to which they secure services from other providers, will be for the new authorities to determine in the light of their own needs and resources.

It will be for the new unitary authorities to decide on what liaison arrangements they should have with other agencies including the police, health authorities and the voluntary sector.

Disability

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many disabled people in Wales are currently living in (a) the community, (b) mental illness hospitals and units and (c) mental handicap hospitals and units.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Information held centrally does not cover all categories of disability. The latest available data held centrally, on the means of accommodation of people on local authority registers of mentally handicapped individuals, are shown in the table:

Number of persons on register at 31 March 1991

Place of residence	Number
In the community	7,349
In health service accommodation (including hospitals and hostels)	1,397
In other accommodation (including local authority, private and voluntary residential accommodation)	1,640
Total	10,386

Down's Syndrome

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many children have been born in (a) Clwyd and (b) Wales, with Down's syndrome in each year since 1983.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The number of notifications of children born with Down's syndrome to residents of Clwyd and Wales in each year since 1983 are shown in the table:

	Clwyd	Wales
1983	4	20

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the number of Down's syndrome sufferers in permanent state care in Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information requested is not held centrally.

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what screening measures are available to detect Down's syndrome in the early stages of foetal development; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The screening measures available to pregnant women are determined by the local health authority. Authorities are guided by the targets of the "Protocol for Investment in Health Gain: Maternal and Early Child Health", which was issued in August 1991 by the Welsh Health Planning Forum, in particular that by 1995 all pregnant women at high risk should be identified and offered an opportunity for pre-natal testing.

A national Down's syndrome screening group is currently looking at ways of setting guidelines for a screening programme.

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what funds the Welsh Office has made available in each year since 1983 to help with the care of Down's syndrome sufferers in Wales;

(2) what provision is made for Down's syndrome sufferers and their families in Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Under the mental handicap strategy earmarked special funds have been allocated, annually to counties to support the development of a comprehensive range of new services.

While Down's syndrome has been indentified as the cause of mental handicap in approximately 26·5 per cent. of those affected, funds are not indentified specifically for individuals with this condition.

The following table gives details of strategy allocations to date.

Welsh Office funds, for mental handicap strategy

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when his Department last conducted surveys of (a) ethnic origins and (b) the number of women among its employees; when it next plans to do so; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: There has never been a need to undertake a survey of female staff in my Department as the sex of employees is evident from staff records.

A survey of the ethnic origin of staff in my Department was carried out in May 1988. There is no need for another survey since the ethnic origin of all the entrants and leavers has been monitored since that time.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many and what percentage of officers in each grade from one to seven and overall in his Department are (a) women, (b) from ethnic minorities and (c) disabled people.

Mr. David Hunt: The details, based on staff in post figures at 1 July 1992, are given in the following tables.

Women

3 Includes Agency and industrial staff

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he has taken to recruit women, members of ethnic minorities and disabled people, respectively, in top grades of employment at his Department.

Mr. David Hunt: Most recruitment into senior grades in my Department is undertaken by the Recruitment and Assessment Services Agency acting on behalf of the civil service commissioners. Recruits to senior grades are selected on merit on the basis of fair and open competition, unless one of the exceptions permitted under the civil service Order in Council 1991 applies. The commissioners have taken various steps to aid recruitment from all sectors of the community including extending links with higher education establishments to attract a wider range of applicants and using validated selection procedures. They also encourage equal opportunities training for those involved in selection.

Heads of the Valleys (Unitary Authority)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answers of 16 March to the hon. Member for Merthyr Tydfil and Rhymney (Mr. Rowlands), Official Report, columns 186-87, how many and what proportion of the responses to which he refers were in favour of a unitary authority for the Heads of the Valleys; and if he will make copies of all responses received available in public libraries in Cardiff, Blaenau Gwent, Merthyr Tydfil, Rymney, Darran Valley and New Tredegar.

Mr. David Hunt: Following my statement on 3 March 1992 I received 252 written representations about possible unitary authority boundaries in the valleys. Of these, one referred to the possibility of a heads of the valley authority. This proposal emerged primarily from my consideration of the other conflicting views I had received and my discussion of these with interested parties. Copies of the responses received to the earlier consultations are available for inspection in the Libraries of both Houses of Parliament and, upon request, at the Welsh Office in Cardiff.

Disability

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much additional funding has been made available to local authorities in Wales in real terms each year since the coming into force of the Disabled Person Act 1986 to enable them to carry out its provisions.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The annual local authority revenue and capital settlements cover all local authority expenditure. It is for individual authorities to decide how to apportion those resources between and within services in accordance with their statutory obligations, including those arising under this Act, and their own priorities.

Dental Care

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was (a) the number of general dental practitioners and (b) the number of general dental practitioners per 1,000 of the population in each Welsh health authority area since 1986.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information requested is given in the following tables:

Estimates of population are provisional for 1991 and not yet available for 1992.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many courses of dental treatment under the national health service were undertaken in each Welsh health authority area per 1,000 of the population in each year since 1986.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information is not readily available and I will write to the hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

Employment Projects

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many unemployed people have taken part in the voluntary projects programme in Wales each year since 1986-87.

Mr. David Hunt: The voluntary projects programme (VPP) ceased in 1988 when it was subsumed by employment training.

Details of the number of participants are available only for 1987-88 when 11,000 participated in the scheme on 24 projects.

Welsh Language

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of school children in each local authority area in Wales does not receive Welsh language lessons.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The percentages of pupils who are not taught Welsh in maintained primary and secondary schools are given in the following tables.

Domestic Violence

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will make it his policy to develop a national policy for the provision of refuges and support services to women and children who are the victims of domestic violence.

Mr. Donald Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of whether the number of women's refuges in Wales is sufficient for the demand; and if he will consider further funding.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Government are already supporting such provision and services. In 1992-93 the Welsh Office provided over £235,000 to Welsh Women's Aid and over £438,000 for projects in individual refuges and advice centres.

Mr. Donald Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many refuges for women fleeing from domestic violence are available in Wales; and what is their total capacity.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: This information is not held centrally.

Foreign Language Teaching

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many primary schools offer a language, other than English and Wales to their pupils and to what extent the numbers have varied over the last 10 years.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Information on the number of primary schools offering a language other than English and Welsh to their pupils is not collected centrally.

Sealand Estate

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will include the Sealand estate, Deeside, in the estate partnership initiative.

Mr. David Hunt: I shall give careful consideration to all applications I receive by 1 June for support under this programme during the coming financial year. Estate Partnership is designed to address problems in the local authority stock.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will visit the Sealand estate, Deeside.

Mr. David Hunt: I have no present plans to do so.

University Colleges

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what response he has made to the proposals set out in the report, "The case for University Colleges," prepared by the Standing Conference of Principals, a copy of which has been sent to him.

Sir Wyn Roberts: I have received a copy of the report from the Standing Conference of Principals. I will be considering with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education how to respond to the report.

Stoneleigh Food Fair

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what support has been provided by his Department to Welsh food producers to exhibit their produce at the Stoneleigh food fair on 31 March.

Mr. David Hunt: Welsh Food Promotions Ltd., a company established on my initiative and partly funded by the Welsh Development Agency, the Development Board for Rural Wales and the Wales tourist board, will be at Stoneleigh in support of individual Welsh food producers.

Class Sizes

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will issue advice to schools on best practice in relation to class size in primary and secondary schools.

Sir Wyn Roberts: This is a matter for determination by school governors and head teachers in the light of local circumstances.

Welsh Centre for International Affairs

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he last paid a visit to the Welsh centre for international affairs in Cardiff; and what future plans he has to make a visit.

Mr. David Hunt: Although I have met the director of the Welsh Centre for International Affairs twice, I have not visited the centre and have no present plans to do so.

Public Bodies

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list all the appointed bodies within Wales performing delegated Government functions.

Mr. David Hunt: Executive, advisory and NHS bodies and tribunals in Wales all have roles in the process of government and therefore to a greater or lesser extent have some functions of government delegated to them. These bodies are set out in "Public Bodies 1992" a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

I also refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Bridgend (Mr. Griffiths) on 23 March 1993 at column 549-50 listing the current and complete list of public bodies to which I make appointments.

Brussels

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he next proposes to visit Brussels.

Mr. David Hunt: Friday.

Civil Servants

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list by Department the numbers of civil servants employed in Swansea.

Mr. David Hunt: The number of civil servants currently employed by my Department in Swansea is 10. Information on the number of staff in other Government Departments and agencies in particular locations in Wales is not held by my Department, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list by Department and location the numbers of civil service jobs which have been relocated to or created in South Wales since 1979.

Mr. David Hunt: The information requested is not held by my Department.

Key Stage 3 Tests

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received on the difficulties of informing parents of the assessment of their children at key stage 3 of the national curriculum before the end of the summer term.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Formal representations about this year's key stage 3 reporting arrangements have not been received. My officials have, however, established a small working group comprising representatives of the Welsh Joint Education Committee, local education authorities and the School Examinations and Assessment Council to develop the most efficient method of providing schools in Wales with the national curriculum assessment results to be used for reporting purposes.

Hill Livestock Farmers

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to bring forward measures to secure that hill livestock producers do not suffer any penalty for failing to meet the threshold of yearling ewes per flock within the current calendar year.

Mr. David Hunt: The hill livestock compensatory allowances scheme rules have always required a reasonable element of shearlings in flocks qualifying for the highest rate of allowance. Where this rule is breached without good reason we shall continue to impose penalties.

European Commission

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 23 March, Official Report, column 549, how many of those who have completed their secondment to the European Commission are still employed by his Department.

Mr. David Hunt: All of them.

Badger Setts

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the number of badger setts, by county, closed or otherwise, seriously interfered with by or under licence from his Department's officials in each month from October 1991.

Mr. David Hunt: The information requested is as follows:

Month	Number of setts	County
November 1991	2	Gwynedd
March 1992	1	Dyfed
May 1992	1	Powys
June 1992	1	Gwynedd
July 1992	3	Gwent, Clwyd and Powys
September 1992	2	Powys and Clwyd
October 1992	2	Dyfed and Powys

Month	Number of setts	County
November 1992	2	Dyfed and Powys
December 1992	1	Powys
January 1993	2	Gwynedd and Powys
March 1993	2	Clwyd and Gwent

Farming Friends Scheme

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make funds available for a farming friends scheme in Wales to help farmers with psychological and social problems; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: I have no plans to do so, but a reduction in these problems will be an important health gain target for health authorities.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Housing Associations

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many dwellings have been completed by the housing associations in Northern Ireland in each year since 1 April 1982 to 31 March 1992.

Mr. Atkins: The number of dwellings completed by registered housing associations is as follows:

Year	Newbuild	Rehabilitation	Total
1982-83	557	243	800
1983-84	576	244	820
1984-85	646	368	1,014

1989-90	563	74	637
1990-91	533	249	782
1991-92	838	94	932

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many tenants allocated houses with the housing associations come from the Housing Executive waiting list; and, of these, how many were on the priority waiting list and non-priority waiting list.

Mr. Atkins: This information is not held in the format requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the names of the registered housing associations in Northern Ireland; what was the date of registration of each association; and what are the numbers of staff currently employed by each association in respect of (i) management, (ii) administration/clerical, (iii) development, (iv) housing and (v) management/ maintenance.

Mr. Atkins: The names and registration dates of each registered housing association, are set out in the table. Information on staffing in the form requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish the selection schemes of each registered housing association; and if he will list the reports produced by registered housing associations describing and measuring the need which they are seeking to address.

Mr. Atkins: Copies of the selection scheme approved by the Department of the Environment (NI) for each association have been placed in the Library.

The tenants guarantee, introduced in December 1992, requires associations to make available from 1 April 1993 information on the allocation of accommodation, application procedures for tenancies and policies and procedures for deciding on priority between applicants. Associations will also be required to prepare annual summaries of their letting activities which will include a report on the number and types of lettings to different types of applicant. These summaries will be made available to inquirers.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the budgetary allocation to housing associations in each year since 1 April 1982 to 31 March 1992; and how much of the allocation in each year has been devoted to new build.

Mr. Atkins: Total allocation to housing associations, including the Northern Ireland Co-ownership Housing Association, were:

The new-build element of housing association expenditure, excluding NICHA, in 1990-91 and 1991-92 was £21·9 million and £28·3 million respectively. Information on capital funding to housing associations for previous years is not available on a basis which distinguishes new build from other types of expenditure.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what guidelines have been issued to housing associations for the selection of tenants.

Mr. Atkins: In the circular issued to all registered housing associations on 24 July 1979 the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland advised associations of the guidelines to be followed in tenant selection. A copy of the circular has been placed in the Library. The guidelines are currently under review.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the numbers and types of dwellings each housing association has constructed under the terms of the Housing (Northern Ireland) Order 1976 during each financial year since 1976-77.

Mr. Atkins: A copy of the information requested has been placed in the Library.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the current level of applications on the waiting list of each registered housing association; and how many are on priority lists A and B, respectively.

Mr. Atkins: This information is collected annually by the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland and the position at 31 March 1992 was as follows:

Note: A substantial number of special needs schemes are managed by voluntary agencies on behalf of the associations marked [1] and information on the waiting lists held by those agencies is not available.

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the role of (a) the Housing Executive, in relation to individual housing associations and the Northern Ireland Federation of Housing Associations and (b) the Northern Ireland Federation of Housing Associations.

Mr. Atkins: The Housing Executive's main role in relation to housing associations is the assessment of overall housing need and confirmation of need for each proposed housing association scheme. In its enabling role the executive may assist in the development plans of housing associations by the transfer of land and property.

The executive works closely with the Northern Ireland Federation of Housing Associations to produce the housing association element of the housing development strategy, which is submitted annually to the Department of the Environment (NI) to support the bid for housing investment in Northern Ireland. I understand that the executive also meets regularly at board level with the federation to discuss matters of mutual interest.

The role of the Northern Ireland Federation is to promote, establish, encourage and assist the formation and the conduct and activities of housing associations in Northern Ireland; to make representations and negotiate on behalf of the federation, housing associations, and other bodies with regard to housing policy and administration; to ensure that maximum co-operation and efficiency is attained among housing associations in Northern Ireland and to ensure a close and harmonious liaison and relationship with the National Federation of Housing Associations and other bodies involved in housing activity.

Homelessness

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps have been taken to ensure that the housing associations assist the Housing Executive in meetings its duties to the homeless under the Housing (Northern Ireland) Order 1988.

Mr. Atkins: Registered associations are required to give priority on their waiting lists to applicants who qualify for group A status under the executive's selection scheme. This includes applicants who are accepted as homeless by the Housing Executive.

The Department regularly monitors the management of each assocation's day-to-day affairs, including the operation of their selection schemes to ensure that tenancies are allocated in accordance with approved schemes.

Homelessness

Mr. McGrady: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many units of temporary accommodation and move on accommodation have been provided by housing associations for homeless people since 1990; and how many are in the Housing Association Development Programme.

Mr. Atkins: In addition to temporary housing provided for special needs groups such as ex-offenders, women and children at risk, registered housing associations in Northern Ireland have provided 110 units of temporary accommodation for homeless people since 1 January 1990.

The 1993-94 to 1995-96 development programme includes proposals to provide 135 bed spaces for people who may require temporary accommodation.

Housing associations do not provide accommodation designated specifically for allocation to people "moving on" from temporary accommodation.

Nephrops

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when a decision was made to exempt the one net rule for nephrops trawlers; in which fishing areas this exemption will apply; whether the Northern Ireland fleet fish for nephrops in these areas; what consultation was undertaken with the Northern Ireland fishing industry prior to the decision; and if he will make a statement about the implications of this decision for the Northern Ireland fishing industry.

Mr. Hanley: The decision to exempt the one rule for nephrops trawlers was made on 5 March; it applies in areas IV, North sea, and VI, west Scotland, north of latitude 56°N. Any fishing by Northern Ireland vessels for nephrops in these areas is minimal and there was no consultation with the Northern Ireland industry prior to the decision, which has little or no direct impact on the Northern Ireland fishing industry.

Electricity Supply

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will require the regulator and Northern Ireland Electricity to obtain an independent cost/benefit study for Northern Ireland of all alternative power sources prior to awarding future power purchase agreements; and if he will require the most economic supply identified taking account of economic, social and environmental issues as well as security of supply to be purchased by Northern Ireland Electricity.

Mr. Atkins: The term under which NIE will award future power purchase agreements are governed by its licence which contains an economic purchasing obligation. In entering into any such agreement NIE will have to satisfy the Director General of Electricity Supply for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Stott: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what studies his Department has made of the impact on domestic electricity prices of the Scottish-Northern Ireland interconnector becoming operational; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: An economic evaluation of generating options was commissioned by the Department and this showed interconnection with Scotland to be the most attractive option available for meeting the need for new capacity in the late 1990s.

Electricity Prices

Mr. Stott: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what studies his Department has made of the price differences between domestic electricity prices in Northern Ireland and in the rest of the United Kingdom; what assessment has been made of the effect the increases in value-added tax on fuel will have on the average home fuel bills; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: Domestic electricity tariffs in 1992-93 are broadly comparable to those in the rest of the United Kingdom.

It is estimated that the extension of VAT to domestic fuel and power will add about £1·20 in 1994-95 and £2·70 in 1995-96 to households' average weekly fuel bills in Northern Ireland, at 1991 prices. This estimate takes no account of the effects of any energy-saving measures by householders.

International Fund for Ireland

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish details of financial assistance provided by the International Fund for Ireland in each of the last four years to date for (a) construction of new hotels and (b) refurbishment of existing hotels, together with details of the purpose for which each qualifying hotel project was assisted.

Mr. Mates: The International Fund for Ireland is administered by an independent board appointed by the United Kingdom and Irish Governments. All questions pertaining to the disbursement of funds are a matter for the board and accordingly I have arranged to pass the hon. Gentleman's question to the chairman for reply.

Employees (Religious Affiliation)

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what is the annual cost of monitoring the religious affiliation of the employees of each department of the Northern Ireland civil service;

(2) what is the annual cost of monitoring the religious affiliation of the employees of the Industrial Development Board.

Mr. Atkins: Monitoring of religious affiliation of the employees of the Northern Ireland Departments and the Industrial Development Board is undertaken centrally by the Northern Ireland civil service equal opportunities unit located in the Department of Finance and Personnel. I would therefore refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave him on 19 March 1993, Official Report, Volume 221, column 150.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the annual cost of monitoring the religious affiliation of the employees of each district council in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Atkins: This information is not held centrally. It is a matter for each district council in Northern Ireland to monitor the religious composition of its work force in accordance with section 27 of the Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Act 1989.

The Local Government Staff Commission for Northern Ireland also monitors the fair employment practices of district councils under section 35 of the Local Government (Miscellaneous Provisions) (Northern Ireland) Order 1992, but does not identify separately expenditure on specific activities on this type, which would be negligible.

Health Boards (Staff Bonuses)

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give details of the nature and purpose of performance bonuses paid to staff of each health board within the past 12 months.

Mr. Hanley: Incentive bonus payments are made to certain ancillary and general staff employed by health and social services boards in return for increased productivity. In each instance the bonus is the result of the application of a measured day work scheme. Such a scheme is where a given number of staff agree, on a group basis, to work to a predetermined incentive performance level in carrying out their duties at specific standards. In return they are paid a fixed percentage bonus which is calculated on the staff group basis. All schemes must be self-financing.

A performance-related pay scheme is in operation for general managers, unit general managers, senior managers and senior nurse managers. This is a scheme for relating rewards to quantifiable achievement rather than to subjective judgments of personal qualities. This scheme enables management to reward staff who have attained a high level of achievement against individual performance review targets set on an annual basis.

ENVIRONMENT

Waste Management

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how he expects expenditure on waste management and contaminated land to vary in real terms over the next three years.

Mr. Maclean: My Department does not hold general information on past trends or future plans for expenditure of this sort.

Landfill Gas

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much less will be spent in real terms in the present estimates compared with the 1992 estimates on the problem of landfill gas.

Mr. Maclean: Information is not held in the form requested. However, local authorities are currently expected to spend some £12·8 million in the financial year 1992-93 on schemes wholly or partly to deal with gas from former landfills and which the Government are supporting with supplementary credit approvals. A total of £12 million has been set aside for 1993-94 for supplementary credit approvals covering landfill gas and other types of contaminated land.

Waste Recycling

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much his Department will spend on waste recycling in the current year and each of the next two years in real terms.

Mr. Maclean: The resources allocated for waste recycling in 1992-93 and the amounts currently proposed for 1993-94 and 1994-95 within the expenditure plans described in the Department's 1993 annual report (Cm 2207), including supplementary credit approvals to support local authorities' capital expenditure on waste recycling projects, are as follows:

[2] Grants offered.
[3] Current plans, not yet confirmed.
[4] Forecast expenditure.
[5] Deflated to 1992-93 prices.
[6] Not yet known.

The Department of Trade and Industry also has expenditure on this subject.

Toxic Waste (Broadcast)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place in the Library a copy of a transcript of his interview on the import of toxic waste broadcast on Radio Four's "World At One" on 23 March.

Mr. Howard: I have arranged for a copy of the transcript of this interview to be placed in the Library.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what report he has received from the chairman of the Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee following the recent meeting to discuss its 20-year review of nuclear waste policy.

Mr. Maclean: None. The meeting referred to was a first step in the review by the Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee which is to look at radioactive waste disposal issues likely to arise over the next 20 years.

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when his Department last conducted surveys of (a) ethnic origins and (b) the number of women among its employees; when it next plans to do so; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: The Department first undertook a voluntary survey of the ethnic origins of staff in 1987. This has been supplemented by further surveys and a continuous survey of job applicants. The most recent re-survey of the remaining staff for whom there is no ethnic record was completed earlier this month.

The Department analyses data on the number of women in the Department on a quarterly basis.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many and what percentage of officers in each grade from 1 to 7 and overall in his Department are (a) women, (b) from ethnic minorities and (c) disabled people.

Mr. Howard: The numbers and percentages of women at grades 1 to 7 and overall in the Department are:

Grade	Female	Percentage
2	3	43
3	5	15
5	18	13
6	24	18
Overall	2,741	41

There are no staff from ethnic minorities in grades 1 to 4. The number and percentage of ethnic minority staff at grade 5 is 2 (1·4 per cent. of grade), at grade 6 there is 1 (0·3 per cent.) and at grade 7 there are 9 (1·1 per cent.) Overall, 504 (7·5 per cent.) of the Department's staff are from ethnic minorities.

There are no disabled staff in grades 1 to 6. The Department employs three grade 7s who are known to be disabled but who are not registered, representing 0·4 per cent. of the grade. Overall, the Department employs 98 (1·5 per cent.) disabled staff (registered and non-registered).

Housing Grants

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those organisations which have received grants under section 429A of the Housing Act 1985; as amended, in 1992-93 showing in such cases the value of the grant and the purpose for which it was made.

Mr. Baldry: In the financial year 1992-93, my Department approved 117 grants totalling £7,411,393 under section 429A of the Housing Act 1985 (as amended by section 16 of the Housing and Planning Act 1986). These grants were issued for a variety of purposes.

Promotion and feasibility grants

Grants were made to consultancies, housing associations and secondary co-operatives to enable them to promote to local authority tenants the full range of housing management and tenure options available to them. Further grant is made available, on an estate-specific basis, to enable these organisations to undertake a feasibility study leading to a report outlining future options for the management of the estate.

Research Grants

Small research grants are occasionally made available to provide feedback and data on aspects of grant policy which would be difficult or impossible to determine by other methods. In 1992-93, two grants were made available, to investigate the role of training in the development of TMOs (Glasgow university) and to ascertain the impact of the two-year recommendation 9 programme (LSE).

Studentships and Bursaries

Grants are made annually, via the Economic and Social Research Council, to provide resources to support students following university courses leading to the Institute of Housing's professional qualifications. From 1 January 1993 bursaries have been available to assist tenants following the Institute of Housing's new national certificate in tenant participation (NCTP). These discretionary bursaries are paid via the tenant participation advisory service (TPAS).

Tenants' Choice Legislation

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answers of 15 March, Official Report, columns 76 to 78, if the answer covers transfers to tenants' management boards with the estates remaining in the ownership of the local council; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: Grants offered in 1992-93 under section 429A of the Housing Act 1985, as amended, include grants paid to tenants' organisations for the purpose of developing tenant management organisations (TMOs): either estate management boards (EMBs) or tenant management co-operatives (TMCs).

Both kinds of TMO are able to take on the management of their housing through a management agreement negotiated with the local authority under the provisions of section 27 of the Housing Act 1985, as amended, though ownership of the houses remains with the local authority. Since April 1990, when grants were first made available directly to tenants' organisations, 66 TMOs have been established, with a further 50 in their development phase.

The Government now propose, through powers which will be taken in the Housing and Urban Development Bill, to introduce a new right to manage for local authority tenants. Providing they are able to meet certain criteria, tenants' organisations will be able to serve on the local authority a notice of their intention to exercise the right to manage. Regulations will provide a framework for the procedures which must be followed by tenants' organisations and local authorities in circumstances where the right to manage is exercised. If these are successfully carried through, the local authority will be required to enter into a management agreement—the form of which will be specified by the Secretary of State—with the TMO. The Government's recent consultation paper "Tenant Involvement and the Right to Manage" (DOE/Welsh Office 1992) sets out in more detail the policy background and procedural arrangements for this important new right.

Market Testing

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which professional services within his Department have been subjected to market testing within the last 12 months and with what result; and which will be subjected to market testing within the next 12 months.

Mr. Howard: Within the last 12 months market testing within the Department, apart from the Property Services Agency, has been commenced in the following specialist services which are currently provided in-house for the Department's own benefit:

Training Services
Accommodation Facilities Management

Design, Drawing and Print Services
Registry Services
Statistical Services
Research and Research Services (Phase 1)
Office Cleaning for Government Car Service and Inter-departmental Despatch Service Accounts Support for Government Car Service and Inter-departmental Despatch Service Engineering Workshops at Building Research Establishment (BRE).
Stores at BRE.

The forward programme, from October 1993 onwards, has yet to be determined.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many local authorities pay the client contribution element of the home energy efficiency scheme; and what proportion of the total this represents;

(2) how many network installers operate hardship funds; and what proportion of the total this represents.

Mr. Maclean: These figures are not available centrally.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what is the relationship between financial allocations to network installers and the estimated number of households eligible for grants under the home energy efficiency scheme within that network installer's area;

(2) what plans he has to ensure that financial allocations under the home energy efficiency scheme from 1993-94 relate to local need rather than the previous performance of a network installer.

Mr. Maclean: Eligibility for grant under the home energy efficiency scheme depends upon receipt of one of five passportable benefits: housing benefit, income support, family credit, community charge benefit—council tax benefit from 1 April 1993—or disability working allowance. In addition the property must meet certain criteria concerning both existing insulation and whether or not grant has been paid for similar work under previous schemes. It is not possible to estimate the numbers that might be eligible in a particular area at a particular time.

The present allocation system takes into account the proven ability of an installer to carry out work, thus avoiding sterilisation of funds. For listed contractors, allocations are intended to ensure that similar levels of funding are available in each area.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 11 December 1992, Official Report, column 836, how he accounts for the lower take-up of home energy efficiency grants in the London area; and what measures he proposes to resolve the situation.

Mr. Maclean: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Islington, South and Finsbury (Mr. Smith) on 4 March 1993 at column 263.

Market Charters

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many complaints his Department has received regarding market charters.

Mr. Robin Squire: My Department has received 15 such complaints since 1 January 1991.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance his Department gives to local authority charter holders as to the terms they can require for the granting of their consent for a new market within their charter area.

Mr. Robin Squire: None. Any such terms are a matter for negotiation between the franchise holder and the operator of such a new market. We are, however, concerned that the existence of market franchise rights may impose undue restriction on the development of local enterprise and are reviewing these rights as part of the Department's deregulation programme.

London Forum

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what level of public funding is being made available to the London Forum.

Sir George Young: The forum will seek funds mainly from the private sector. The Department has met the costs of launching the forum. But we have no plans to fund the forum's activities in promoting London.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give a breakdown of the cost of the London Forum's breakfast launch on 29 March.

Sir George Young: The total cost of organising and staging the launch of the London Forum on 29 March was approximately £15,000. This includes some £4,900 for hire of the venue and catering, £4,600 for the design and production of printed material and £4,900 for administration.

Elderly People's Homes

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps have been taken by his Department within the last two years to improve the advice and information available on the thermal efficiency of elderly people's homes.

Mr. Maclean: The introduction of the home energy efficiency scheme on 1 January 1991 made grants available for the first time for the provision of basic energy efficiency advice for those on low incomes. Compulsory qualifications for those giving advice under the scheme were introduced in April 1992 to ensure a high standard of advice provision. Information and advice on energy efficiency in the home is also available through my Department's "Helping the Earth Begins at Home" campaign.

Elderly People's Homes

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to instigate a survey to ascertain the number of elderly people suffering as a result of cold homes and low body temperatures during the winter months.

Mr. Yeo: I have been asked to reply. We are awaiting the results of research by the Medical Research Council on the relationship between cold weather and excess winter sickness.

Market Charters

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many proposed new market developments have failed to take place because of (a) injunctions taken out by charter holders or (b) financial demands by charter holders for the granting of their consent;

(2) how many, and which, market charter holders have over the last five years sought a court injunction to restrain a proposed market within their charter area.

Mr. Robin Squire: We do not have this information.

Public Bodies

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many business people he has appointed to public bodies since 1987.

Mr. Howard: Such information is not available centrally, but appointments to my Department's public bodies are made from people from all backgrounds and all walks of life.

Toxic Waste

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will indicate the specific length of time for which Her Majesty's Government have been opposed to the import of the toxic waste from developed countries to which he made general reference in his interview on "The World at One" on 23 March.

Mr. Maclean: The Government's policy that developed countries should become self-sufficient in disposing of their own waste was set out in the Environment White Paper "This Common Inheritance" in September 1990.

Recycling

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which local authorities will receive supplementary credit approvals for recycling; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for the Environment is today announcing the allocation of £15 million in supplementary credit approvals for recycling investment by English local authorities. Local authorities are now more involved in recycling than ever before. Today's announcement continues our programme of support for recycling which is very important in helping authorities to implement their recycling strategies.

Now that the vast majority of waste collection authorities have prepared their recycling plans, many are keen to start implementing them. Many waste disposal authorities are also eager to do more. So it is no surprise that the demand for supplementary credit approvals (SCAs) for recycling has been higher than ever this year.

Under our environmental partnership scheme, the aim is to maximise investment in recycling by combining SCAs with authorities' own capital receipts and private sector contributions. Schemes which do this have done best in this year's allocations.

But many other schemes have also received support. We have given particular priority to schemes to collect waste oil and CFCs for recycling. Altogether supplementary credit approvals have been distributed to 161 authorities for 307 schemes, ranging from home composing projects to mini recycling centres.

We received bids totalling £35 million so we have had to take some tough decisions in making allocations. Each authority is today being notified of the outcome of its bid. Authorities whose bids were not successful, due to the heavy demand on the funds available, will naturally be disappointed.

Some authorities are keen to develop large capital-intensive projects such as central compositing plants and materials reclamation facilities. Others want to introduce extensive kerbside collection schemes. If we had given approvals to many such schemes, we would have had very few resources left for other authorities. We have generally not been able to give approvals to schemes of this sort except where they are being partly funded from authorities' own capital contributions or by the private sector or where they continue a programme which we have funded in previous years.

The following authorities have been issued supplementary credit approvals for recycling for 1993-94:

Council Tax

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what estimate he has made of the total cost to charities, which were formerly exempt from local taxes on residential care homes, of the imposition of council tax;

(2) what effect the imposition of council tax on charities with residential care homes will have on modifying residential care accommodation in line with the Government's community care principles; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what representations the Joint Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State has had from the Charities Tax Reform Group about the effect of imposing council tax on charitable residential care accommodation; what reply is being sent; what action he is taking; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Robin Squire: I have received a letter from the charities tax reform group which follows up a meeting and correspondence I have had with one of their members. My replies have explained that the council tax is a tax paid by residents, whether directly or through their landlords. There is no reason why one group of residents should be advantaged simply because their landlord is a charity. Instead we are targeting help by reference to the circumstances of residents, through the discount, disabled reduction, council tax benefit and transitional relief systems.

We have been particularly concerned to ensure that residents of residential care homes—whether or not run by charities—should not face unreasonable council tax burdens. Many homes will receive a one-band reduction in respect of features required for their disabled residents. Care homes without resident staff will not pay the personal element of the tax, which will mean a 50 per cent. discount. And many care homes will qualify for substantial amounts of transitional relief. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security took account of the costs of the council tax in his uprating of benefits for care home residents, which will take effect on 1 April. Such benefits were generally increased by more than the rate of inflation.

Because we do not know the circumstances of each individual care home, including the council tax band into which it falls, we cannot estimate the total amount of council tax which they will pay. But a care home in the highest band receiving a reduction for disability and a 50 per cent. discount might pay about £9 per week, even without the transitional reduction scheme. With that scheme the cost might be as little as £3·25 a week. Care homes in lower bands would pay even less. These amounts equate to a few tens of pence per resident.

Care home residents, like those in the community, will be asked to make a contribution to the costs of local authority services from which they benefit. I believe that these contributions are eminently reasonable; because of the structure of the tax, they are likely to be rather smaller than those made by people living in the community.

Commission for the New Towns

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what arrangements he intends to make to codify and publicise the financial management relationship between his Department and the Commission for the New Towns.

Mr. Baldry: I am pleased to announce that I have today issued a management statement which has been agreed with the Commission for the New Towns. This comes into force on 1 April 1993, and a copy has been placed in the Library of the House. This document sets out the main objectives of the Commission and the structure of financial accountability between my Department and the Commission.

Travellers

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what measures the Government propose to tackle the problem of illegal camping by gipsies.

Mr. Baldry: My Department and the Welsh Office issued a consultation paper "Reform of the Caravan Sites Act 1968", on 18 August 1992. The paper set out our proposals for reducing illegal camping. It was widely circulated, and we have received 939 formal responses, copies of which are in the Department's library. A list of the responses is in the Library of the House.

Responses were received from local authorities, police authorities, the churches, farmers, landowners, members of the public and, not least, gipsies and other travellers. Most respondents acknowledged the deficiencies of the present arrangements for providing caravan sites for gipsies, although few made any constructive suggestions for change.

The existing system of local authorities' providing caravan sites has not yielded sufficient accommodation for gipsies. Nor has it reduced the incidence of illegal camping, which can be an intolerable nuisance for residents of the settled community. The Government consider that local authorities should have stronger powers to deal quickly and effectively with illegal camping, and that the Exchequer should no longer have an open-ended commitment to meet gipsies' accommodation needs; more gipsies should be encouraged to find their own sites.

Accordingly, as soon as parliamentary time allows, my right hon. and learned Friend and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales propose to give local authorities in England and Wales a new power to direct trespassers to remove their caravans from land; failure to comply with such a direction would be a criminal offence. They also propose that it would be a criminal offence if, having left, the traveller returns to the same land as a trespasser within three months. Local authorities would then have the power to evict on receipt of a magistrate's order. They propose that the duty which the 1968 Act places on local authorities to provide caravan sites for gipsies will be repealed although local authorities would be given a discretionary power to do so. They also propose the repeal of the Secretary of State's powers to direct and designate local authorities, and to provide grant for sites.

After consideration of the responses to the consultation paper they have decided that it is not necessary to give authorities a power to seize caravans. Nor do they now propose to offer financial assistance to gipsies to move into conventional housing, although they continue to believe that gipsy families who wish to make that move should be encouraged to do so.

Finally, they will issue for public consultation shortly new draft guidance to local planning authorities. Their intention is that the draft guidance and their legislative proposals should put gipsies in the same position as other developers under the planning system; but also should ensure that the system recognises gipsies' special accommodation needs. It should enhance gipsies' confidence in the planning system, and lead to the provision of more sites to gipsies requirements.

The Government believe that these changes will serve better the original objectives of the 1968 Act, to provide legal sites for gipsies and to eliminate illegal camping.

Dioxin Contamination

Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what further investigations have been made of dioxin contamination of soils and herbage in Derbyshire.

Mr. Maclean: Investigations have continued following the publication of reports by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on dioxin contamination in the Bolsover area of Derbyshire. These have identified slightly elevated levels of dioxins in a number of samples of soils and herbage at Staveley. The pattern of dioxins differs from that found in previous samples near Bolsover, suggesting a different source. Further inquiries by the inspectorate at industrial processes in the area suggest that emissions from a foundry at Staveley may be responsible. The management of the foundry have given the inspectorate their full co-operation.

The foundry comes within the scope of local authority air pollution control under part I of the Environmental Protection Act 1990, and these findings have been conveyed to Chesterfield borough council. A copy of the findings has been placed in the Library of the House.

Human exposure to dioxin contamination in the area would be most likely to arise through consumption of locally produced fatty foods, such as milk. Samples of milk from two farms close to the plant, taken in 1991, were well within the normal range for urban/industrial areas, and not a cause for concern. There is no reason at present to suppose that the manner of operation of the plant has changed significantly since 1991, but as a precautionary measure my right hon. Friend the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food is now arranging for further milk samples to be taken.

Departmental Cash Limits

Mr. Trend: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what changes he proposes to make to his Department's cash limits for 1992-93 and 1993-94.

Mr. Howard: I propose to make the following changes:

(i) The DOE/OES non-voted cash limit for 1992-93 will be increased by £48,083,000 from £109,016,000 to £157,099,000. The provision of additional supplementary credit approvals will enable local authorities to raise finance to fulfil their obligations to contribute part of the cost of certain roads built by the Commission for the New Towns in England. The increase, which is exceptionally high as it includes provision for the capitalisation of contributions from Buckinghamshire County Council in respect of earlier years, will be wholly offset by a counterbalancing Commission for the New Towns receipt (see (iii) (c) below).

(ii) The DOE/LACAP non-voted cash limit for 1992-93 will be increased by £7,881,000 from £2,943,088,000 to £2,950,969,000. The provision of £6,231,000 additional supplementary credit approvals will enable Warrington BC, Milton Keynes BC and The Wrekin BC to purchase residual rented housing stock from the Commission for the New Towns in England; this increase is wholly offset by a counterbalancing receipt for the Commission. It also includes a transfer of £150,00 in respect of essential repairs to a number of properties included in the bulk transfer of housing to Warrington BC. It also includes £1,500,000 of supplementary credit approvals transferred from 1993-94 to take account of a revised forecast of the profile of supplementary credit approvals to offset some categories of commutation losses.

(iii) The DOE/NT (New Towns) non-voted cash limit for 1992-93 will be increased by £137,186,000 from minus £293,636,000 to minus £156,450,000. This net increase is the result of the following individual changes:

(a) an increase of £191,650,000, reflecting the effect on receipts of the present state of the property market;
(b) a reduction of £150,000 resulting from the need to finance essential repairs to properties transferred to Warrington BC as described in (ii) above; and
(c) reductions of £48,083,000 and £6,231,000 resulting from additional receipts from local authorities financed by the cash limit increases described in (i) and (ii) above respectively

(iv) The External Finance Limit for Letchworth Garden City Corporation in 1992-93 will be increased by £650,000 from minus £650,000 to zero. This reflects changes in the Corporation's financing profile as a result of the continuing depression in the property market.

(v) The DOE/LACAP non-voted cash limit for 1993-94 will be reduced by £1,500,000 from £2,462,975,000 to £2,461,475,000, reflecting the revised forecast of the profile of supplementary credit approvals to offset some categories of commutation losses.

These changes will either be offset or charged to the Reserve, and will not therefore add to the planning total of public expenditure.

Commercial Property Leases

Mr. Thomason: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals the Government have to reform the basis for commercial property leases.

Sir George Young: My right hon. Friend the Lord Chancellor has today announced that the Government propose to implement the Law Commission Report (No. 174) "Landlord and Tenant Law: Privity of Contract and Estate" for future, but not for existing leases.

The Government have been conscious of other concerns about the operation of commercial property leases. They have no intention of legislating in any way that would alter the terms in existing contracts. However, the Government will shortly produce a consultation paper inviting views on three aspects of commercial leasing which have been causing concern:

Upward Only Rent Reviews;
Confidentiality clauses;
and dispute resolution procedures.

We will consult widely with interested bodies and will carefully consider the outcome before deciding whether it would be appropriate to introduce legislation on these issues in relation to new leases.

Hazardous Waste Incineration

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent discussions he has held with other member states of the European Community concerning the draft directive on the incineration of hazardous waste; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 22 March 1993]: Since the draft directive was adopted by the European Commission in March last year, there have been several discussions between the Commission and experts from member states, including the United Kingdom, on the draft. I attended a meeting of the Environment Council on 23 March at which the Council took note of a progress report on the draft.

Quality Assurance

Mr. Dover: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will consider requiring consultants used directly or indirectly by his Department to achieve BS 5750 quality assurance, and to provide appropriate warranties, where structural safety, ground stabilisation, treatment of ground pollution contamination, methane and radon are concerned.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 26 March 1993]: It is for each consultant who chooses to tender for contracts let by, on behalf of, or in connection with grant-aid from my Department to establish in his or her own way his or her ability to carry out the work specified and to arrange whatever indemnities or warranties are appropriate. BS 5750 is not necessarily the appropriate way to demonstrate "quality assurance" in every case.

Rechem Plant, Pontypool

Mr. Murphy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to the answer of the Secretary of State for Wales of 17 March, Official Report, column 259, what was the outcome of Her Majesty's Government's representations to the German Government concerning the import of toxic waste to the Rechem plant at Pontypool.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 30 March 1993]: I have nothing to add to the answer which I give the hon. Member on 30 March 1993.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which local authorities are known to his Department (a) to be debt free and (b) to have become debt free in 1992-93.

Mr. Robin Squire [holding answer 30 March 1993]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Teignbridge (Mr. Nicholls) on 30 March 1993.

Information on those authorities which have eliminated their longer-term, external debt during 1992-93 and will become debt free for capital control purposes in 1993-94 is not yet available.

Wildlife Trade (Italy)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance the United Kingdom Government have received from the EC secretariat of CITES regarding wildlife trade with Italy.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 30 March 1993]: The CITES secretariat, which is not linked to the EC, informed us in February of the suspension of the Standing Committee's earlier recommendations that sanctions should be taken against Italy. The United Kingdom was an observer when the Committee met earlier this month and accepted the secretariat's advice that sanctions could be lifted permanently.

CITES

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment following the relaxation of border controls within the EC on 1 January, what action he will take to ensure that the United Kingdom does not contravene guidance issued by the EC secretariat of CITES.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 30 March 1993]: My Department will continue to act upon relevant guidance from the CITES secretariat in Lausanne. I am not aware of any specific guidance directed towards the United Kingdom about the introduction of the single market.

Council Tax

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table showing in each authority and by region (a) the number of people and (b) the number of households gaining and losing from the introduction of the council tax.

Mr. Howard: I estimate that, before taking account of council tax benefit, some 9 million households in England will be paying less under the council tax than under the community charge.

More households will gain when allowance is made for council tax benefit. At present I expect that, after allowing for council tax benefit, about six out of 10 households will gain. I am placing in the Library tables showing council tax levels and budgets for local authorities in England with community charge and rates comparisons. I will write to the hon. Member shortly giving detailed information on gainers and losers net of council tax benefit by area.

TRANSPORT

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when his Department last conducted surveys of (a) the ethnic origins and (b) women among its employees; when it next plans to do so; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: A survey was conducted into the ethnic origins of all employees of the Department of Transport and its agencies for whom this information was not already known in October 1992. Surveys into the ethnic origin of new entrants to the Department are conducted every month.

The gender of employees is recorded for all staff on the Department's computerised personnel information system.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many and what percentage of officers in each grade from 1 to 7 and overall in his Department are (a) women, (b) from ethnic minorities and (c) disabled people.

Mr. Norris: At 24 March 1993 the following numbers and percentages of (a) women, (b) ethnic minorities and (c) disabled people were employed in the Department of Transport and its agencies.

	(a) Women		(b) Ethnic Minorities		(c) Registered Disabled People

[1] Figures show ethnic minority staff as a percentage of those whose ethnic origin is known.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he has taken to recruit women, members of ethnic minorities and disabled people, respectively, in top grades of employment at his Department.

Mr. Norris: Recruitment to top grades in the Department of Transport is undertaken on its behalf by the civil service commissioners. Recruits to the senior grades, as to any grade in the civil service, are selected on merit on the basis of fair and open competition, unless one of the exceptions permitted under the Civil Service Order in Council 1991 applies. Various steps have been taken by the civil service commissioners to aid recruitment from all sectors of the community including:

- extending links with institutions of higher education;
- equal opportunities training for those involved in selection;
- using validated selection procedures.

Dock Labour

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he takes to monitor the extent of the use of casual employment in former scheme ports after the end of the dock labour scheme and its compliance with the provisions of the Dock Work Act 1989; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: It is a matter for the port employers to decide what work force they need for their operations. There is no requirement under the Dock Work Act 1989 for information on casual employment to be made available to the Government.

Ms. Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his estimate of the number of (a) full-time, (b) trained and (c) casual dock workers working in each of the former scheme ports in each of the last five years and as of 1 March.

Mr. Norris: Numbers of permanent employed dock workers and cargo handlers, and the number of temporary dock workers, recorded in the annual survey of port manpower carried out by the British Ports Federation, are shown in the table. The figures for permanent employees include others in addition to registered dock workers, and all figures refer to the number of employees in employment on a specified day in March or April each year. The annual survey is no longer carried out, and thus figures are not available for 1 March 1993.

Statistics on numbers of trained employees are not centrally available. It is the responsibility of port employers to ensure that both permanent and temporary staff are adequately trained.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many dock workers were employed at the time of the abolition of the dock labour scheme; what percentage of dock workers have since been made redundant; and what is the total cost of redundancy payments to date.

Mr. Norris: At the time of the abolition of the dock labour scheme there were 9,220 registered dock workers. Of these, 7,074, or 76·7 per cent., subsequently received redundancy payments under the terms of the Dock Work (Compensation Payments Scheme) Regulations 1989. The total cost of these payments has amounted to £231·3 million, of which my Department's contribution was £132 million.

Civil Aviation Authority (Licences)

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if, in relation to any application by a new airline for a licence to fly from a United Kingdom airport or airstrip, (1) he will request the Civil Aviation Authority to consider whether any of the promoters of a new airline have been criticised by any public body on a previous occasion for their stewardship of private or public assets or concerns and to publish their findings in full;

(2) he will request the Civil Aviation Authority to consider the appropriateness of the safety precautions available and in use at the particular airport or airstrip, taking specifically into account the population density around the proposed touchdown and takeoff points and to publish their findings and the reasons therefor;

(3) he will request the Civil Aviation Authority to consider the extent of studies made by the applicant into the environmental effects of the particular services it proposes to operate and to publish their findings and the reasons therefor;

(4) he will request the Civil Aviation Authority to consider the financial backgrounds and reputations of both the operator and its promoters and to publish both their findings and the reasons therefor;

(5) he will request the Civil Aviation Authority to consider the extent to which the proposed licensed service is duplicated from the same or nearby airport or airstrip and to publish their findings and the reasons therefor;

(6) he will request the Civil Aviation Authority to consider the extent of the studies made by the applicant into the suitability of the particular airport or airstrip for taking off or landing in full or partial darkness, and to publish their findings and the reasons therefor;

(7) he will request the Civil Aviation Authority to consider the maximum load factor for any of the range of aircraft that might be usable under the proposed licence and to publish their findings and the reasons therefor;

(8) he will direct the Civil Aviation Authority to publish full details as supplied to it of any application by a new airline, or by an existing airline to fly from or to a new location in the United Kingdom for a licence for a scheduled service, with effect from 24 March;

(9) if, in relation to any application by a new airline for a licence to fly from a United Kingdom airport or airstrip, he will request the Civil Aviation Authority to consider the appropriateness of the noise levels of the aircraft proposed to be used for the service to be licensed to the airport or airstrip concerned and to publish their findings and the reasons therefor;

(10) if, in relation to any application by a new airline for a licence to fly from a United Kingdom airport or airstrip, he will request the Civil Aviation Authority to consider whether any of the promoters of a new airline have a criminal record and to publish their findings in full.

Mr. Norris: No. The process of licensing airlines in the United Kingdom is covered by EC Regulation 2407/92 on the licensing of air carriers. This has been implemented in the United Kingdom by the Licensing of Air Carriers Regulations 1992. Any carrier satisfying the requirements laid down is entitled to an operating licence and becomes a Community air carrier. Duly licensed Community air carriers are entitled to virtually unrestricted access to all intra-EC air routes where the airports concerned are open for civil aviation, irrespective of whether a similar service is already available. Where environmental problems exist member states may impose transparent and non-discriminatory restrictions on the operation of particular routes.

There are no routes in the United Kingdom for which the use of this provision has been requested. Such matters as aircraft load limitations, aerodrome safety and aerodrome opening hours are considered by the CAA, but not as part of the licensing process. All aircraft landing or taking off in the United Kingdom have to meet the requirements of the Air Navigation (Noise Certification) Order 1990.

Ferries (Licensing)

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the role of his Department in the licensing of scheduled ferries to any destination in balancing demand and provision.

Mr. Norris: The Department has no such role. However, surveyors from the Department's Surveyor General's Organisation carry out surveys on United Kingdom-flagged ferries to ensure compliance with statutory safety standards. Foreign-flagged ferries are also inspected under the port state control arrangements for compliance with international standards.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Trotter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his estimate of the difference in journey time for passenger trains between the north of the country and the continent if they are routed to St. Pancras rather than King's Cross.

Mr. Freeman: There is no appreciable difference. Journey times are similar on the rail link routes into St. Pancras and King's Cross, and between the stations and the east coast main line and the west coast main line. All trains have to stop so that officials undertaking on-train border controls can join or depart and for train crews to be changed. No additional time would be taken at St. Pancras as a result of the trains leaving the station in the same direction as they arrive.

Rose Grove to Colne Rail Line

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make finance available to British Rail to allow the track between Rose Grove and Colne in Lancashire to be maintained to a standard which will enable speed restrictions to be lifted.

Mr. Freeman: Decisions on railway maintenance are entirely matters for the management of British Rail. Subsidy is made available to British Rail as a lump sum. It is for British Rail to allocate this money to particular lines and services.

Rail Speed Restrictions

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many miles of British Rail track are subject to speed restrictions caused by reduced maintenance resulting from reductions in the public service obligation grant.

Mr. Freeman: PSO grant has not been reduced. £1,150 million is being paid for 1992-93, compared with £900 million for 1991-92 and £600 million for 1990-91.

A66-A1 Intersection

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the feasibility study into a four-way intersection between the A66(M) and the A1(M) will be completed and published.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: There is no feasibility study being undertaken specifically into a four-way intersection between the A66(M) and the A1(M).

A study to inform the Secretary of State of the longer-term requirements of the A1 (M) between Barton and Birtley will be completed in the near future. An assessment of all the interchanges on this section of motorway is being carried out as part of the study.

Search and Rescue

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what criteria his Department uses in its recommendations for coverage for search and rescue helicopter deployments for (a) day time and (b) night time.

Mr. Norris: The Department of Transport uses criteria agreed by the United Kingdom Search and Rescue committee which states that search and rescue helicopters should be deployed so that points 40 nautical miles from the coast can be reached within one hour by day in good weather and those at 100 nautical miles from the coast can be reached within two hours by night or in bad weather.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Missing Giros

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what the value is of stolen or missing giro payments from the Department of Social Security for the most recent 12-month period.

Miss Widdecombe: The administration of the payment of benefit by girocheque is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will reply to my hon. Friend with such information as is available and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from David Riggs to Sir John Wheeler, dated 30 March 1993.

As Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency, it is the responsibility of Mr. Michael Bichard to answer questions about relevant operational matters. However, as Mr. Bichard is away at the moment, I am replying on his behalf to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking what the value is of stolen or missing girocheque payments from the Department of Social Security for the most recent 12 month period.

The most recent period for which figures are available is from April 1991 to March 1992. During this period just over 36 million girocheques were issued by the Department of Social Security of which 86,000 or 0·237% were stolen or missing. Those stolen or missing had a value of £8,156,619.

Additionally, the Employment Service acts as our agent in the issue of girocheques to those who are unemployed and claiming income support. However the Employment Service is not able to separately identify these; the figures cannot therefore be included.

I hope you find this reply helpful. A copy will appear in the Official Report. A copy will also be placed in the Library.

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects that Mrs. Ralia J. L. Cox, 1 Ronald place, Ely, Cardiff, NI number ZP 553255D, will receive a copy of her medical records requested on 25 September 1992 in relation to her claim for disability living allowance.

Mr. Scott: The administration of disability living allowance is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from David Riggs to Mr. Rhodri Morgan dated 30 March 1993.

As Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency, it is the responsibility of Mr. Michael Bichard to answer questions about relevant operational matters. However, as Mr. Bichard is away at the moment I am replying on his behalf to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking when he expects that Mrs. Ralia J. L. Cox, 1 Ronald Place, Ely, Cardiff, NI Number ZP553255D, will receive a copy of her medical records requested on 25th September 1992 in relation to her claim for disability living allowance.

I understand that the Disability Living Allowance Unit has already written to you separately and in greater detail about this matter on 5 March 1993. I can now confirm that copies of the medical records that are currently available to us were sent to Mrs. Cox on 25 March 1993.

I am sorry for the delay in sending the records to Mrs. Cox. Staff are aware of the need to respond quickly to requests from our customers for such information. You will be aware from Mr. Bichard's letter of 19 October 1992 to all MPs of the problems the Benefits Agency has faced since the launch of DLA and the positive steps taken to improve the service to our customers so that we will be able to give the standard of service to which every customer is entitled and which we want to deliver.

I hope that you will find this reply helpful. A copy will appear in the Official Report and a copy will also be placed in the Library.

Charter Standard Statement

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much it cost to produce the charter standard statement recently distributed by the Benefits Agency.

Mr. Burt: The Benefits Agency charter Standard statement is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from David Riggs to Mr. Donald Dewar, dated 30 March 1993.

As Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency, it is the responsibility of Mr. Michael Bichard to answer questions about relevant operational matters. However, as Mr. Bichard is away at the moment, I am replying on his behalf to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking how much it cost to produce the Charter Standard Statement recently distributed by the Benefits Agency.

There have been three hundred and twelve thousand (312,000) copies of the Charter Standard Statement produced and distributed at a cost of £136,273.

I hope that you find this reply helpful. A copy will appear in the Official Report and a copy will also be placed in the Library.

Marginal Tax Rates

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will update the answer of 25 February, Official Report, column 682, on the numbers of people facing different marginal tax rates, giving an estimate for 1993-94.

Mr. Burt: The information is in the tables.

Income-related Benefits

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the full-year cost of increasing all income-related benefits by (a) 2·4 per cent. and (b) 1·1 per cent. in 1993-94.

Mr. Burt: The estimated cost is in the table:

National Insurance Contributions

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 19 January, Official Report, column 210, if he will give similar figures on the effect of levels of the lower and upper profits limits for national insurance contributions on the numbers of contributors and the revenues raised.

Miss Widdecombe: The information requested is in the tables.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the Child Support Agency will start operations; what its performance targets will be; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: The Child Support Agency, the latest next steps executive agency of the Department of Social Security, will start operations on 5 April 1993, providing a comprehensive child maintenance service. I have set the agency the following performance targets for 1993-94:

60 per cent. of people with care of children making eligible applications to the Agency to have maintenance arranged.

Annual benefit savings—£530 million.

65 per cent. of clients to regard the service as satisfactory.

To manage the Agency's resources so as to deliver its business plan within a total budget of £115 million.

I have today placed in the Library the agency's framework document, business plan for 1993-94 Child Support Agency charter. I have also placed in the Library the child support manual and field operations guide which will provide the operational guidance used by child support officers and staff.

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans there are for the child support adjudication guide to be published; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: The child support adjudication guide is being published by HMSO today and copies will be placed in the Library of the House. The guide contains detailed guidance from the chief child support officer on how child support officers should interpret the new laws on maintenance assessments from 5 April. This will be invaluable to child support officers in interpreting the law, but it should also prove useful to outside agencies in providing help and advice to their clients.

The publication of the guidance reflects our commitment to being open about the working of the new child support legislation. In line with the citizen's charter, it represents another move towards greater openness generally in the Department.

Low Incomes

Mrs. Currie: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he intends to provide a response to the Social Security Select Committee second report, "Low Income Statistics: Low Income Families 1979 to 1989".

Mr. Burt: I have today laid before Parliament Command Paper Cm. 2172 which forms the Government response to the Select Committee report.

Departmental Travel Costs

Mr. Nicholas Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what is the total sum spent from his Department's budget on Ministers' travel costs and expenses for travel between Britain and France since April 1992;

(2) what is the total sum spent from his Department's budget on travel costs and expenses (a) for foreign travel overall and (b) for travel between Britain and France since April 1992.

Mr. Lilley: The sum spent by the Department of Social Security since April 1992 on foreign travel costs is as follows:

(a) Foreign travel costs and expenses overall = £403,600
(b) The travel costs between Britain and France since April 1992 = £26,735

Spending on fares for Ministers' travel between Britain and France amounts to £4,688. Information about related expenses is not readily available.

Smoke Detectors

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what priority is given to battery and mains-operated smoke detectors in relation to applications for community care grants from the social fund for the purchase of essential furnishings; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: The priority given to any application will depend on the circumstances of each case. A social fund officer has to take account of the general guidance on priorities issued by the Secretary of State and the local guidance issued by the area social fund officer. The guidance helps social fund officers but is not binding; social fund officers must use their discretion and decide each case on its merits. A copy of the Secretary of State's guidance is available in the Library.

In practice, since smoke alarms are usually inexpensive, most applications would fall outside the £30 minimum award for grants.

National Insurance

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the proportion of average household income in each region being paid through national insurance contributions in each year from 1978-79 to 1996-97.

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 29 March 1993]: The table shows the available information, relating to employees' national insurance contributions as a percentage of household income by region, for the calendar years 1984 to 1990. Regional estimates of household income have not been compiled for years prior to 1984, and estimates for 1991 will be published in the May 1993 issue of "Economic Trends".

SCOTLAND

North Ayrshire Hospitals Trust

16. Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has on the ancillary staffing levels of North Ayrshire hospitals trust.

Mr. Stewart: There were 508 ancillary staff in post at 30 September 1992 in the hospitals that will, from 1 April 1993, gain the status of a trust under the North Ayrshire hospitals trust.

Excluded from this total are staff working for contracted-out services.

32. Mr. McKelvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to meet Ayrshire and Arran health board to discusss transfer of North Ayrshire hospital to trust status.

Mr. Stewart: Responsibility for the transfer of the North Ayrshire hospitals to the North Ayrshire and Arran NHS trust is primarily a matter for the trust and Ayrshire and Arran health board. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will make the appropriate orders in due course.

Grant-maintained Schools

17. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to introduce grant-maintained schools in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The legislative framework is in place and schools have been encouraged to consider the advantages of self-governing status. At St. Mary's Episcopal primary school, Dunblane the parents voted in favour of self-government status. The school board now has one month to submit proposals to the Secretary of State.

Community Care

18. Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the level of provision for community care for patients with chronic diseases.

Mr. Stewart: The level of provision for community care for patients with chronic diseases will vary for every patient and in all cases will reflect and respond to the needs of the individual. The aim is to secure the most effective package of services that meets the patients' and carers' needs.

Borders Structure Plan

19. Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received following the publication of his proposed amendments to the Borders regional structure plan.

Mr. Stewart: By the closing date for representations, my right hon. Friend had received 195 letters commenting on the draft modifications to the Borders regional structure plan.

Committee of the Regions

20. Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what arrangements he plans to make for Scottish representation on the Committee of the Regions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: The Government are still considering arrangements for Scottish representation on the Committee of the Regions.

Water Rates (Rural Areas)

21. Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what action he is taking to reduce the level of water rates in rural areas.

Sir Hector Monro: The level of water charges is a matter for water authorities. However grants are available under the Rural Water Supplies and Sewerage Acts 1944 to 1970 to assist capital expenditure by water authorities in rural areas. The effect can be to keep charge levels down.

Public Expenditure

22. Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the average level of public expenditure per head in Scotland.

Mr. Lang: The level of identifiable general Government expenditure per head in Scotland in 1991-92 was £3,506. Identifiable public expenditure comprises expenditure identified as being of direct benefit to Scottish inhabitants. Other expenditure, principally on defence, is of equal benefit to all the inhabitants of the United Kingdom. That amounted to £716 per head across the United Kingdom in 1991-92.

European Year of Older People

23. Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his Department's involvement and participation in the 1993 European Year of Older People; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: The Scottish Office is participating fully with other Government Departments and voluntary organisations to plan and promote a wide-ranging programme of events for the European Year of Older People and Solidarity Between Generations. A diary of events taking place in Scotland has been produced and is being added to all the time. Funding to assist with the promotion of the year in Scotland is being made available by the Scottish Office.

Public Bodies (Safeguards)

24. Mr. Trimble: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has to give citizens legally enforceable safeguards against the abuse of power by public bodies.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: We have published Scottish charters setting out citizens' rights and entitlements. Some rights, such as the appeals procedures outlined in the parents charter, are statutory. The Housing and Urban Development Bill contains provisions which will strengthen tenants' statutory rights. We have no plans at present to add to these rights.

There are also ordinary remedies available to citizens before the courts and through the various ombudsmen arrangements.

Local Government Reform

25. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the cost of the Touche Ross report on the costs of local government reform.

Mr. Stewart: The sum paid to Touche Ross for its report, the IPF survey of local authorities and subsequent work on the costs of local government reform was £55,000.

29. Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the impact on trading standards and consumer protection departments of his proposals for reorganising local government.

Mr. Stewart: A number of respondents to our recent consultation paper on local government reform have commented on the future of the trading standards service in a single-tier structure. We are giving careful consideration to all these comments.

School Building (Gordon)

26. Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will visit Gordon constituency to examine future school building needs.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has no plans at present to visit the Gordon area in connection with school building issues.

Beef Special Premium

27. Mr. Kynoch: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much he expects to pay to farmers in Scotland under the beef special premium scheme in 1993-94.

Sir Hector Monro: We expect to pay approximately £12·5 million to Scottish farmers under the beef special premium scheme in the financial year 1993-94.

Scottish Government

28. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has had on his White Paper on "Scotland in the Union".

35. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what response he has received on the White Paper, "Scotland in the Union—a Partnership for Good" (Cm 2225).

Mr. Ian Lang: I refer the hon. Members to the reply I gave today to the hon. Member for Dundee, East (Mr. McAllion).

30. Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress has been made in implementing the proposals in his recent White Paper, "Scotland in the Union—a Partnership for Good" (Cm 2225); and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: Implementation of a number of the proposals contained in the White Paper is already in hand. For example local information points and a public inquiry unit should be operational by the summer; the new oil and gas office will be opened in Aberdeen later this year; preparatory work for the various transfers of responsibility from Whitehall to the Scottish Office is proceeding. As regards parliamentary aspects of the White Paper, proposals for the amendment of Standing Orders will be brought forward in due course.

Inverclyde Enterprise Zones

31. Mr. Graham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the Inverclyde enterprise zones.

Mr. Stewart: The need for site clearance, servicing and infrastructure works on most of the sites, and the general economic situation, has meant that progress on the zone has been a little slower than we might have hoped. There have also been local difficulties which have contributed to delays in bringing forward sites for development.

Nevertheless, there are extremely encouraging developments on the zone. The proposed development by MIMTEC at Faulds park in particular is expected to create 400 new jobs and bring £20 million of investment to Inverclyde. The zone partners are working, with the Scottish Office, to build on this and earlier successful developments; and to ensure that the zone meets its target of creating 3,200 new jobs in the area.

Water Investment

33. Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his policy on the continued funding of water investment by public borrowing.

Sir Hector Monro: Under the present administrative arrangements, capital expenditure by water authorities will continue to be subject to public expenditure controls. In addition to the capital consent allocations issued by the Secretary of State, which in effect limit the extent to which authorities may borrow to fund capital expenditure, authorities can augment capital spending by the use of capital receipts and by revenue and private sector contributions. Beyond this, funding arrangements will depend on the future structure of the water and sewerage services, which my right hon. Friend is presently considering.

Health Boards and NHS Trusts

34. Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what scrutiny he gives to the curricula vitae of people nominated for health boards and NHS trusts.

Mr. Stewart: The curricula vitae of people nominated for appointment to health boards and NHS trusts receive close scrutiny as they help to identify those likely to be able to contribute to the effective running of the NHS in Scotland.

36. Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many ancillary workers are employed by (a) health boards and (b) hospital trusts in Scotland.

Mr. Stewart: At 30 September 1992 there were 20,106 ancillary staff representing 13,033 whole-time equivalents employed by health boards in Scotland. National health service trusts in Scotland employed 1,384 ancillary staff representing 938 whole-time equivalents at that date.

Local Government (Employment)

37. Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the current levels of employment in local government.

Mr. Stewart: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 3 March 1993 at column 173.

Car Theft (Strathclyde)

38. Mr. Michael J. Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people were convicted for car theft in Strathclyde region during 1992.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is not available in the form requested. In 1991—the latest year for which data are available—there were 1,220 persons convicted in Strathclyde police force area on a main charge of theft of a motor vehicle.

Ambulance Service

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will place in the Library the assessments made of the likely effectiveness of the paramedic ambulance service before its introduction;

(2) what assessment he has made of the effect of the paramedic ambulance service on mortality and morbidity of the patients previously managed by the ambulance service;

(3) what assessments are currently being made of the effectiveness of the paramedic ambulance service; and if they will be made public.

Mr. Stewart: Pre-hospital care is provided by GPs, ambulance staff or hospital outreach teams and research has shown that rapid response by skilled staff to a seriously ill patient enhances recovery and survival. Ambulance staff are generally the first NHS response to patients in an emergency and it was for this reason that training in more advanced lifesaving techniques was introduced to provide a better standard of pre-hospital care for patients.

The Scottish ambulance service has appointed a consultant medical director who is an experienced consultant in accident and emergency medicine. He is responsible for supervising the training arrangements for all extended trained ambulance staff throughout Scotland and for the audit of the outcomes of their interventions in individual cases. Arrangements are in place for measuring the outcome of patients defibrillated by SAS staff. Measuring the outcome of ambulance staff intervention in other types of cases requires link-up with hospital records and and the consultant medical director is involved in identifying the means of linking the ambulance patient report form with the Scottish NHS clinical information systems.

In line with the rest of United Kingdom, records are kept of procedures which paramedics carry out in attending to patients, but these are not as yet linked to outcome. The intention is to measure clinical outcomes as part of quality assurance of ambulance service work. When the systems allow the results will be published.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the cost of ambulance provision in Angus district, for each hospital, in each of the past five years.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 30 March 1993]: Ambulance provision to any part of Scotland is not based on the number of hospitals in any particular district. In 1992-93 the annual direct cost of ambulance provision in the Angus area will be £840,000. Information relating to earlier years is not readily available.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what extra ambulance provision is planned as a consequence of Tayside health board's acute services review.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 30 March 1993]: Until the board has made a decision on the future of acute services in the area it is not possible to determine what changes might be required to the ambulance service.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many single and double-manned ambulances are currently available in Angus district.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 30 March 1993]: There are eight double-manned and two single-manned accident and emergency ambulances and seven single-manned non-emergency patient transport vehicles.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions have taken place with Tayside health board on the subject of ambulance services in connection with Tayside health board's acute services review.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 30 March 1993]: Officials from the Scottish Office Home and Health Department, Tayside health board and the Scottish ambulance service met on 10 February to discuss the impact on ambulance services in Angus of the options set out in the board's consultation document on its review of acute services.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many ambulances and ambulance crews are currently available in Angus district; and what were the comparable figures for each of the past five years.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 30 March 1993]: There are currently 17 ambulances and 35 ambulance staff serving the Angus area. Staffing levels have increased by 30 per cent. since 1991. Other information over the past five years is not readily available.

Angus Hospitals

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will state the value of bequests attached to each Angus hospital.

Mr. Stewart: The information available from the 1991-92 endowment fund report from Tayside health board shows the value of endowments at 31 March 1992 for Angus hospitals, which includes donations, bequests, endowments and revenue from endowments is as follows:

Hospital	Amount (£)
Arbroath Infirmary	19,522
Rosemount Day Hospital	593
Brechin Infirmary	1,283
Forfar Infirmary	10,823
Fyfe Jamieson	764
Little Cairne	9,775
Montrose Royal Infirmary	15,389
Stracathro	41,124
Sunnyside Royal	8,903
Whitehills Hospital	3,019
Total	111,195

In addition to these endowments, £5,044 is held for community care units provided by the health board in the Angus area and a further £1,269,252 is held in a general fund not associated with particular hospitals.

Hospital Admissions

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give for each health board the percentage of admissions to acute beds that are (a) elective and (b) emergency.

Mr. Stewart: The table shows discharges in 1991, the latest year for which figures are available, from Scottish NHS hospitals by type of admmission and health board area within which treatment was received.

Health Board of Treatment	Admission Type Elective per cent.	Emergency per cent.
Argyll and Clyde	46·0	48·3

Western Isles	44·4	51·8
Scotland	48·7	51·6

Inter-hospital transfers are not included.

Psychiatric Beds

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many psychiatric beds are projected to close in each Scottish health board in each of the next nine years.

Mr. Stewart: Health boards are constantly reviewing their assessment of need and as a consequence no figures for future years are available. It remains the case that every admission to and discharge from hospital is based on individual clinical assessment.

Electoral Rolls

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the total electorate in each parliamentary constituency in Scotland as at 16 February.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The total electorate for each parliamentary constituency in Scotland, as at 16 February 1993, is as follows:

Parliamentary Electors: 1993 Register: by constituency (alphabetical order)

Local Enterprise Companies

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland in what ways the eligibility, financial and operating rules which apply to coal enterprise companies in Scotland differ from those outlined in the 1993-94 training and enterprise council operating agreement for (a) youth training and training credits, (b) training for work and (c) business start-up allowance; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart: The rules which govern the delivery by local enterprise companies in Scotland of the principal Government-funded training and enterprise programmes for 1993-94 are set out in an operating agreement between Scottish Enterprise/Highlands and Islands Enterprise and the local enterprise companies which follows closely that for training and enterprise councils.

Badger Setts

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the number of badger setts, by county, closed or otherwise, seriously interfered with by or under licence from his Department's officials in each month from October 1991.

Sir Hector Monro: The information requested is as follows:

Month	Number of setts	District council area
November 1992	2	Clydesdale
		Moray
January 1993	1	Nairn

Fisheries Protection Agency

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about performance targets for the Scottish Fisheries Protection Agency for 1993-94.

Mr. Lang: For the financial year 1993-94 I have set the following targets:

	Target
Aerial surveillance—per cent. of hours flown on task	85
Aerial surveillance—cost per aircraft sighting (£)	95
Marine surveillance—number of boardings at sea	2,500
Marine surveillance—cost per boarding (£)	2,625
Sea Fisheries Inspectorate—cost per log sheet check (£)	57
50 per cent. of cases for prosecution to be reported within six weeks of offence being detected and 90 per cent. within eight weeks
Number of cases where court proceedings are taken as percentage of offences reported to prosecuting authorities (per cent.)	75

In order to ensure that the Scottish Fisheries Protection Agency uses its resources efficiently, I have set it a target to achieve cash releasing efficiency gains of 1½ per cent. over 1992-93.

The chief executive will be directly accountable to me for the achievement of these targets, which will be reported in the agency's annual report.

Prison Service

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what targets he will set the Scottish prison service on achieving executive agency status; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: I have decided that, under the next steps initiative, the Scottish prison service will become an executive agency on 1 April 1993. I am arranging for copies of the framework document to be placed in the Vote Office and in the Libraries of the House. I shall remain accountable to Parliament for the activities of the Scottish prison service. I am delegating to the chief executive full managerial authority for the agency and its day-to-day operation. For the future I envisage greater flexibilities to help the Scottish prison service meet increasingly demanding targets and further improve its standards of service.

I have set the following key performance targets for the Scottish prison service for 1993-94:

	Target
1. The number of prisoners unlawfully at large.	1. No 'A' category prisoners should escape. 2. The number of escapes by 'B' category prisoners should not be higher than 2·5 per 1,000 prisoners
2. The number of significant incidents.	A database will be devloped and a target set from 1994-95.

	Target
3. The number of serious assaults on staff and prisoners.	1. The number of serious assaults on staff should not be higher than 6 per 1,000 staff. 2. The number of serious assaults on prisoners should not be higher than 11 per 1,000 prisoners.
4. Basic quality of life for prisoners.	By April 1994 52 per cent. of prisoners will have access to forms of night sanitation.
5. The amount of available opportunities for prisoners' self development.	That 80 per cent. of convicted prisoners should have the opportunity of at least 6·5 hours per working day of programmed activities.
6. Time out of cell for unconvicted prisoners.	On average 25 per cent. of unconvicted prisoner hours should be available for out of cell activities.
7. Average annual cost per prisoner place.	To keep costs within £26,170 per place available for use.
8. The level of absence through staff sickness.	To reduce the average number of days lost per person per year through staff sickness to 16.

School Management

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about devolved school management.

Mr. Lang: When I launched the draft guidelines for consultation in November, I said that I believed that devolving the management of schools as far as possible to the schools themselves would provide new opportunities to improve the quality of the education our children receive. I also said then that no single scheme could cover the diversity of our schools and regional differences and that that was why I was asking education authorities to devise their own schemes to suit the particular schools and the particular circumstances in their areas.

We received well over 1,000 responses during and just after the consultation period. I am grateful to all those who responded and also to those who gave of their time to attend the working group which was set up following a suggestion in the consultation paper and which met on three occasions to consider in detail the workings of the new arrangements.

Having carefully considered the responses made and the very helpful and constructive suggestions put, we have clarified and revised the guidelines in a number of important respects. In particular, we have recognised the concerns of many about the very tight timescale under which implementation is to proceed. That is why we have extended to end September 1993 the period within which education authorities are to submit draft schemes and why we have extended to 1 April 1997 the period in which devolved school management is to be introduced in special schools. Devolved management is still to be introduced in all primary and secondary schools by 1 April 1996.

We have also extended the number of categories which need not require to be devolved to school level to include, for example, home-to-school transport, school meals and milk and, importantly, provision for special educational needs. These measures will safeguard resources in these special areas which are pupil-led rather than school led. And we have also recognised the concerns of many school boards by building greater flexibility into the arrangements for consultation with head teachers on spending decisions and participation in arrangements for school staff appointments.

I have said all along that the arrangements for devolved school management must build on the strengths of our education system. To do so most effectively they will require to forge an even stronger partnership between education authorities, head teachers, school boards, school staff, parents and pupils. That can only be to the benefit of all.

Experience here and abroad shows conclusively that there are real benefits to be gained by devolving responsibility for day-to-day decisions down to school level. Not only is each school better able to judge its own priorities, but each education authority is also free to concentrate on the important tasks of strategic planning, quality assurance and in providing an enabling and support role for its schools. That is why I look to all sides to make the new arrangements work for the benefit of our children's education and the education of our children's children.

Registers of Scotland

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the targets he expects the Registers of Scotland to achieve in 1993-94.

Mr. Lang: I have set the registers of Scotland the following key targets for 1993-94:

to reduce turnround times for recording writs on the Sasines Register from 10 to 8 weeks.

to reduce turnround times for dealings on the Land Register not attached to a First Registration or Transfer of Part from 15·5 to 12 weeks.

to implement the agreed Land Register extension programme.

to reduce unit costs in real terms for each of its main categories of work by 2 per cent.

Higher Education Funding Council

Mr. Kynoch: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress has been made in applying the next steps management approach to the Scottish Higher Education Funding Council.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Secretary of State has now agreed a management statement with the council. This is an important part of the application of the next steps approach to executive non-departmental public bodies. The management statement describes the council's aims and objectives and their relationship with the Secretary of State and provides the broad policy and managerial framework within which the council will operate. A copy of the management statement has been placed in the Library.

Cash Limits

Mr. Kynoch: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what changes he intends to make to the cash limits for 1992-93 to class XV, vote 12.

Mr. Lang: I intend to decrease the cash limit for class XV, vote 12: law, order, miscellaneous health and social work services, Scotland by £312,000 from £249,628,000 to £249,316,000. This is required due to increased expenditure on class XV, vote 10: police grant, legal aid, criminal injuries compensation and welfare food, Scotland which will be contained within the planning total.

Agricultural Science Agency

Mr. Kynoch: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the performance of the Scottish Agricultural Science Agency against its targets for 1992-93 and the setting of targets for 1993-94.

Mr. Lang: The agency has very largely achieved the key performance targets for 1992-93, the first year of its operation, which I set out in my answer of 9 March 1992 at column 397.

For 1993-94 I have set the agency the following key performance targets.

completion of 95 per cent. of all scientific tests and analyses within the timescale set by the customers; evaluation of quality assurance schemes for all major services leading to candidature for accreditation during 1994-95; improvement of the quantitative indices of performance of the Agency (ie its unit costs) by at least 1·5 per cent.;
recovery of full economic costs for charged services;
formal consultation of the views of all customers on the quality of the work done by the Agency in 1993-94; completion of the first annual cycle of the accruals accounting system developed in 1992-93.

Scottish Record Office

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about his plans to establish the Scottish Record Office as a next steps agency.

Mr. Lang: I informed the House on 5 February that the Scottish Record Office was to be established as a next steps agency. It is to be launched as an agency on 1 April.

I have set the Scottish Record Office the following key targets for its first year of operation:

Efficiency
to reduce the unit cost of preserving and making available the records of Scotland by 8 per cent.;
Quality of Service to increase the number of catalogue pages available for public scrutiny on the electronic system from 24,600 in 1992-93 to 30,740 in 1993-94;
to maintain the recently achieved standards of reader services: material produced for readers in 30 minutes or less in 90 per cent. of cases, 90 per cent. of photocopying for legal customers produced in 24 hours, 95 per cent. of correspondence dealt with in 10 days, while absorbing an expected 2 per cent. increase in demand.
Effectiveness
to survey the electronic and paper based information systems as a first step towards agreeing standards for the transfer of electronic records to the SRO.

The Keeper of the Records of Scotland as the agency's chief executive will be directly accountable to me for the agency's achievements.

I have placed a copy of the agency's framework document in the Libraries of both Houses.

Superannuation Division

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a further statement about establishing the Scottish Office superannuation division as an executive agency.

Mr. Lang: As I announced on 20 November 1992 the Scottish Office superannuation division will become an executive agency on 1 April. Its main role is to administer the occupational pension schemes covering the national health service and the teaching service in Scotland, on my behalf, and to advise me on the regulation of these schemes and other superannuation schemes for which I am responsible. The agency will be known as the Scottish Office Pensions Agency (SOPA) and will continue to be part of the Scottish Office Home and Health Department.

For 1993-94, the first year of its operation, I have set the following key targets for the agency:

1. To complete by August 1993 an exercise to verify the accuracy and completeness of the computer based members' records.
2. To develop an improved system for measuring customer satisfaction.
3. To ensure that awards and transfer payments are accurate to within 2 per cent. of their value in 97 per cent. of cases.
4. To pay on time 99 per cent. of all pensions and lump sums where the target date for receipt of claims is met.
5. To respond to all enquiries within 3 weeks.
6. To progress specification, procurement and implementation of new integrated IT systems to completion of tender evaluation stage.
7. To optimise use of budgetary provision while keeping within direct running costs limits.
8. To provide policy advice which is consistent with public service pension policy and takes account of operational objectives of Scottish Office departments, within the required timescales.

Community Midwives

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the qualifications and training required for a local community midwife.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 30 March 1993]: A local community midwife must have the appropriate professional qualifications required by section 11 of the Nurses, Midwives and Health Visitors Act 1979, as amended, for admission to part 10 of the register maintained by the United Kingdom Central Council for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting (UKCC). In addition under the council's rules regulating the practice of midwives, registered midwives are required to attend courses of instruction from time to time in accordance with these rules.

Local Government Electoral Boundaries

Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about progress in the current review of the boundaries of local government electoral areas, stating whether public inquiries can still be held and whether there will be future opportunities for making representations to the appropriate authorities before final decisions are taken.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 30 March 1993]: To date my right hon. Friend has received reports from the Local Government Boundary Commission for Scotland for the three islands councils and all regional councils other than Strathclyde. The Commission has recently commenced its programme of reviews of the 53 district councils.

No further public inquiries can be held for the islands and regions. However, in the case of the districts, where the reviews are in progress, the commission will publish in the local press the time limits for lodging of representations and details of any public inquiries to be held. When the commission submits its reports to the Secretary of State there is a further opportunity for representations to be made about the commission's final recommendations.

M80

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received from Cumbernauld development corporation on the line of route for the M80 extension between Stepps and Haggs; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 30 March 1993]: Discussions have taken place with Cumbernauld development corporation over a number of years on the line of route for the M80 extension. A formal presention of the road proposals was made to members and officials in August 1992 and shortly afterwards the corporation expressed its strong support for the route through the Kelvin valley.

Legal Aid

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what representations he has received from the Mental Welfare Commission for Scotland concerning the proposed changes to the contributary schemes for legal aid and legal advice and assistance; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what representations he has received from the Mental Welfare Commission for Scotland concerning the proposed changes to the eligibility criteria for legal aid and legal advice and assistance; and if he will make a statement;

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: [holding answer 30 March 1993]: The social work commissioner of the Mental Welfare Commission for Scotland wrote to the Scottish Office Home and Health Department on 15 March about the effect on the mentally disordered of the Government's proposed changes in eligibility for civil legal aid and advice and assistance.

The Government's intention is to ensure, in the face of considerable rises in expenditure on legal aid, that legal aid will continue to be available to the most needy. The financial circumstances of mentally disordered people will vary considerably, but it is likely that the great majority will remain eligible for civil legal aid or advice and assistance, either free of charge or with an income-related contribution.

NHS Pay Review

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress has been made towards the pay review for national health service workers due to take effect on 1 April; and if he will make a statement of Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the review.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 30 March 1993]: The Government's policy on pay in the public sector including the national health service was set out in my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer's statement in the House on 12 November 1992.

Doctors and dentists have accepted an offer of a 1·5 per cent. increase in pay and allowances with effect from 1 April 1993. Representatives of all other staff groups except clinical scientists, clinical psychologists and pharmacists are consulting their members about similar offers. Staff representatives are aware that these are final offers.

Smoke Alarms

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Paisley, south, (Mr. McMaster) on 19 January, Official Report, column 238, if he will bring forward regulations to require smoke alarms to be fitted to existing dwellings; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 30 March 1993]: Under the Building (Scotland) Act 1959, building control operates on the principle that a warrant must be obtained before work is carried out. The Building Standards Regulations and the technical standards which support them cannot therefore be applied retrospectively. Under amendments to the regulations and standards which my right hon. Friend intends shortly to lay before Parliament the fitting of mains-operated smoke alarms will become compulsory in all new dwellings.

DEFENCE

Royal Navy Personnel

Mrs. Angela Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to reach further conclusions about personnel numbers in the Royal Navy.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: As foreshadowed in my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Wimbledon (Dr. Goodson-Wickes) on 10 December 1992, Official Report, column 800, I can now confirm that, in the light of the overall reductions required in the Royal Navy, a third phase of Royal Navy redundancies will be necessary in 1994. The maximum overall number is likely to be of the order of 2,300, but further work is needed to determine precise numbers. Detailed terms will be promulgated within the Navy in the summer. We will be encouraging the maximum number of volunteers although some compulsory measures may be needed in order to achieve the proper balance of manpower within the Royal Navy.

Helicopter Carrier

Mr. Hutton: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Tynemouth (Mr. Trotter) of 29 March, Official Report, column 16, on what criteria tenders for the amphibious helicopter carrier will be evaluated; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: We will hold a full and fair competition for the contract, using our normal technical and value-for-money criteria. We expect to be in a position to award a contract for the amphibious helicopter carrier later this year.

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Tynemouth (Mr. Trotter) of 29 March, Official Report, column 16, what decision has been taken on the award of a contract to build the amphibious helicopter carrier; and on what grounds that decision was taken.

Mr. Aitken: No decision has yet been taken on the choice of contractor to build the amphibious helicopter carrier. We expect to be in a position to award the contract later this year, after a full and fair competition using our normal technical and value-for-money criteria.

Married Quarters

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how long married personnel will be allowed to remain in married quarters in (a) overseas postings and (b) the United Kingdom following the termination of their service with the armed services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: All married service personnel in the United Kingdom and overseas are required to vacate their quarters on the day of their discharge. They are, however, given six months advance warning to vacate their quarter as part of the resettlement procedure. Married service personnel overseas are given the opportunity to move to a quarter in the United Kingdom for the last six months of their service to enable them to look for alternative accommodation. The Ministry of Defence is sympathetic to the needs of ex-service families who face homelessness; in these circumstances ex-service personnel may be allowed to remain in their quarter until they have found alternative accommodation, as long as there are no pressing service requirements for the property.

EUCLID

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much has been spent on EUCLID; what is the breakdown of the expenditure; what evaluation of the quality need and effectiveness of these programmes is undertaken; and by whom.

Mr. Aitken: To date, about £160,000 has been spent extramurally on two contracts on interconnection and assembly of microelectronics and solid state laser sources. The quality, need and effectiveness of these programmes are evaluated by the defence staff in consultation with their scientific advisers.

Private Finance Initiative

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps his Department has taken to implement the private finance initiative announced in the autumn statement on 12 November 1992 and in the Treasury private finance guidance published on 9 December 1992.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The potential scope of the initiative will vary between departments. My Department is examining the scope for involving the private sector in the ways suggested by the interim guidance published by the Treasury on 9 December 1992, and the further published guidance on contract energy management—17 February 1993—and joint ventures—16 March 1993. I also refer the right hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 17 December 1992, Official Report, column 362.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what arrangements are made for the staff in his Department to carry out routine exercises to evaluate their guidelines for dealing with an accident involving the transportation of nuclear weapons; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Regular exercises of varying scale are sponsored by the Ministry of Defence to enable departmental and other staffs to practise the response to a nuclear transport accident.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what arrangements have been made for contacting local authorities when nuclear weapons convoys travel through their area; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Local civil police forces are always notified at least 24 hours in advance of nuclear weapon convoy movements through their area of responsibility. It is the accepted practice nationally that the civil police will co-ordinate the response of the other emergency services to all serious incidents and they would fulfil this same role in the event of an accident involving a nuclear weapon convoy.

Aldermaston

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many companies submitted bids to take over the running of the Aldermaston nuclear weapons plant; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: Three companies submitted bids for the contract to operate the atomic weapons establishment, which includes the Aldermaston site.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what procedure was followed in appointing a company to take over the running of the Aldermaston nuclear weapons plant; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: Comprehensive competitive tendering procedures were followed in selecting the contractor to operate the atomic weapons establishment, which includes the Aldermaston site.

Surplus Weapons

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the sale of surplus weapons.

Mr. Aitken: As the Comptroller and Auditor General noted in the recent National Audit Office report on disposal by sale of defence surplus equipment and stores —HC 557—my Department has made good progress in establishing a unified organisation for disposal by sale. We are pursuing joint venture schemes with industry, aimed at tackling the exceptional disposal activity necessary in the next few years, which is on a scale unprecedented since the end of the second world war.

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what steps he has taken to recruit women, members of ethnic minorities and disabled people, respectively, in top grades of employment at his Department.

Mr. Aitken: MOD recruitment into the fast stream is undertaken by the Recruitment and Assessment Services agency—RAS—on behalf of the Civil Service Commissioners. RAS has put in place a range of measures to aid the recruitment of minority groups. The principle of fair and open competition continues to apply, including the commitment to equal opportunities. The Department is considering with the Windsor Fellowship the possibility of sponsoring students of ethnic minority origin at the pre-recruitment stage for fast-stream entry. Consistent with departmental action programmes for women, ethnic minorities and those with disabilities, we have indicated to RAS our willingness to take fast-stream entrants from minority groups, and new recruits from all three groups have joined the Department in recent years.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when his Department last conducted surveys of (a) ethnic origins and (b) the number of women among its employees; when it next plans to do so; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: Ethnic monitoring of all civilian staff was introduced in 1988 as an important element of our equal opportunities policies. A further survey of all staff who did not reply to the initial survey was conducted in March 1991 and resulted in an improved response rate. Ethnic monitoring is a continuous process in the MOD, and all new entrants, except casual staff, are surveyed on joining. The information to establish the number of women employed in the Department is readily available from employment records; surveys to establish gender are therefore unnecessary.

Global Positioning System

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has received from his United States counterpart on the Pentagon's new global positioning system; and what are the implications for British defence plans of the deployment of the GPS by the United States of America.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Our forces have already made use of the global positioning system, and our use of this navigation aid is planned to increase as GPS receivers are fitted to a wider range of equipment. Under arrangements we have with the United States, there is regular consultation between officials about the system.

Ammunition Manufacture

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on progress made in the five-year supply tenders for ammunition manufacture announced in February.

Mr. Aitken: Tenders have been issued and are due for return at the end of April.

Exercise Team Spirit

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations have been received by Her Majesty's Government in regard to the security implications for the Korean peninsula of the Team Spirit military exercise.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We have received a small number of inquiries about Exercise Team Spirit.

Trident

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on progress made in testing the sonar system for the new Trident submarines.

Mr. Aitken: The sonar system was tested and cleared for the support of Vanguard's contractor's sea trials, and met Vanguard's requirements adequately. The system will undergo further comprehensive testing following Vanguard's acceptance into the Royal Navy later this year.

Management Consultants

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the management consultants employed by his Department in the last five years, indicating in each case the cost of the contract.

Mr. Aitken: The information requested is not held centrally and could not be compiled without disproportionate cost and effort.

Market Testing

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which professional services within his Department have been subjected to market testing within the last 12 months and with what result; and which will be subjected to market testing within the next 12 months.

Mr. Aitken: Functions involving professional staff that have been market tested in the past 12 months include:

elementary flying training;
helicopter maintenance and engineering support;
works service management at various locations;
engineering and supply services at RAF Scampton; management and operation of AWE Aldermaston; and aircraft support services at A&AEE Boscombe Down.

All except Boscombe Down resulted in the work being contractorised.

In the next 12 months we expect to market test:

spearfish torpedo in-service support;
information technology services;
armoured vehicle repair and refitting;
graphics and photography.

Bounties and Bonuses

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will make a statement on the principle that governs the payment of bonuses or bounties to members of the security forces; from what fund bounties or bonuses are paid to the security forces; and who determines the circumstances in which bonuses are paid to members of the security forces;

(2) how many bonuses have been paid to troops in the Province for reported sightings of (a) republican terrorist suspects and (b) loyalist terrorist suspects.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The only bounties or bonuses payable from public funds to soldiers in Northern Ireland are those relating to such matters as completion of periods of service or, in the case of the Royal Irish Regiment, home service part time, completion of annual attendance and training requirements. The authority for such payments is contained in the pay warrant and supporting regulations.

No payments have been made from public funds to soldiers in Northern Ireland for sightings of suspected terrorists. Local initiatives to make such incentive payments from non-public funds during the first quarter of 1993 have been terminated. There was only one award for a reported sighting, of a suspected "loyalist" terrorist.

Faslane (Security)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will set up an inquiry into the disclosure of detailed plans of the Clyde submarine base at Faslane to the Glasgow Evening Times; if he will review his policy of employing private security firms to protect top security installations like Faslane; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton [holding answer 29 March 1993]: The plans that have come into the hands of the Glasgow Evening Times are not classified and do not relate to any sensitive parts of the Clyde submarine base. Commercial security companies are not used to guard MOD operational or other sensitive installations. There is no reason to review this policy.

Housing

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will revise the upper price limit which the Housing Corporation has set on qualifying properties for the do-it-yourself shared ownership scheme.

Mr. Archie Hamilton [holding answer 31 March 1993]: It is the responsibility of the Housing Corporation, with the approval of the Department of the Environment, to set qualifying limits for DIYSO properties. I understand that new DIYSO value limits have been agreed, and will be introduced from 1 April 1993. Qualifying limits vary according to the type of house and area. These limits will enable the DIYSO programme to expand by making it available to first-time buyers who require family housing.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Private Finance Initiative

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps his Department has taken to implement the private finance initiative announced in the autumn statement on 12 November 1992 and in the Treasury private finance guidance published on 9 December 1992.

Mr. Curry: We have carried out a wide-ranging exercise to inform senior budget holders within the Department of the initiative and to determine the potential for the expansion of the use of private finance in the department's programmes. As the Department's capital programmes are modest, scope for the involvement of private finance is limited. We are, however, continuing to keep this initiative under regular review.

Live Animal Transport

Mr. Pike: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the number, by animal type, of live animals transported overseas for each of the last five years for which figures are available.

Mr. Curry: Details, by type, of the number of live animals exported can be found for the years 1988 to 1991 in the annual volumes of the "Overseas Trade Statistics" for the United Kingdom, while those for 1992 can be found in the December 1992 issue of the monthly version of the same publication. Copies of these publications are in the House of Commons Library. Details of live animal classification within SITC 00 are shown in the "Guide to Classification for Overseas Trade Statistics", which is also in the House of Commons Library.

Group Marketing Grant

Mr. Roger Evans: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the outcome of his review of the group marketing grant; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: We have today introduced a more accessible and user-friendly scheme in the light of the first year's experience and the comments received in a recent consultation exercise. The proposed changes were warmly welcomed by the industry. Copies of the new scheme have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Oil Dispersants

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what proposals he has to review his Ministry's system for testing and appraisal of oil dispersants for use at sea.

Mr. Curry: Our current arrangements for the testing and approval of dispersants for use on oil spilt at sea have been in place for a number of years. I have decided to review them. I shall be considering, in particular the standards against which dispersants are assessed for toxicity, efficiency and other aspects of performance; whether any changes are needed in the procedures for issuing approvals; the adequacy of information publicly available about the composition of dispersants.

In addition, together with other relevant Ministers, and with the advice of the marine pollution control unit and the Warren Spring Laboratory, I will take account of the circumstances in which the use of chemical dispersants is likely to remain the most effective way to protect the environment from oil spilt at sea.

My review will take into account any lessons learned from incidents in which dispersants have been used, and of the findings of the ecological steering group set up following the Braer incident by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and of Lord Donaldson's inquiry.

I will consult widely during the conduct of the review.

Agricultural Training Board

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what decisions have been taken about the future status, funding and operation of the Agricultural Training Board following the consultation exercise that took place last month.

Mr. Gummer: The consultation exercise generated a very high level of response. The important role played by training groups was highlighted, but there was some criticism of the current ATB operational structure. Overall, there was no clear consensus in the comments received in favour of the package of changes proposed or continuing with the current arrangements. Nevertheless, it was apparent from the comments that some further restructuring and rationalisation of the ATB would be appropriate. In the longer term, I consider that the industry's training needs could be best serviced by an industry training organisation—ITO—that is independent of government. However, there remain a number of issues to be resolved before I can confirm details of the changes. I will make a further announcement in due course.

Government funding from MAFF will reduce to £2·6 million per year and will in future be directed primarily towards core ITO activities. These include the identification of training needs, developing and setting standards and the promotion of training within the industry. In addition, some funding will be directed towards local training support activities. There will be some scope to vary these arrangments in different parts of the country to meet specific local needs. It will be for the ATB board to take decisions on the future structure of the ATB and the nature of any local representational arrangements in the light of the Government and commercial funding available to it.

Trichlorphon

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will take measures to ban the use of the pesticide trichlorphon.

Mr. Soames: I have no plans to ban trichlorphon.

Sheep Dips

Sir Jim Spicer: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he has received the advice of the Veterinary Products Committee on his request as to whether a moratorium on organophosphorous sheep dips would be appropriate; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer: Following my meeting with a parliamentary delegation on 16 February, I asked the Veterinary Products Committee for advice on whether it would be prudent, in the light of the evidence currently available, to have a moratorium on organophosphorous sheep dips until its current review of these products is complete. I have now received the following advice from the Committee:

"ORGANOPHOSPHOROUS SHEEP DIPS: VPC ADVICE

1. At its meeting on 25 March the Veterinary Products Committee considered the Minister's request for advice on whether it would be prudent in the light of the evidence currently available to have a moratorium on organophosphorous (OP) sheep dips until its current review of these products is complete. For this meeting the Committee was joined by Peter Blain, Professor in Environmental Medicine at Newcastle University Medical School, Miss P Casey of the National Poisons Information Service (Birmingham Centre), and Dr. G D'Mello and Mr. D Swanston, consultant toxicologists, acting as expert consultants and participating fully in the Committee's deliberations.

2. The Committee received the papers listed in the attached annex, saw photographs of the severe effects of sheep scab and myiasis (blowfly strike) in sheep, and heard presentations from the South West Environmental Protection Agency, the National Poisons Information Service (Guy's Hospital London Centre), the National Office of Animal Health, the Institute of Occupational Medicine at Edinburgh and the Health and Safety Executive.

3. The Committee were advised that unless preventive measures were taken to combat myiasis and sheep scab, these distressing and potentially fatal diseases could cause severe welfare problems in sheep. The Committee were also advised that it is the responsibility of farmers to safeguard the welfare of their animals. Concern was expressed about recent reports of the increased incidence of sheep scab and its potential for spread, bearing in mind the contagious nature of the infestation. The current incidence of myiasis in United Kingdom flocks also gave cause for concern.

4. The Committee noted:

reports alleging adverse health effects in humans arising from the use of OP sheep dips; evidence that exposure to OP compounds during dipping was greatly reduced if the correct protective clothing was worn and correct dipping practices followed;

that further research was in progress to assess the long term implications for human health from OP dip use; that some alternative products to OP dips were currently available for the prevention and treatment of sheep scab and myiasis, but insufficient quantities would be available for the (non statutory) 1993 summer dipping season; that if sheep scab and myiasis were left untreated serious animal welfare problems would ensue causing the deaths of many sheep;

that sheep dip could cause environmental harm if disposed of incorrectly.

5. After careful consideration of all the evidence available to it, the Committee advises that OP sheep dips should continue to be available for the 1993 summer dip but that the future licensing of these products should reconsidered at its October 1993 meeting when it would wish to conclude its current review on the basis of the further data currently being generated.

6. In the light of evidence of poor use of protective clothing and incorrect dipping practices however, the Committee recommends that the following action be taken:

the potential hazards arising from the misuse of these products should be re-emphasised; clear advice should be made available from dip manufacturers and suppliers of clothing on the types of personal protective equipment which should be used when working with OP sheep dips; hazard symbols should be included on product labels, and hazard warnings and instructions to users should be standardised; users of sheep dips should be strongly encouraged to obtain a certificate of competence in the safe use of veterinary medicines, recently introduced by the National Proficiency Tests Council;

HSE efforts to ensure that sheep dips are used safely should be endorsed; the continued reporting of suspected human adverse reactions to these products should be encouraged;

7. The Committee also recommends that:

consideration should be given to the siting of new dipping facilities, and the associated plans for dip disposal, being subject to planning controls with the regulatory water organisations as statutory consultees; better statistics on the actual usage of individual sheep dip products should be requested from the veterinary pharmaceutical industry.

—Diazinon

—Propetamphos

Data on impurities present in diazinon, chlorfenvinphos and propetamphos used in the manufacture of sheep dips.

Data on residues in fleece and lanolin and problems for the woollen industry."

I have accepted this advice and my officials are now discussing with representatives of the veterinary pharmaceutical industry, the companies concerned and other interested parties the arrangements for the urgent implementation of the committee's recommendations.

I am grateful to the committee for the full and careful consideration it has given to these difficult issues, and look forward to receiving further advice after its October meeting.

Copies of the published papers, and those marked as available to inquirers, identified in the annex listing papers considered by the Veterinary Products Committee at its meeting, have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Policy Discussion Papers

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will publish the terms of the letter of confidentiality required to be signed by merchant banks, accountancy practices and other independent advisers to Government Departments when advice on policy discussion papers is commissioned from the private sector; whether the terms of that letter are standard throughout all Government Departments; when he last reviewed the need for advisers to be constrained in this way; and what were his conclusions.

Mr. Waldegrave: It is for Departments and agencies individually to seek appropriate assurances of confidentiality from those with whom they have dealings. The terms of such assurances will vary according to the prevailing circumstances, including the nature of the official dealings. If my hon. Friend has a specific concern and will write to me with further details of it, I will pursue the matter further.

Private Finance Initiative

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps the Office of Public Service and Science has taken to implement the private finance initiative announced in the autumn statement on 12 November 1992 and in the Treasury private finance guidance published on 9 December 1992.

Mr. Waldegrave: My Department is examining the scope for involving the private sector in its areas of responsibility in the ways suggested by the interim guidance published by the Treasury on 9 December 1992, and the further published guidance on contract energy management—17 February 1993—and joint ventures—16 March 1993.

Discussions continue with the higher education funding councils and other departments about ways in which the joint funding of infrastructural facilities in the science base might be achieved. On 10 March 1993, I announced the success of the United Kingdom's bid to host the European bioinformatics institute at Cambridge, which will be funded by the Government and the Wellcome Trust.

Chessington Computer Centre

Mr. Tracey: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the future of the Chessington computer centre.

Mr. Waldegrave: I am pleased to announce that I have today established Chessington Computer Centre as an executive agency and trading fund within my Department. The arrangements for the agency are described in full in its framework document, copies of which have been placed in the Libraries of both houses.

Chessington provides a wide range of computerised payroll, personnel, financial accounting, superannuation awarding and other administrative services to customers in central Government and the wider public sector. Over 60 per cent. of civil servants are now paid using Chessington's payroll services and all computerised superannuation awards in central Government are made on Chessington's software. Executive agency and trading fund status will allow Chessington to develop its business on sound commercial lines, thereby enabling the agency to deliver increasing improvements in its services to customers, more efficiently and effectively.

I have set Chessington Computer Centre the following key targets:

(a) with the concurrence of the Treasury, the further financial target in 1993-94 of achievement of an operating surplus of £1.1 million.

(b) achievement of an average 6 per cent. increase in pay clerk productivity year on year over the period 1993-94 to 1995-96;

(c) for 1993-94, achievement of online availability of 97·5 per cent for all services; and

(d) over the period to 1995-96, meeting the quality of service standards agreed with customers in their customer service agreements.

Chessington is a definite candidate for privatisation. It is not being privatised immediately due to a lack of a commercial track record and of direct competition. Consideration of privatisation has been deferred to 1995 to give time for Chessington to establish its trading performance and for private sector competition to develop.

I have appointed Mr. Robert Edwards to be chief executive of Chessington. He will be directly accountable to me for the management and performance of Chessington. I wish him and all the staff of Chessington every success for the future.

Executive Agencies

Mr. Booth: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the progress of the next steps initiative.

Mr. Waldegrave: Work on agency creation has continued. During the first week of April a further 13 agencies will be launched. This will bring the total number of agencies to 89. More than 350,000 civil servants, almost 60 per cent. of the total, will be working in agencies and other organisations working on next steps lines. In addition, a further 19 candidates have been announced covering over 25,000 more civil servants and other areas are under consideration. All candidates will be identified by the end of 1993 with the aim of launching them by mid-1995—end-1994 and mid-1996 in Northern Ireland.

Within the civil service, agencies are a key vehicle for putting into practice the principles of the citizens charter. Some of the new agencies will issue a charter or charter standards statement at launch. Others will do so soon. All agencies are committed to delivering a high quality of service.

All the new agencies have been set key performance targets for their first year of operation. The details will be given by my right hon. Friends when announcing individual agency launches.

EMPLOYMENT

Electrical Equipment Certification Service

Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if she will make a statement on the future of the Health and Safety Executive's electrical equipment certification service.

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what legislation would be necessary to privatise the electrical equipment certification service; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Following a recent consultants' report, which recommended privatisation of the electrical equipment certification service, the future of the service is being considered by the Health and Safety Executive and the Health and Safety Commission.

Privatisation would require primary legislation and we will be seeking parliamentary approval for powers which would enable privatisation to proceed.

Unemployed People (Courses)

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether unemployed people who have once been required to attend either a Restart course or a jobplan workshop, and who have complied with that requirement, are free from a subsequent requirement to attend such a workshop or course in a particular spell of unemployment; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: It is not our intention that people should be required to attend more than one Restart course or more than one jobplan workshop within a spell of unemployment if they have already been required to attend and have completed the full programme.

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment who were the successful bidders for the contracts for jobplan workshops—JWPC/B93/12—and Restart courses—RCC/B93/11; what criteria were used for the selection of the successful tenders; and whether the lowest tenders were accepted.

Mr. McLoughlin: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Mr. Eric Illsley, dated March 1993:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State has asked me to write to you direct to respond to your Parliamentary Question about Restart Courses and Jobplan Workshops. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

It may help if I explain that contracts for Employment Service programmes are normally awarded as a result of competitive tendering. Such an exercise has recently been carried out for all Jobplan contracts and for Restart Courses contracts. Potential providers are normally invited to a briefing with the Employment Service Contract Manager where they are issued with the national specification for the programme that they wish to tender for. It is made clear at pre-briefing sessions that the over-riding factor which the Employment Service will consider when assessing tenders is value for money. I am attaching an extract from the Employment Service "Tendering and Contracting Guide" laying out the key criteria used to assess a tender. As you will see, these include cost factors but not to the exclusion of other items. Indeed, the point is stressed throughout the process that the Employment Service will not necessarily accept the lowest price on offer.

You refer to two specific cases in Barnsley. The Jobplan contracts have been awarded to the Chamber of Commerce Training (Barnsley) and Personal Evaluation Consultants, a local training organisation. The Restart Course contract has been awarded to the Chamber of Commerce Training (Barnsley). These organisations were judged to have submitted the best tenders. The decision followed full consideration of all the proposals in line with the guidelines set out by the Treasury's Public Purchasing Policy.

You asked whether the lowest tenders were accepted. I believe that it would be inappropriate to disclose confidential information relating to the costs of any of the individual proposals.

I hope this is helpful.

As decided by the Administration Committee of the House of Commons, Chief Executive replies to written Parliamentary Questions will now be published in the Official Report. I will also place a copy of this letter in the Library of the House.

10. Assessment of tenders

10.1 The over-riding principle is that the assessment process must be systematic, thorough and fair, and be seen as such. After the final schedule of tenders has been prepared, all tenders should be submitted at once to the ACM, who has the authority to recommend acceptance of a particular tender.

10.2 When assessing proposals the main factors to take into consideration are:

(i) that the proposal meets the required specification;

(ii) that 'value for money' is being met; in other words, that the desired quality can be achieved at a reasonable cost, that the proposed outputs are satisfactory;

(iii) the cost (including total costs, staff costs, premises costs, and consumable costs, VAT whether payable or not). A management fee, or profit margin can reasonably be included; it is the total cost which is important in relation to numbers helped/outputs specified;

(iv) the premises (accessibility, situation, space, heating, lighting, toilets, access for people with disabilities, etc);

(v) the ability and expertise of the tutor/leader, management support and back up arrangements;

(vi) other considerations eg administrative support, facilities and equipment; and

(vii) the ability of the provider to be flexible in the delivery of courses in terms of location, frequency and tutor/leader cover.

10.3 A record sheet should be completed to compare tenders on each of the major factors above. A suggested proforma is at Appendix 10.

10.4 Note: Tender cost comparisons should be made on the price before VAT is added.
The lowest tender should be accepted only if the quality of the proposed programme is considered to be of an acceptable and appropriate standard. The over-riding factor is "Value for Money".

10.5 Other factors may, however, influence the decision, eg, a more suitable location or a more experienced tutor or leader. It is therefore recommended that a shortlist of possible providers be drawn up.

Industrial Tribunals

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how engagement in an industrial tribunal hearing affects the state benefit status of the applicant.

Mr. McLoughlin: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M. E. G. Fogden to Ms Hilary Armstrong, dated March 1993:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State has asked me to write to you direct to respond to your Parliamentary Question to her about how engagement in an industrial tribunal hearing affects the state benefit status of the applicant. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

There are a range of possible effects which an Industrial Tribunal hearing may have on a claim for unemployment benefit and I have set them out below.

The Employment Protection Act gives employees statutory protection against unfair dismissal by their employer, along with other provisions concerning issues such as contractors of employment, wages questions and breach of contract, all of which are dealt with by Industrial Tribunals.

A claimant may be disqualified from receiving unemployment benefit for up to 26 weeks if they left their employment voluntarily or were dismissed because of misconduct. When a claim for unemployment is made, if it appears that the claimant contributed to their loss of employment, payments are withheld pending further enquiries of the claimant, their employer, or both and, where necessary, the decision of an independent adjudication officer is sought. If an Industrial Tribunal is pending and there is a conflict of evidence that cannot be resolved, the adjudication officer may refer the case to a Social Security Appeal Tribunal (SSAT) for a decision. The Social Security adjudicating authorities and the Industrial Tribunals are entirely independent of each other. Decisions of one are not binding on the other, however it is possible that the evidence recorded by the Industrial Tribunal may be taken into account by a SSAT in reaching their decision.

Where a decision is given in favour of the client any arrears of benefit withheld are paid. It is a fundamental condition for receipt of benefit that a person be available for work on each day that they claim. For someone attending a tribunal they would have to be available for work at 24 hours' notice.

Where an Industrial Tribunal makes an award under the Employment Protection Act the Secretary of State is empowered to recover from the award, some or all of the unemployment benefit or income support already paid for the same period. The amount of benefit to be recovered depends on the amount that is awarded by the Industrial Tribunal for the period between the date of dismissal and the date of the Industrial Tribunal hearing. If an award is made in respect of the future loss of earnings there may be no unemployment benefit entitlement for any part of the period specified in the award which falls within a year of the termination of the unemployment.

I hope this is helpful.

As decided by the Administration Committee of the House of Commons, Chief Executive replies to written Parliamentary Questions will now be published in the Official Report. I will also place a copy of this letter in the Library of the House.

Training Schemes

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what will be the benefit entitlement of unemployed people who take up places on (a) the learning for work programme and (b) the community action programme; in what ways these will differ from the situation of those who join training for work; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: People participating in learning for work and community action will receive an allowance equal to their unemployment benefit and/or income support entitlement when unemployed. Community action participants will receive an additional premium of £10 a week. In each case their eligibility for other social security benefits will be the same as that of training for work participants.

Electricity at Work Regulations 1989

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the estimated cost to British industry of the implementation of the Electricity at Work Regulations 1989.

Mr. McLoughlin: At the time of the drafting of these regulations, the Health and Safety Executive estimated that the quantifiable costs to employers would be in the order of £250,000 per annum at 1988 prices.

Employers who were already complying with existing legal requirements regarding the maintenance of electrical equipment should not have found it necessary to incur additional charges in order to comply with these regulations.

Unemployment, Liverpool

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is the unemployment figure for the travel-to-work area of the city of Liverpool in figures and percentage terms at the latest available date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: In February 1993, unadjusted claimant unemployment in the Liverpool travel-to-work area was 73,996 or 15·2 per cent. of the work force. This is 29 per cent. lower than in June 1986, when claimant unemployment in the region was at its peak.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps she plans to improve the unemployment situation in the city of Liverpool; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: The overall policy of the Department is to promote a free and flexible labour market that is designed to help encourage employment in Liverpool, as in all areas. In addition, the Department provides a range of employment and training programmes and local initiatives, through the Employment Service and training and enterprise councils, to help people increase their skills, and equip themselves for work. From April 1993, this range of measures is being enhanced and expanded.

Cricketers

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) how many applications by professional cricketers for work permits to play cricket in the United Kingdom have been (a) granted and (b) refused to date in 1993; what changes have been made this year to the criteria for granting work permits; which British cricketing organisations were consulted about policy changes for granting work permits; and if she will make a statement;

(2) how many work permits were issued by the overseas labour section to cricketers to play cricket in the United Kingdom in each year since 1990; how many applications for work permits were (a) granted and (b) refused by country or origin in each year; what are the qualifying criteria for granting work permits; and on what dates such criteria were altered.

Mr. McLoughlin: Information about the number of work permits issued by the overseas labour section for cricketers to play in Great Britain is not available. Work permits are issued only to cricketers who have experience of playing first-class cricket in their own country and who it is considered will not take employment away from resident players. The terms and conditions on offer have to be equivalent to those which apply to resident players.

The Department has a consistent policy with regard to the issue of work permits for cricketers. The criteria have not changed and, following discussions with the League Cricket Conference, Test and County Cricket Board, National Cricket Association and the Scottish Cricket Union, no changes are envisaged.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment on what basis Indian and Pakistani nationals who are professional cricketers are judged to be qualified to apply for work permits to play cricket in the United Kingdom; how many appeals against refusal to grant a work permit have been lodged this year, to date; and how many appeals (a) have been upheld, (b) have been dismissed and (c) are awaiting decision.

Mr. McLoughlin: Applications to employ professional cricketers who are Indian and Pakistani nationals are considered on the same basis as those for players from any other country. Information about appeals against decisions to refuse applications for cricketers is not available.

Health and Safety

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will list the number of prosecutions made in each EC country for breaches in each country's health and safety legislation and the total fines realised in each of the last three years.

Mr. McLoughlin [holding answer 30 March 1993]: The information is not available in the form requested. The Health and Safety Executive (HSE) has carried out a comparison of accident statistics in France, Italy, Germany and Spain compared with the United Kingdom. The conclusions were published in 1991 in "Workplace Health and Safety in Europe", a copy of which is in the Library.

During the United Kingdom presidency, we gave prominence to the need for a more consistent approach to the implementation and enforcement of EC legislation, including directives on health and safety. A comparison of sanction arrangements in member states would be useful in this context. We would hope that the Commission could include such a study in its future work programme.

Noise at Work

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many prohibition notices were issued against employers in 1990-91 and 1991-92 relating to the control of noise at work for each of the geographical areas of (a) the factory inspectorate, (b) the agricultural inspectorate and (c) the quarries inspectorate; and what were the penalties in each case.

Mr. McLoughlin: Prohibition notices do not impose explicit penalties. They are issued when there is a risk of serious personal injury. They require specified remedial action to be taken, usually immediately, to comply with the relevant statutory provisions.

The following requirements were made on prohibition notices issued during the periods 1990-91 and 1991-92.

Safety and Hygiene

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if she will give the full title of the projects and the amount of funding asked for in the applications for EC funding for the European Year of Safety, Hygiene and Health Protection from March 1992 to February 1993.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The United Kingdom received 330 applications, which asked in total for nearly 9·8 mecu. I shall place a list of the project titles in the Library.

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment which projects related to the European Year of Safety, Hygiene and Health Protection, have received an EC grant of 1 million ecu or more.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: None in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what has been the outcome of the individual projects supported with regard to improving the health, safety or welfare of employees at work during the European Year of Safety, Hygiene and Health Protection 1992-93; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The United Kingdom is currently contributing to the European Commission's final assessment of the year, which will include information about EC-supported projects. It will be published in October 1993 and I shall place a copy in the Library. In making recommendations for EC funding, the United Kingdom sought to support practical initiatives to improve health and safety in the workplace.

Employment, Greater London

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what her Department forecasts to be the size of the Greater London labour force in 2000; and what it forecasts to be the total number of jobs available in the capital in the same year.

Mr. McLoughlin: In the year 2000, the civilian labour force in Greater London is projected to be 3,485,000. The Department does not make forecasts of employment or unemployment.

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if she will list the number of employees in employment in the Greater London area in each main sector for each year since 1979.

Mr. McLoughlin: The information is available from September 1981 from the NOMIS database in the Library.

Gas Boilers

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans she has to improve safety inspection arrangements for domestic gas boilers and flues in holiday homes available for commercial rent.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Gas Safety (Installation and Use) Regulations 1984 cover the installation, maintenance and use of most domestic gas appliances. However, they do not require landlords to service such appliances in their properties. The regulations are currently under review and the Health and Safety Commission is expected to publish a consultative document later in the year.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Private Finance Initiatives

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what steps his Department has taken to implement the private finance initiative announced in the autumn statement on 12 November 1992 and in the "Treasury Private Finance Guidance" published on 9 December 1992.

Mr. John M. Taylor: Our early examination of how the Government's private finance initiative might be pursued within the Lord Chancellor's Department has not identified any immediate possibilities for joint ventures, and our present leasing of equipment from the private sector falls outside the scope of the initiative. We will continue to seek the most efficient means of financing procurement and capital projects, including the possibility of private sector investment.

Recorders

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many women recorders and assistant recorders there are.

Mr. John M. Taylor: As at 1 March 1993, there were 41 female recorders out of a total of 828 and 50 female assistant recorders out of a total of 428.

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many ethnic minority recorders and assistant recorders there are.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The ethnic origin of applicants for judicial appointment was not recorded prior to the autumn of 1991 so the available information may not be complete. As at 1 March 1993 there were, however, 10 recorders out of a total of 828 and seven assistant recorders out of a total of 428 who are believed to be of ethnic minority origin.

Lease Assignments

Mr. Stephen: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will introduce legislation to abolish the liability of original losses, by virtue of privity of contract, for the defaults of assignees of their lease.

Mr. John M. Taylor: I refer to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for High Peak (Mr. Hendry) on 31 March 1993, Official Report, column 197.

Circuit Judges

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many circuit judges are aged over 65 years.

Mr. John M. Taylor: As at 1 March 1993, there were 490 circuit judges in post. Of these, 101 had passed their 65th birthday.

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many circuit judges have already completed 15 years' service.

Mr. John M. Taylor: As at 1 March 1993, 61 out of the 490 circuit judges in post had completed 15 years' service as circuit judges.

Land Ownership

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what proportion of land acreage in England and Wales is currently owned by trusts located outside the United Kingdom.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Land Registry does not maintain statistics relating to registered land acreage or to the purpose or nature of business of registered proprietors. To obtain the information requested would involve an inspection of each specific registration and this could be done only at disproportionate cost.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Janner: To ask the Attorney-General when the Law Officers Departments last conducted surveys of (a) ethnic origins and (b) the number of women among their employees; when they next plan to do so; and whether he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: The position in the Departments for which I am responsible is as follows:

(a) survey of ethnic origins—the Crown prosecution service conducted a survey in January 1990, which was followed up in June 1990 and December 1991. In the next few months, the service will be resurveying those who have not yet submitted a questionnaire. All new entrants to the service are required to complete a questionnaire on application. The Treasury Solicitor's Department last conducted a survey in January 1993 and the next survey will be in January 1994. The Serious Fraud Office has not conducted a specific survey, and has no plans to do so, as the information is available from staff records.

(b) Survey of the number of women—neither the Crown prosecution service nor the SFO undertakes, or plans to undertake, particular surveys of the sex of staff, as the information is available from staff records. The Treasury Solicitor's Department last conducted a survey in January 1993 and the next survey will be in January 1994.

Neither survey has been conducted, or is planned to be conducted, in respect of members of the legal secretariat, as they are on secondment from other Government Departments.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Attorney-General what steps he has taken to recruit women, members of ethnic minorities and disabled people, respectively, in top grades of employment at the Law Officers' Departments.

The Attorney-General: Recruits to the senior grades —as to any grade in the civil service—are selected on merit on the basis of fair and open competition, unless one of the exceptions permitted under the Civil Service Order in Council 1991 applies. Various steps have been taken by the Civil Service Commissioners to aid recruitment from all sectors of the community including extending links with institutions of higher education; equal opportunities training for those involved in selection; and using validated selection procedures.

Both the Crown prosecution service and the Serious Fraud Office have joined Opportunity 2000. The Crown prosecution service published a "Programme for Action on Race" in October 1991 and will release shortly a similar "Programme for Action on Disability".

Mr. Janner: To ask the Attorney-General how many and what percentage of officers in each grade from 1 to 7 and overall in the Law Officers' Departments are (a) women, (b) from ethnic minorities and (c) disabled people.

The Attorney-General: The position in the Departments for which I am responsible is as follows:

ENVIRONMENT

Council Housing

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which local authorities have sold off all of their council housing stock.

Mr. Baldry: To date, a total of 21 local authorities have disposed of all, or the vast majority, of their housing stock through large-scale voluntary transfers. The councils concerned are listed in the table. Those marked with an asterisk no longer have any council housing stock other than hostels or part shares in dwellings sold under shared ownership schemes.

Council Tax

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the average band C council tax in Conservative-controlled, Labour-controlled and Liberal-controlled local authorities.

Mr. Robin Squire: The average headline band C council tax in areas under Conservative control is £456. This is £107 lower than the corresponding figure for Labour areas and £19 lower than the corresponding figure for Liberal areas.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list, for each of the last five years, the duration, value and nature of contracts awarded by his Department to Arthur Andersen, Andersen Consulting, KPMG Peat Marwick McLintock, Touche Ross, Ernst and Young and Price Waterhouse.

Mr. Howard: The information requested is not held centrally by my Department and can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Solihull Unitary Development Plan

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he now proposes to review the housing figure of 7,500 in the Solihull unitary development plan originally recommended in the west midlands strategic guidance of February 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: The strategic guidance for the west midlands, published in February 1988, establishes the level of new housing completions to be provided in individual unitary development plans between April 1988 and March 2001. The Secretary of State considers that it is not the role of those individual plans to review the strategic guidance figures. Such a review will be carried out in the context of regional guidance for the west midlands, which the Secretary of State intends to publish during 1994.

The inspector into the Solihull unitary development plan endorsed this approach. However, in examining the level of housing supply needed to meet the figure of 7,500, he concluded that further sites should be identified, and he also indicated that the authority should identify a reasonable amount of further land to meet longer-term development needs. The borough council is considering his recommendations and will publish its response in the form of proposed modifications, which will themselves be open to objection.

Urban Regeneration Agency

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many applications have been received for the post of chief executive of the Urban Regeneration Agency; when interviews will be held; and who will decide who is to be appointed.

Mr. Robin Squire: A total of 178 applications have been received. The date for interviews has yet to be set. Lord Walker, as the Urban Regeneration Agency's chairman-designate, will play a leading role in the selection process, and the appointment will be made by the agency when established.

India

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on matters discussed and decisions taken during his recent visit to India.

Mr. Howard: I visited India from 17 to 21 March in order to underline United Kingdom support for environment conservation measures in India and to emphasise our interest in further co-operation as well as to continue the dialogue with India on international environmental issues.

I toured the Western Ghats forestry project in Karnataka state where our Overseas Development Administration is funding the joint management by local people and the authorities of a large forest area. In Delhi, I had constructive and practical discussions with members of the Indian Government on environmental issues, including the important role our two countries are playing in the follow-up to Rio, on possible further joint initiatives in that context, on international co-operation and on the ways in which British industry can collaborate with and work in India, particularly in the context of the Indo-British partnership initiative. I also met environmental scientists and held discussions with leading industrialists.

Energy Efficiency

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 11 December 1992, Official Report, columns 835-36, what have been the sources of the representations made to the Energy Efficiency Office recommending the abolition of the client contribution.

Mr. Maclean: My noble Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State has received a number of representations from Neighbourhood Energy Action on the abolition of the client contribution. In addition, letters in support of Neighbourhood Energy Action's request have been received from one hon. Member and the chairman of British Gas.

Woodgate Valley Site

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received regarding the future use of Woodgate Valley site A in Birmingham.

Mr. Baldry: The Secretary of State has received three letters objecting to the recommendation to allocate the site for industrial use made by the inspector, who held a public inquiry into Birmingham's unitary development plan between November 1991 and February 1992.

Local Authorities (Complaints System)

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many local authorities have a formal complaints system for service users; and if he will list them.

Mr. Robin Squire: This information is not held centrally. The position of individual local authorities will be published in local newspapers next year as part of the Audit Commission's work on local government performance indicators. National information will be published by the commission in 1995.

Opencast Mining

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his Department's policy with regard to planning appeals in respect of existing opencast mining applications; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. and learned Friend gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Erewash (Mrs. Knight), on 25 March, Official Report, columns 714-15.

Housing Partnership Scheme

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list, by local authority, the total bid for funding under the housing partnership scheme and indicate the allocation made in cash terms and as a percentage of the bid.

Mr. Baldry: I will write to the hon. Gentleman.

National Parks

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are his current plans in relation to legislation for the creation of a new board structure for the administration of national park authorities in England and Wales.

Mr. Maclean: Our policy statement on the national parks, published in January 1992, promised legislation to create independent authorities for the eight national parks in England and Wales currently run as county council committees. I fully recognise the importance of introducing national park legislation at the earliest opportunity and I have repeatedly said that we will do so.

Correspondence

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the hon. Member for Walsall, North will be receiving a reply to his letter of 1 March on behalf of a constituent and which had been originally sent to the Department of Social Security.

Mr. Robin Squire: I replied to the hon. Member on 31 March 1993.

Olympic Games

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans his Department has to enable London to be considered in the future as a suitable city to host the Olympic games.

Mr. Baldry: None.

Bolton Council

Mr. Knapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has concluded his consideration of the response from Bolton metropolitan borough council to the notice served on the authority on 29 October 1992 under section 19A of the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. and learned Friend has now completed his careful consideration of the response which Bolton has made to the notice served on the authority on 29 October 1992, and has today given a direction under section 19B of the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980. The effect of the direction is that the authority is required to demonstrate to the Secretary of State's satisfaction that before the current arrangements come to an end in March 1995, the tendering conditions set out in section 9(4) of the Act, have been complied with before any of this building maintenance work is again assigned to the direct labour organisation.

Council Tax Capping

Mr. Booth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how local authorities have budgeted for 1993-94; what decisions in the light of those budgets he has reached on council tax capping for 1993-94; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: This year, the first years of the council tax, all but a tiny minority of authorities have set affordable budgets and council taxes. Only three of 419 English authorities have in my opinion set budgets which are excessive or represent an excessive year-on-year increase.

I have designated these three authorities—Castle Point, Gloucestershire, and Harlow—for capping and I have proposed caps as shown in the table.

	Authority's 1993-94 budget	Proposed cap	Original council tax for 2 adult band D dwelling	Council tax reduction implied by proposed cap for 2 adult band D dwelling
	£ million	£ million	£	£
Castle Point	8·470	7·97	625	18
Gloucestershire	316·889	306·61	(474·636)	55
Harlow	17·953	11·20	987	288

The principles that I have adopted for selecting these authorities broadly give effect to the provisional criteria which I announced to the House on 26 November 1992.

I consider, on the basis of all the available information, that my proposed caps are reasonable, appropriate and achievable in all the circumstances of the authorities concerned. If the authorities accept my proposed caps new lower bills will be able to be issued without delay.

Authorities have 28 days in which to accept or challenge my proposed caps. In the latter case, they must specify an alternative cap, together with their reasons for it. In such circumstances, it is open to me to set the final cap at the level originally proposed or some different amount. If an authority does not accept my proposed cap I have to set the final cap by order, a draft of which must be approved by the House of Commons.

Local Income Tax

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will exemplify, for a single person on average earnings, what would be the annual liability and the rate in the pound under a local income tax system for each local authority area in England in 1993-94 assuming (a) the budgets which local authorities have set for that year and (b) full resource equalisation.

Mr. Robin Squire: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Toxic Waste (Transport)

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what steps he has taken to (a) monitor and (b) prevent the import of toxic waste cargo containing dioxin TCDD from Hamburg through Hull to Pontypool;

(2) when he now intends to implement a ban on the import of toxic waste from developed countries;

(3) what information he has about the proposed importation of toxic waste containing dioxin TCDD from Hamburg through Hull to Pontypool.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 26 March 1993]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Torfaen (Mr. Murphy) on 30 March, Official Report, column 138.

The Government intend to use the EC waste shipments regulation after it applies in May 1994 to reduce, as far as possible, the amount of waste imported for final disposal.

EDUCATION

Private Finance Initiative

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what steps his Department has taken to implement the private finance initiative announced in the autumn statement on 12 November 1992 and in the Treasury private finance guidance published on 9 December 1992.

Mr. Forth: The reply that I gave to my right hon. Friend on 17 December 1992, Official Report, column 347, set out the Department's role in supporting the introduction of private finance in schools, further and higher education. The Department is now examining the scope for involving the private sector in the ways suggested by the interim guidance published by the Treasury on 9 December 1992, and the further published guidance on contract energy management—17 February 1993—and joint ventures—16 March 1993.

Sex Education

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) what plans he has to allow the introduction of condoms in schools;

(2) if he will bring forward proposals to ensure that sex education in schools embraces a moral code and the responsibilities of parenthood.

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend has no such plans. Section 46 of the Education (No 2) Act 1986 already requires that any sex education which schools provide—whether or not it is required as part of the national curriculum—should be given in such a manner as to encourage pupils to have due regard to moral considerations and the value of family life.

Testbourne School, Whitchurch

Sir David Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education when he expects to take a decision on the application of Testbourne school, Whitchurch, Hampshire, for grant-maintained status; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend has approved the application for the acquisition of grant-maintained status by Testbourne school with effect from 1 September 1993.

Staff-Student Ratios

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what are the latest staff-to-student ratios in further and higher education colleges and universities.

Mr. Boswell: Data for student to staff ratios in further and higher education and universities are shown in the table for the academic year 1991-92.

	1991-92
LEA Maintained establishments
Futher education	11·9
Higher education[1]	9·1
PCFC Institutions	17·0
Universities (Great Britain)	[2]12·5

[1] Following the transfer of polytechnics and colleges of higher education to the Polytechnics and Colleges Funding Council (PCFC) in 1989 higher education forms only a small part of the provision in maintained establishments.

[2] Provisional.

Teachers' Pay

Mr. Mark Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will make a statement about teachers' pay in 1993-94.

Mr. Patten: On 12 February, the Prime Minister announced that the Government proposed to implement, with modifications, the recommendations of the School Teachers' Review Body for teachers' pay in England and Wales for 1993-94. After careful consideration of the representations I have received from the local authorities, the teachers' associations and others, I remain convinced that the restructuring recommended by the STRB is the right way forward, and I intend to implement it on 1 September 1993. In the light of the observations that have been made to me, I have decided to ease the introduction of the new pay spine by offering some flexibility in the assimilation arrangements, where this proves necessary.

Firstly, there will be cash safeguarding to ensure that no teacher will be worse off under the new arrangements on 1 September than if the old structure had been left in place. This safeguarding will be lifted as soon as a teacher's points entitlement under the new system overtakes the safeguarded salary.

Secondly, while LEAs and schools are expected to implement the new structure, they may, if necessary, preserve the discretionary inner London supplement for one more year as a separate allowance of £822 for the teachers who now hold it, instead of converting it into an extra spine point. No new payments will be authorised, but the new system will permit a third point on the spine to be awarded for recruitment or retention in inner London schools.

Thirdly, discretionary scale points may also be preserved for one more year at their 31 August cash value, instead of being converted automatically into new spine points. There will be no new awards of discretionary scale points. The new structure will permit up to three spine points to be awarded for excellence, which in many cases will overtake the discretionary scale points from 1 September.

These changes will not significantly vary the cost of the award, which falls within the 0–1·5 per cent. range for pay settlements in the public sector.

In response to requests for clarification of entitlement to the mandatory spine point for teachers of pupils in ordinary schools with special educational needs, I have decided that the new school teachers' pay and conditions document will define such entitlement in terms of those wholly or mainly teaching pupils with statements of special educational needs.

I am today laying before Parliament a pay and conditions order bringing into force the new rates of pay which will apply from 1 April, and providing for lump sum payments of £90 to be made to qualified classroom teachers in May. Copies of this order, and details of the revised arrangements for the introduction of the new pay spine in September, are being sent to all maintained schools, to all local education authorities and to the teachers' and employers' associations.

Drafts of the school teachers' pay and conditions document 1993, which will set out the details of the new pay structure which is to apply from 1 September and will provide for assimilation from the old structure to the new, and of the associated circular of guidance, will shortly be sent to the relevant teachers' and employers' associations and to representatives of the governors of voluntary schools and grant-maintained schools.

Violence in Schools

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what assessment has been made of the change in the incidence of violence in schools since the abolition of corporal punishment.

Mr. Forth: The Department has not commissioned any such studies.

Physical Education

Ms Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is the average number of hours per week allocated to physical education in (a) primary schools and (b) secondary schools.

Mr. Forth: This information is not available.

Undergraduates (Suicides)

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many students at English universities have committed suicide in each of the last three years; and how many were male and how many female.

Mr. Boswell: The table shows numbers of deaths in England and Wales from suicide for full-time students aged 18 and over.

Men	73	57	64
Women	15	15	21
Total	88	72	85

The suicides in the three years represent approximately 11 per 100,000 of the full-time student population in further and higher education aged 18 and over.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Royal Parks

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what progress has been made towards establishing the royal parks as an executive agency; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: I am pleased to announce that the Royal Parks Agency will be established today. The royal parks are London's most important recreational areas. They are important historic landscapes which make a vital contribution to the character of the city alongside its great buildings. The aims and objectives of the agency are set out in a framework document, copies of which will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses of Parliament. I am confident that the managerial freedoms granted to the chief executive in the framework document will enable the Royal Parks Agency to provide the highest standards of excellence and customer service. The key targets which I have set the agency for its first year of operation are:

Conservation

1. To prepare up-to-date condition surveys and prepare renovation and forward maintenance programmes for trees, buildings and horticulture.
2. To develop and institute during 1993-94 an independent assessment of the horticultural quality of each of the Royal Parks.

Visitors

3. To develop and carry out surveys of visitors to the Royal Parks to identify their views and to develop a basis for setting and publishing targets relating to visitor satisfaction for future years.

Financial

4. To introduce charges for car parking in Hyde Park and Regent's Park by September 1993, and to increase by 5 per cent. income from all other sources, except for recharges and VAT refunds.

Citizen's Charter

5. To complete the implmentation of the Citizen's Charter in the Royal Parks. In particular, to publish a Charter standard statement, by the end of November, setting out quantifiable levels of customer service and to report regularly and publicly on performance against these standards.

Efficiency

6. To make efficiency savings of 1·5 per cent. on running costs.
7. To finalise an Information Technology strategy for the Agency, agree a phased programme for implementation and commence implementation in accordance with the programme.

Market Testing

8. To complete the market testing of the management of the works programme by June 1993, and to prepare a report to Ministers, by December 1993, on what further scope there is in the Agency for market testing work.

The chief executive, Mr. David Welch, will be directly accountable to me for the performance of the Royal Parks Agency. An independent advisory group will advise me on the agency's strategy and performance.

Bletchley Park

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage on what grounds he has refused to add Bletchley park and the historic huts sited in its grounds to the statutory list; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Key: My decision not to list the huts at Bletchley park was based on advice from English Heritage, my statutory professional advisers.

The great historical importance of the events which took place at Bletchley park is fully appreciated, but English Heritage's advice is that the huts are of no architectural significance in themselves and do not illustrate the events that took place there. No original machines or other fixtures survive.

Bletchley park house, the headquarters building of the operational centre, is a listed building; and the whole of the site has been designated a conservation area. This means that demolition of any of the huts would require consent from the local planning authority.

TRANSPORT

Congestion Charging Technology

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he intends to publish the review of congestion charging technology commissioned by his Department as part of the London congestion charging research programme.

Mr. MacGregor: I am pleased to announce that this report, produced by the university of Newcastle upon Tyne, was published yesterday. It describes the main technical options and provides an initial assessment. Copies have been placed in the House of Commons Library.

Private Finance Initiative

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps his Department has taken to implement the private finance initiative announced in the autumn statement on 12 November 1992 and in the Treasury private finance guidance published on 9 December 1992.

Mr. MacGregor: I refer my right hon. Friend to the answer given to my hon. Friend the Member for Southport (Mr. Banks) on 29 March, Official Report, column 5.

Regional Air Services

Mr. Hicks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those United Kingdom regions that satisfy the criteria under article 9 of the EC Council Regulation No. 95/93 allowing slots at major airports to be reserved for regional air services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: There are no plans to apply the provisions of article 9, and consequently no assessment has been made of which regions, if any, would meet the criteria specified in the article.

Air Charter Services

Mr. Haselhurst: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those countries which operate controls on the number of charter services operating from the United Kingdom.

Mr. Norris: From the information available to us, a number of countries place restrictions on the number of charter services operating from the United Kingdom. Canada and Australia limit the number of airports which may be served in their territory. Cyprus and to a lesser extent Malta limit the airports in the United Kingdom from which charters may operate. Iceland, Israel and Russia tend not to allow charter services to operate on routes which are already served by a scheduled service.

Car Immobilisers

Sir Ivan Lawrence: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he intends to introduce legislation making it obligatory for motor car manufacturers to make car immobilisation devices standard features; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: There is a legal requirement under the Type Approval (Great Britain) Regulations 1984 for cars to be fitted with an immobilising device. This normally is a steering column lock acting as an electrical and a mechanical immobiliser. Car thieves have, however, found ways of defeating such devices made to current legal standards and some manufacturers are fitting more sophisticated devices. We are also working with our EC partners to improve the legal standards for immobilisers.

Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many first registrations were handled by the DVLA for 1990, 1991 and 1992.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: DVLA handles the first registration of all vehicles in Great Britain. The information requested is as follows:

January	256,550	188,430	150,627
February	200,750	146,148	142,183
March	193,385	146,751	143,290
April	217,345	199,569	169,824

December	87,436	84,496	107,834
Totals	2,447,991	1,922,681	1,891,183

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans the DVLA has, in bidding for the register of seamen and shipping, to move the work to Swansea.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The invitations to tender for the services provided by the register of shipping and seamen have yet to be issued. If the DVLA is invited to tender and a decision is taken to bid for the work, all the associated issues will be fully addressed in the agency's tender document.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport in which parliamentary constituency each DVLA office is situated.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The information requested is as follows:

Office	Parliamentary constituency
Aberdeen	Aberdeen, South
Bangor	Conwy
Birmingham	Birmingham, Ladywood

[2] DVLC and VRO.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will list, for each year that the agency has existed, the income generated by the DVLA, the numbers of staff by grace in the driver and vaehicle licensing centre, Swansea, and the numbers of staff by grade in the agency outside Swansea;

(2) what proportion of the DVLA's income has gone to the Treasury in each year since its establishment.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The total revenue and other income collected by the DVLA in the two complete financial years since it became an agency was:

	1990-91 £'000	1991-92 £'000
(i) Vehicle Excise Duty (net of refunds) passed to the Consolidated Fund	2,930,361	2,930,645
(ii) Fees and other Receipts passed to the Consolidated Fund	48,799	68,438
(iii) Receipts Appropriated to the DVLA	16,082	21,142

The average staff in post during those years, by grade, was:

[1] Excludes staff employed in the Driver, Vehicle and Operator Information Technology agency.

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those areas of work that the DVLA intends to bid for, or is at present bidding for, following the changes in the framework document.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The DVLA framework document came into force on 2 April 1990 and has not been subject to revision. In order to spread overheads and improve efficiency the agency's policy is to explore opportunities to enhance and expand the range of services provided in the light of the wishes of customers and in keeping with Government policy. Details of the DVLA's current bids for work are classified as commercial in confidence.

Driver and Vehicle Licensing Centre

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many females are employed in the DVLC, Swansea.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: At the end of March 1993 there were a total of 2,448 females employed in the DVLC, Swansea of whom 496 were part-time or job-sharing employees. This total represents just over 70 per cent. of the Swansea work force.

Road Schemes

Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress is being made on taking forward road schemes using design and build contracts.

Mr. MacGregor: The success of the trial schemes at Thetford and Yellowham has encouraged us to move on to bigger projects and I am pleased to announce that four more schemes are to be taken forward this way. My hon. Friend the Minister for Roads and Traffic has today announced the decision to go ahead with the A45 Stonebridge improvement scheme to the east of Birmingham. The aim is to seek tenders for this £10 million scheme in May and to start work early next year.

Also in the spring of next year, and subject of course to completion of statutory processes, we propose to initiate our largest design and build scheme to date. The £85 million widening of the M25, within highway boundaries, to dual four lanes between junctions 8 and 10 will provide contractors with ample opportunity to demonstrate their skills to build this 14-mile length of road with minimum disruption to users of the motorway.

We intend appointing a contractor to design and build replacement viaducts at the A38 Marsh Mills interchange in Plymouth. Our aim is to select a contractor later this year with a view to work starting in early 1994.

We are preparing also a contract to trial design and build on a major maintenance scheme for M25 between junctions 2 and 3. We expect to invite tenders in May with a view to an award of contract in August.

This package of schemes illustrates the Government's commitment to reducing congestion on our roads by harnessing the initiative of contractors to secure the most up-to-date and cost-effective methods. The taxpayer will also benefit from greater certainty over timing and cost.

Railway Pension Schemes

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will undertake to conduct a ballot of railway pensioners before imposing any revised scheme for the management of their pension fund.

Mr. Freeman: It is for the trustees, trade unions, pensioners' bodies and individuals to make representations on the basis of the consultative document "Railway Pensions after Privatisation". They have done so extensively.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many representations he has received on the future of railway pension schemes in response to his consultation document.

Mr. Freeman: In addition to representations from the British Railways Board, the British Rail Pension Trustee Company Limited and the railway trade unions, we have received responses from many other interested organisations, and numerous individual railway employees and pensioners. We are analysing these responses.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to revise the options offered to existing railway pensioners, as defined in paragraph 37 of his consultation document.

Mr. Freeman: As I informed Standing Committee B on 23 March, the Government aim to make decisions by the Report stage of the Railways Bill.

Rail Transport

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects British Rail to issue a revised edition of its conditions of carriage as promised by the passengers charter.

Mr. Freeman: I understand that the revised conditions are about to be published and will come into effect on 17 May, along with the summer timetable.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Trees

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish the report by the World Conservation Monitoring Centre on threats of extinction to tree species.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: This report was produced in February 1991 by the World Conservation Monitoring Centre under contract to the International Tropical Timber Organisation and paid for by the Government of Japan. We have no plans to publish it.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Janner: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many and what percentage of officers in each grade from 1 to 7 and overall in the Privy Council Office are (a) women, (b) from ethnic minorities and (c) disabled people.

Mr. Newton: The Privy Council has no staff at grades 1 or 2. At grades 3 to 7 it has five staff, one of whom is a woman—grade 7—and none of whom are from ethnic minorities or disabled. Overall, 50 per cent. of current Privy Council staff are women, and 6 per cent. are from ethnic minorities. None is disabled.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Lord President of the Council when the Privy Council Office last conducted surveys of (a) ethnic origins and (b) the number of women among its employees; when it next plans to do so; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: Given the size of the office—32 staff—such surveys are inappropriate.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Lord President of the Council what steps he has taken to recruit women, members of ethnic minorities and disabled people, respectively, in top grades of employment at the Privy Council Office.

Mr. Newton: Senior posts in the Privy Council Office are filled from within the civil service, often by staff on loan. Such direct recruitment as occurs is conducted in accordance with the relevant equal opportunities code of practice.

HEALTH

Psychogeriatric Care Beds

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many psychogeriatric continuing care beds are funded by the NHS in the independent sector in each district health authority;

(2) if she will publish tables indicating the number of (a) geriatric and (b) psychogeriatric continuing care beds available (i) currently, (ii) in 1990, (iii) in 1985 and (iv) in 1980 in each district health authority; and if she will also provide figures of the number of beds per 1,000 of the population aged over 65 years in each district health authority at each of these dates.

Mr. Yeo: Information collected centrally does not separately identify continuing care beds.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her Department's guidance to health authorities on the number of psychogeriatric continuing care beds per thousand population aged over 65 years; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: District health authorities, are responsible for assessing the needs of their residents and for securing a comprehensive range of services—including psychiatric services—to meet those needs within available resources.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussions she has had since 1989 with the Royal College of Psychiatrists and the Royal College of Physicians on the number of psychogeriatric continuing care beds per thousand population aged over 65 years in each health authority area.

Mr. Yeo: None.

Community Health Councils

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the cost of community health councils in each of the last five years.

Mr. Sackville: The annual expenditure on community health councils since 1986-87 has been:

	£ million
1986-87	7·2
1987-88	7·5
1988-89	8·0
1989-90	8·6
1990-91	9·6

Prescriptions

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total number of prescriptions for NHS drugs issued in each year since 1982; what is the total cost of the NHS drugs bill relative to the most recent available year's costs in each year since 1982.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information is shown in the table.

Family Health Services in England: numbers of prescribed items dispensed and drugs bill expenditure 1982-83 to 1991-92.

Year	Number of prescribed items dispensed by community pharmacists, appliance contractors and dispensing doctors millions	Drugs bill expenditure as a percentage of drugs bill expenditure in 1991-92[1]
1982-83	332·3	43·55
1983-84	336·9	48·77
1984-85	345·1	51·45
1985-86	341·2	55·03
1986-87	346·4	59·57
1987-88	361·9	66·29
1988-89	376·9	75·27
1989-90	385·5	83·82
1990-91	396·6	89·77

[1] 1991-92 = 100 per cent.

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people would be exempt from prescription charges if the same exemption limits were to apply as are used for free eye tests; and what estimate has been made of the financial consequences of such change.

Dr. Mawhinney: It is estimated that such a change might reduce the number of people entitled to free prescriptions to about 20 million and reduce the need for voted provision for the national health service by between £700 million and £800 million a year.

Ophthalmic Services (Children)

Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the joint working party of the British Paediatric Association and the College of Ophthalmologists looking at the ophthalmic services for children was reconvened; what progress it has made so far; and when it is likely to report.

Dr. Mawhinney: The first meeting took place on 2 March. I understand that at least two further meetings are planned between now and September to conduct a thorough review of the previous working party's 1984 report. The working party hopes to complete its work by the autumn.

Hospitals (Charging)

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which countries in the European Community charge patients for staying in hospital.

Dr. Mawhinney: In the state health care sector, hospital in-patients may be liable for charges in Belgium, France, Luxembourg, Italy and the Irish Republic. Details are given in leaflet T4, "Health Advice for Travellers", copies of which are available in post offices and in the Library.

HIB Meningitis Vaccine

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children suffered a reaction to the HIB meningitis vaccine in the latest year for which figures are available; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: Since 1 October 1992, when Haemophilus Influenzae b (HiB) vaccine was introduced in the United Kingdom, more than 4 million doses have been distributed.

So far, 807 reports of adverse events have been submitted under the yellow card scheme to the Committee on Safety of Medicines—a rate of 20 per 100,000 doses, which is similar to those routinely reported after immunisation with other childhood vaccines. As most HiB immunisations have been given at the same time as either diphtheria, tetanus, pertussis or measles, mumps, rubella vaccine, reactions other than those at the actual injection-site could not with certainty be associated with the HiB immunisation.

Reports of adverse events after HiB immunisation are being kept under careful scrutiny.

Mentally Ill People (Homicides and Suicides)

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements have been made for the funding of the confidential inquiry into homicides and suicides by mentally ill people after April.

Mr. Yeo: Central funding for the inquiry will continue in 1993-94, subject to a satisfactory progress report from the Royal College of Psychiatrists.

Special Hospitals (Noise and Nuisance)

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what statutory rights patients in special hospitals have to protect themselves from noise and nuisance generated by machinery being utilised by the hospital authorities or their agents.

Mr. Yeo: National health service patients, including those in special hospitals, have the same rights to protection against noise as the public generally under health and safety and environmental protection legislation. Crown immunity was removed from health authorities in 1991 and this legislation is now fully enforceable in hospitals by the local statutory enforcement body.

Ambulance Service

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what guidelines she has on the minimum manning requirements for holiday and sickness cover in the ambulance service;

(2) what are the recommended and actual manning levels for each of the ambulance services in England and Wales.

Mr. Sackville: There are no recommended manning levels. Individual ambulance services determine how many staff they need to meet the standards set by service purchasers.

Romanian Adoption Committee

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what conclusions were drawn from the recent visit by Department of Health officials to Romania concerning the work of the Romanian Adoption Committee; and if she will make a statement on the relevant statistics for recent numbers of adoptions.

Mr. Yeo: Department of Health officials visited Romania from 3 to 10 February and met representatives of the Ministry of Justice, the Committee for Adoptions and others. The Romanian law on adoption identifies domestic adoption as the first option; in 1992 there were 2,460 domestic adoptions. They are opposed to institutionalised care as a long-term solution to children's needs and recognise the role that inter-country adoption can play in avoiding this. They are concerned at the number of cases where children have been taken from the country without approval and are anxious to prevent this. To this end, they are determined to work only with those countries signing formal agreements. There have been 10 adoptions by British parents since the agreement was signed, three under the agreement and seven transitional cases.

Baxter Healthcare Ltd.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent by the NHS on products manufactured by Baxter Healthcare Ltd. for the latest year for which figures are available.

Dr. Mawhinney: Information provided to the Department under the pharmaceutical price regulation scheme by individual companies is treated as commercial-in-confidence.

Children's Hospices

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what contribution her Department makes to the Francis House children's hospice; how many children from Liverpool were cared for by the hospice during the past 12 months; what other provision of children's hospices is available in the north-west; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: The Department is not contributing to the funding of Francis House. Sixteen children from the Mersey region have been cared for at the hospice, which at present is the only children's hospice serving the north-west.

Children's hospices are eligible to apply for funding from the top-sliced allocation of £32·3 million for specialised palliative care for the terminally ill, although it will be for health authorities to decide the allocation of these funds in accordance with local priorities.

Alcohol (Advertising)

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations have been made on the issue of introducing health warnings on advertisements for alcoholic beverages; and what plans she has to introduce such measures.

Dr. Mawhinney: Alcohol advertising is regulated by codes of practice administered by the advertising industry's self-regulated bodies. Alcohol Concern has made representations on the introduction of health warnings. There are, however, no current plans to do so.

District Health Authority Chairmen

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the names of those people appointed to be chairmen of district health authorities with effect from 1 April.

Dr. Mawhinney: I have today placed in the Library a list of those people appointed as chairmen of district health authorities with effect from 1 April 1993.

Medicines Control Agency

Mr. Brandreth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the key business targets for the Medicines Control Agency for 1993-94.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I have today placed a copy of the 1993-94 key business targets for the Medicines Control Agency in the Library.

Family Health Services Authorities

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) formal complaints were dealt with, (b) service committee meetings were held and (c) practitioners were found in breach of their terms of service in each family health services authority in London in the last 12 months.

Dr. Mawhinney: This information is not available centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairmen of the family health services authorities concerned for details.

Private Finance Initiative

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps her Department has taken to implement the private finance initiative announced in the autumn statement on 12 November 1992 and in the Treasury private finance guidance published on 9 December 1992.

Mr. Sackville: The Department is examining the scope for involving the private sector in the ways suggested by the interim guidance published by the Treasury on 9 December 1992, and the further published guidance on contract energy management—17 February 1993—and joint ventures—16 March 1993. The national health service management executive wrote to all NHS directors of finance on 14 January inviting them to take full advantage of this initiative. A copy of the letter is available in the Library. Ministers and officials have encouraged private sector companies and NHS trusts and health authorities to explore the scope for using private finance to improve and extend NHS services in cost-effective ways. In the next three months Ministers will address a number of conferences on the use of private finance in the NHS. Officials have met finance directors of many NHS trusts to discuss the private finance initiative.

Portable Oxygen Cylinders

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received in relation to the supply of portable oxygen cylinders on prescription or via NHS consultants' recommendation; what guidelines she has issued to health authorities in relation to portable oxygen cylinders; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: We have received a number of representations on this matter. There are no plans to allow general practitioners to prescribe portable oxygen cylinders. Hospital consultants will continue to have authority to do so.

NHS Salaries

Sir Michael Grylls: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of the total national health service salary bill was spent on salaries for doctors, nurses, midwives, nursing auxiliaries, pharmacists and administrators in 1975, 1980, 1985, 1990 and 1992.

Dr. Mawhinney [holding answer 8 March 1993]: Percentage figures based on analyses of annual total salaries and wages costs for hospital and community health services—HCHS—in England, are shown in the table. The figures for 1991-92 are provisional.

Source: Annual accounts (1985-86 and 1990-91) and annual financial returns (1991-92) of regional and district health authorities in England and those of the special health authorities for the London postgraduate teaching hospitals. Annual accounts of area health and other predecessor authorities (1975-76 and 1980-81). Annual financial returns of the first wave NHS trusts (1991-92).

Notes:

1. HCHS covers the total expenditure by the health authorities (and the NHS trusts) including hospital, community health, patient transport (ie ambulance), blood transfusion and other services.
2. The figures are based upon gross pay, including employers' national insurance and superannuation contributions.
3. The figures for "all other staff" include dental, ambulance, maintenance and professional and technical staff together with all categories of non-NHS (agency, etc.) staff. Those for 1985-86 and later years include general and senior managers.
4. Nursing staff re-gradings and changes in the format of the annual accounts and financial returns over the period do not enable the provision of consistent and separate data for nursing auxiliaries or midwives.
5. The table excludes salaries and wages incurred by family health services authorities and special health authorities providing central services to the NHS. However, the 1975-76 and 1980-81 figures for administrative and clerical staff cover those staff employed by family practitioner committees whose costs were included with those of area health authorities and were not separately identified.

Community Care

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what account was taken in the calculation of the special transitional grant for community care of the financial implications for local authorities of the policy of curtailing payments of residential allowances to care home residents when the resident concerned is away from the care home for more than six days.

Mr. Yeo: No specific account was taken in the calculation of the social security transfer element of the special transitional grant. Data on the numbers likely to be affected are not available. Following a number of representations from hon. Members and other interested parties, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security is currently giving careful consideration to all the implications.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Value Added Tax

13. Mr. Burden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of extending value added tax to domestic fuel on pensioners in the west midlands.

Mr. Nelson: In reaching his Budget decision to extend VAT to supplies of domestic fuel and power, my right hon. Friend took careful account of the impact on all sectors of society. That is why he explained his Budget speech that extra help will be given to poorer pensioners and others on low incomes.

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated reduction in domestic fuel consumption as a result of levying VAT at (a) 8 per cent. and (b) 17½ per cent.; and what is the amount of revenue forgone in VAT receipts on fuel as a result of that reduction.

Sir John Cope: Value added tax at 8 per cent. is expected to reduce demand for domestic fuel and power, in volume terms, by around 1½ per cent. in the short run; VAT at 17½ per cent. by around 3 per cent. in the short run.

In 1993-94 terms, the full year effect of this fall in demand on VAT receipts from domestic fuel and power is estimated to be around £15 million for an 8 per cent. rate of VAT, and around £70 million for a 17½ per cent. rate of VAT.

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated revenue obtained from levying VAT at (a) 8 per cent. and (b) 17½ per cent. on domestic fuel if there were to be no reduction in consumption.

Sir John Cope: Table 4.1 in chapter 4 of the 1993-94 "Financial Statement and Budget Report" provides an estimate of the direct revenue effects from introducing VAT on domestic fuel and power. Had we assumed no change in demand for fuel and power resulting from the measure the estimated revenue effects would have been around £15 million less in 1994-95 and around £5 million less in 1995-96. This takes account of the impact that a lower elasticity would have on demand for other taxable goods.

Sir Michael Grylls: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many member states of the EC have failed to take the necessary measures to implement the abolition of valued added tax collection on goods crossing frontiers.

Sir John Cope: All EC member states have reported that they have implemented the provisions under the sixth VAT directive for the accounting of VAT on intra-Community movements of goods on acquisition.

14. Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations and objections he has received about his proposal to extend the value added tax base announced in his Budget.

Mr. Dorrell: My right hon. Friend has received a number of representations on the subject.

22. Mr. Barnes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were value added tax revenues in 1979 and 1992 expressed as a percentage of total indirect and direct tax revenues for those years.

Mr. Dorrell: 12·9 and 19·7 per cent. respectively.

Charities

16. Mr. Beith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the overall impact of the Budget on charities.

Mr. Dorrell: The Budget recognised the important position of charities in our national life through the provision of special reliefs. The minimum donation limit under gift aid was lowered from £400 to £250. This will cost £30 million in a full year. The maximum limit for qualifying donations under the payroll giving scheme was raised from £600 to £900 a year at a cost of at least £1 million a year. Special payments for charities were also announced to ease the transition to the new system of tax credits. These payments will cost over £100 million over the four years of the scheme.

Charities will be affected by the increases in excise duties announced in the Budget, and by the extension of VAT to fuel and power used in domestic residential and charity buildings. The Charities' Tax Reform Group estimates that this will cost its members some £27 million in a full year.

Charities with non-domestic premises will benefit from the freezing of real increases in business rates. Charities will also benefit from the decision by the Chancellor to leave charity lotteries untaxed.

Budget

17. Mr. Winnick: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received on the Budget.

Mr. Portillo: The Budget has been welcomed by many business organisations and individual businesses.

Stamp Duty

18. Mr. Peter Ainsworth: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received about the proposed changes to the threshold for stamp duty on houses, land and property.

Mr. Nelson: The increase in the stamp duty threshold has been widely welcomed.

Economic Growth

19. Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which of his policies will stimulate economic growth and reduce unemployment.

Mr. Dorrell: The Government's economic policies are directed to achieving low inflation and sound public finances, while making markets work better and improving the supply performance of the economy. These are the best means of promoting sustainable economic growth and reducing unemployment.

Taxation (Unemployed People)

20. Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the average direct and indirect tax burden on a single person in receipt of unemployment benefit.

Mr. Dorrell: The information requested is not available.

Economic Advisers

21. Mr. Hoon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people are employed as economic advisers to the Treasury.

Mr. Portillo: The Treasury currently employs 34 full-time and three part-time economic advisers.

Exchange Rate Mechanism

23. Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proposals he has for sterling in the exchange rate mechanism.

Mr. Nelson: We have made it clear that we intend to rejoin the ERM, but not before a number of important conditions have been satisfied.

Investment and Unemployment

24. Mr. Cann: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the relationship between the Budget measures for investment and unemployment levels.

Mr. Portillo: The Budget measures provide further help for business and the unemployed in the early stages of recovery. Together with the autumn statement measures, the improvement in competitiveness from sterling's depreciation, and the recent cuts in interest rates, they provide an excellent environment for investment and exports.

The Government's commitment to sound public finances and low inflation provides a firm foundation for sustainable growth and the lasting creation of new jobs in the medium term.

Exports

25. Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the likely level of exports will be by the end of 1993 on present trends; and what was the comparable figure for 1992.

Mr. Portillo: In 1992, the value of non-oil exports was £100 billion. In 1993 I expect them to be over £114 billion, a rise of over 14 per cent.

28. Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will make a further statement about the measures announced in the Budget to assist the growth of exports.

Mr. Lamont: I have responded to requests for support from exporters by cutting export credit premiums and extending the cover available in key markets by £1,300 million over the next three years.

This increase is in addition to the extra £500 million of cover for 1993-94 which I announced in the autumn statement, and means that by 1995-96 the annual allocation of cover will have risen by 75 per cent. since 1991-92. Particular attention will be paid to countries where the prospects for British exports are good, for example Hong Kong, China, Indonesia, South Africa and Malaysia.

For 1993-94, the premiums paid by exporters will be cut by 7½ per cent. on average, compared with the previous year, when premiums were also cut. Average premiums will be over 25 per cent. lower in 1993-94 than in 1991-92.

More generally, exporters will benefit from the cuts in the tax burden on business, such as the reduction in advance corporation tax, improved VAT relief for bad debts and lower rates bills. Small businesses will also benefit from other measures such as the extension of the loan guarantee scheme and changes to VAT and capital gains tax.

Socially Useful Products

26. Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received since his Budget calling for a review of the list of products classed as socially useful for value added tax purposes.

Mr. Dorrell: I have received a number of representations on VAT. However, there is no such list of products classed as "socially useful for value added tax purposes".

Demand

27. Mr. Knox: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the level of total demand in the economy.

Mr. Portillo: Real domestic demand rose by 0·5 per cent. between 1991 and 1992. The Budget forecast is for it to increase by 1¼ per cent. in 1993 and 3 per cent. in the year to the first half of 1994. These forecasts are within the range of forecasts produced by the Panel of Independent Forecasters and other outside forecasters.

Bad Debts and Late Payments

29. Mr. Heald: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what reaction he has received from small businesses to his announcement about value added tax in relation to bad debts and late payments.

Mr. Nelson: I am pleased to say that the significant improvements announced in my right hon. Friend the Chancellor's Budget speech have been well received by small businesses.

Alcoholic Drinks

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to achieve harmonisation of duty on alcoholic drinks with other EC countries.

Mr. Dorrell: The Government do not accept that harmonisation of duty rates is necessary.

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Janner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he has taken to recruit women, members of ethnic minorities and disabled people, respectively, in top grades of employment at Her Majesty's Treasury.

Sir John Cope: Recruits to the senior grades—as to any grade in the civil service—are selected on merit on the basis of fair and open competition, unless one of the exceptions permitted under the Civil Service Order in Council 1991 applies. Various steps have been taken by the Civil Service Commissioners to aid recruitment from all sectors of the community including extending links with institutions of higher education; equal opportunities training for those involved in selection; using validated selection procedures.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when Her Majesty's Treasury last conducted surveys of (a) the ethnic origins and (b) women among its employees; when it next plans to do so; and whether he will make a statement.

Sir John Cope: The Treasury last surveyed staff for whom no record of ethnic origin was held in October 1990. A further survey will be conducted in April 1993. Monitoring information on the numbers and grades of women in the Treasury is produced each month. Latest available figures relate to March 1993.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many and what percentage of officers in each grade from 1 to 7 and overall in Her Majesty's Treasury are (a) women, (b) from ethnic minorities and (c) disabled people.

Sir John Cope: The information requested is shown in the table. Figures include those staff on loan outside the Department. Figures for grades 1 to 7 reflect the position as at March 1993. Figures for all staff are for (a) as at March 1993; for (b) and (c) as at 1 January 1993, the latest date for which this information is available. Figures are available only for those staff who are registered as disabled, but the Department does employ a number of people with disabilities who have chosen not to register.

Property Owners

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to ease the financial situation of property owners whose mortgages exceed the value of their property; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nelson: On 20 October 1992, Official Report, column 243, I announced two measures to help property owners whose mortgages exceed the value of their property. Further details of one of these measures—allowing the security of a new property to be substituted for the previous one without loss of mortgage interest relief—were announced in the Budget and the measure took effect on 16 March.

Alternative Economic Indicators

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what research has been undertaken by his Department into the use of (a) the United Nations' Development Programme's human development index, (b) the Overseas Development Council's physical quality of life indicator and (c) Norway's natural resource accounting as alternative economic indicators; and what plans he has to amend economic indicators currently employed by the United Kingdom.

Mr. Nelson: The Government monitor progress in the development of such economic indicators, but have not themselves commissioned research in the field, and accordingly have no plans to amend the economic indicators currently in use in the United Kingdom.

Employees (Religious Affiliation)

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the annual cost of monitoring the religious affiliation of the employees of the board of Inland Revenue.

Mr. Dorrell: It is estimated that the annual cost of monitoring the religious affiliation of employees of the board of the Inland Revenue in Northern Ireland is £3,500 based on figures for 1992-93. We are required to undertake monitoring under the Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Act 1989, but this monitoring also helps us to assess the effectivenes of our equal opportunities policy.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the annual cost of monitoring the religious affiliation of the employees of the Commissioners of Customs and Excise.

Sir John Cope: It is estimated that the annual cost of monitoring the religious affiliation of the employees of the Commissioners of Customs and Excise is £2,800, based on figures for 1992-93. The monitoring enables us to comply with our legal obligations under the Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Act 1989 and to assess the effectiveness of our equal opportunity policies.

Companies (Losses)

Sir Michael Grylls: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects agreement in the EC to allow parent companies to assume their subsidiaries' losses in other EC countries.

Mr. Dorrell: In 1990, the Commission proposed a directive concerning arrangements for the taking into account by enterprises of the losses of their permanent establishments and subsidiaries situated in other member states. This is being considered by a Council working party. Most member states, including the United Kingdom, have major difficulties with the proposals in their current form.

Banking

Mr. Darling: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many banks and other financial institutions the Bank of England supported (a) directly and (b) indirectly through other banks and financial institutions in (i) 1990, (ii) 1991 and (iii) 1992.

Mr. Nelson: It is for the Bank of England to determine its policy on answering questions concerning such matters. The Bank issued a statement last week describing its role during a period following the middle of 1991 in arranging support for a few small banks. A copy of the statement was placed in the Library.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how much of the support provided to authorised financial institutions by the Bank of England in 1991 remains outstanding and due to the Bank of England or other institutions;

(2) whether the Bank of England provided guarantees to any other bank or financial institution in respect of support operations designed to assist authorised banking institutions during the course of 1991;

(3) what was the value of the support provided (a) directly and (b) indirectly to authorised banking institutions by the Bank of England in 1991; and what was the source of that support;

(4) whether the Bank of England provided support arrangements in 1991 for any authorised banking institution that was not incorporated in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Nelson: It is for the Bank of England to determine its policy on answering questions concerning such matters.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the support operations by the Bank of England in respect of authorised banking institutions.

Mr. Nelson: No.

Pools Betting Levy

Mr. Pike: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to alter the present situation in relation to the pools betting levy in relation to funding for implementation of the Taylor committee report via the Football Trust; and if he will make a statement.

Sir John Cope: In the 1990 Budget pool betting duty was reduced from 42·5 to 40 per cent. for five years to help finance the implementation of the Taylor report and in particular the achievement of all-seating. We have since made it clear that we will be prepared to extend the reduction to the year 2000, provided the Football Leagues and football clubs produce satisfactory financial plans for their own contribution to further necessary ground improvements. We are currently awaiting reports on the clubs' plans.

Tax Payments

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what effective date of payment will be allowed when payment of tax to the Inland Revenue is made by electronic funds transfer.

Mr. Dorrell: From today, where a payment of tax is made by electronic funds transfer, an effective date of payment of the tax of one working day immediately before the date value is received by the Inland Revenue will be allowed.

Private Finance Initiative

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps his Department has taken to implement the private finance initiative announced in the autumn statement on 12 November 1992 and in the Treasury private finance guidance published on 9 December 1992.

Mr. Lamont: The potential scope of the initiative will vary between Departments. Further to my earlier reply to my right hon. Friend on this subject, 17 December 1992, Official Report, column 377, my Department will consider the scope for involving the private sector in the ways suggested by the interim guidance published by the Treasury on 9 December and the further published guidance on contract energy management—17 February 1993—and joint ventures—16 March 1993—whenever the opportunity arises.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many pages of evidence Her Majesty's Customs and Excise has given to the Scott inquiry.

Mr. Portillo: About 11,200.

Domestic Fuel

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish figures for estimated domestic fuel expenditure by households on (a) average and (b) 50 per cent. of average incomes, giving figures separately for expenditure on (i) oil, (ii) piped gas, (iii) cylinder gas, (iv) electricity and (v) coal.

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 26 March 1993]: The following estimates are derived from the 1991 family expenditure survey. The estimates are based on samples of 200 households grouped at each level of income. Because of the small sample size the figures are subject to considerable sampling variations. Figures are rounded to the nearest 10p.

Per week

	Average income £	50 per cent. of average income £
i. Oil	0·30	0·20
ii. Piped gas	5·10	4·00
iii. Cylinder gas and other fuels[1]	0·30	0·10
iv. Electricity	6·20	6·40
v. Coal and coke	0·20	0·80

[1] Includes calor gas plus paraffin, firelighters, firewood, gas refills for blow lamps/camping stoves, underfloor heating where source of heat is unknown and services for fuel included in rent.

Income Tax Cuts

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 16 March, Official Report, columns 129-30, if he will estimate the number of taxpayers who have benefited from the reduction in personal income tax introduced by the Finance Act 1988 in each region in each year.

Mr. Dorrell [holding answer 30 March 1993]: Information is given in the table.

Number of taxpayers benefiting from abolition of rates in excess of 40 per cent. (thousands)

Region of residence of taxpayer	1988-89	1989-90	1990-91[2]
North	20	20	30
Yorkshire and Humberside	50	60	80
North West	60	80	90
East Midlands	40	60	60
West Midlands	60	60	80
East Anglia	30	30	50
South East	490	530	630
South West	70	60	80
Wales	20	30	30
Scotland	50	70	80
Northern Ireland	10	10	20
United Kingdom[1]	930	1,030	1,240

[1] Includes members of the forces and Merchant Navy and a small number of civil servants serving overseas who are not allocated to regions.

[2] For 1990-91 the figures relate to the number of taxpaying individuals following the introduction of independent taxation.

PRIME MINISTER

Regional Government

Mr. Allen: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy towards regional government for England.

The Prime Minister: We see no case for setting up regional authorities in England. Our aim is to simplify and streamline local government, not to impose an additional layer of bureaucracy on local taxpayers.

Liverpool

Mr. Parry: To ask the Prime Minister how many times he has visited Liverpool since he became Prime Minister.

The Prime Minister: I have visited the north-west on a number of occasions since becoming Prime Minister.

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 1 April.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 1 April.

The Prime Minister: This morning, I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

European Court

Dr. Godman: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 17 March, Official Report, column 283, what was the average length of time that elapsed between the European Court of Justice finding that Her Majesty's Government were in breach of its obligations under EC directives and the necessary steps being taken to rectify matters; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 31 March 1993]: Four cases were referred to in my previous reply in which the United Kingdom was held by the European Court of Justice to be in breach of EC directives. Three of these cases required legislative action to give full effect to the judgment of the Court; this took between six and 14 months to complete. In the fourth case, concerning a breach of directive 80/788—drinking water—when judgment was delivered on 25 November 1992 the UK had already complied on two of the points on which it was found to be in breach. Action on the remaining two points is in hand.

Prime Minister's Office

Dr. Wright: To ask the Prime Minister (1) if he will give figures for (a) the number of staff and (b) the cost of the Prime Minister's office for each year since 1979;

(2) why the cost and size of the Prime Minister's office are not separately identified in Cm 2218 the "Government's Expenditure Plans, 1993-94 to 1995-96"; and if he will provide figures for its cost and size.

The Prime Minister: It has not been the general practice to identify the cost of Ministers' offices separately in departmental reports. The cost and size of my office are freely available in the form of parliamentary answers. The information for each year since 1979-80 is as follows:

	Staff[1]	Cost[2,3] (£'000)
1979-80	68	1,409
1980-81	68	1,745
1981-82	70	2,415
1982-83	64	2,700
1983-84	66	3,026
1984-85	67	3,787
1985-86	66	4,406
1986-87	66	4,963
1987-88	67	5,418
1988-89	67	6,554
1989-90	68	7,669
1990-91	71	8,226
1992-93	95	[4]9,136

[1] The staffing levels relate to the beginning of each financial year. For the years 1979 to 1989 the figures relate to the number of actual staff employed in No. 10. From 1990 onwards the figures are on the basis of staff in post (ie expressed in terms of full time equivalents). It should be noted that the increase in staff numbers from 1 April 1992 is due to the transfer of office service support grades, already working in No. 10, to the No. 10 complement from the Cabinet Office establishment officer's group.

[2] The monetary figures represent the cost of 10 Downing Street and Chequers borne on the Votes of the Cabinet Office (OPSS) and its predecessors. Over the period, the following changes have occurred to the basis of the costs:

in 1981-82 the Ministry of Defence introduced charges for the use of its aircraft; in 1983-84 the then Property Services Agency introduced charges for buildings and services; in 1984-85 charges were introduced for the Government Car Service and the Service Personnel at Chequers; and in 1986-87 the cost of office services was included for the first time.

[3] Costs are shown in the year in which the expenditure was made. Because of billing delays this is not always in financial year in which the goods or services were provided.

[4] Estimate.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Diplomatic Posts

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 24 March, Official Report, columns 593-94, how many staff are employed by each other member state of the European Community in each diplomatic post in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The numbers of overseas-based staff are as follows:

Nuclear Non-proliferation

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions his Department has had with non-governmental organisations concerning the first preparatory committee meeting of the non-proliferation treaty; what plans his Department has to involve non-governmental organisations in its activities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave him on 15 February at column 33

Private Finance Initiative

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps his Department has taken to implement the private finance initiative announced in the autumn statement on 12 November 1992 and in the Treasury private finance guidance published on 9 December 1992.

Mr. Goodlad: The potential scope of the initiative will vary between departments. In the case of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, diplomatic wing, we have not so far identified any proposals relevant to the initiative.

The Commonwealth Development Corporation, for which the Overseas Development Administration is the sponsor department, funds projects in developing countries, particularly in the private sector in partnership with a range of co-investors. The Administration has two arrangements which already associate private finance with aid funds: the joint funding scheme which matches contributions from non-governmental organisations on a pound-for-pound basis, and the aid and trade provision which provides aid funds to recipient Governments in association with commercial funds though these are usually supported by the Export Credits Guarantee Department.

We will continue to look for suitable proposals.

Human Rights

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how the United Kingdom will be represented at the United Nations conference on human rights to be held in Vienna on 14 to 18 June; who will be in the delegation; what criteria will be used for the selection of United Kingdom delegates; and what guidelines delegates will be given.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We shall be represented at the second world conference on human rights in Vienna, from 14 to 25 June, by a delegation consisting of Foreign and Commonwealth Office officials with expertise in the field of human rights, including the United Kingdom permanent representative to the United Nations at Geneva, and representatives of interested dependent territories. It will be led by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State or myself. The aims of the delegation are to promote universal adherence to existing standards, to explore ways to improve their implementation, and to examine the relationship between human rights, democracy and development.

Falkland Islands

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps his Department is taking to prepare draft operating regulations and fiscal arrangements in advance of an exclusive licensing round in the Falklands designated area.

Mr. Garel-Jones: These matters will be given consideration. Further legislation would of course be required for an exclusive licensing round.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what preliminary information his Department is providing to oil companies regarding possible operating regulations and fiscal regimes for oil developers in the Falklands development area; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The South Atlantic and Antarctic department of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office issued a letter on 17 March which set out our expectations on a future licensing round and the fiscal regime which would apply to companies exploiting any hydrocarbons which may be found in the Falklands designated area. It will provide further guidance as appropriate.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he intends to take to encourage oil company participation in the current phase of exploration of the Falklands designated area; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The financial participation of oil companies in the seismic surveys now being carried out is a commercial matter. The South Atlantic and Antarctic department of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office will supplement as appropriate the guidance given in its letter of 17 March to the seismic contractors.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he proposes to announce the opening and closing dates of an exclusive licensing round in the Falklands designated area.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The letter of 17 March from the South Atlantic and Antarctic department of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office to seismic companies said that the licensing round would probably close within two to three years from now. We would expect an announcement of opening and closing dates to be made in due course.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he intends to respond directly to the Argentine Government in respect of the letter sent by the Argentine Government to oil companies, reasserting a claim to sovereignty of the Falkland islands and surrounding waters.

Mr. Garel-Jones: Yes.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Shamrock (GB) Ltd.

Mr. Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 2 December, Official Report, columns 215-16, to the right hon. Member for Westminster, North (Sir J. Wheeler), how many employees at Shamrock (GB) Ltd. have now received training in the wider ethical and legal issues associated with animal use; what communications between the management and the Home Office inspectorate have taken place since 2 December 1992 to agree the nature and context of training; and if he will visit the company to see what progress has been made with the training.

Mr. Charles Wardle: A training programme for employees of Shamrock (GB) Ltd. began this week and will be completed within the next three months. The Home Office inspectorate met the management of Shamrock on 3 December 1992, 21 January and 10 March 1993 and the management wrote to the Home Office inspectorate once.

On 17 March, I visited the company to establish what progress had been accomplished during the 15 weeks since my reply to my right hon. Friend the Member for Westminster, North (Sir J. Wheeler). On 23 March I discussed my findings with Home Office officials. On 24 and 25 March, I sought further advice from individual members of the Animal Procedures Committee. On 26 March, the managing director of Shamrock met me to agree the details of the content and conduct of a comprehensive training programme and of the programme to improve and replace facilities. On 31 March, the first training session for all employees was conducted by Mrs. Judy McArthur Clark, president of the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons.

Immigration

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what instructions have been issued to immigration offices regarding the scrutiny of applications to remain in Britain on the basis of marriage within the last six months; on what grounds; and to which countries' nationals they apply.

Mr. Charles Wardle: None.

Criminal Courts (Videos)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his policy towards the use in criminal courts in England of video footage filmed from helicopters.

Mr. Jack: The admissibility of this type of evidence is a matter for a court to decide in any given case.

Private Finance Initiative

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps his Department has taken to implement the private finance initiative announced in the autumn statement on 12 November 1992 and in the Treasury private finance guidance published on 9 December 1992.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: My Department is continuing to examine the scope for involving the private sector in the ways suggested in the published Treasury guidance.

Nuclear Weapon Transportation

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many national institutions, local authorities and other interested organisations received copies of Home Office circular ES1/1993—"Local Authority and Emergency Service Information on Nuclear Weapon Transportation Contingency Plans"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Home Office circular ES1/1993 was distributed in England and Wales to:

Chief Executive of County Councils, District Councils and London Borough Councils
The Town Clerk, City of London
Clerks to the Fire and Civil Defence Authorities
Chief Officers of Police
Chief Fire Officers
Association of County Councils
Association of District Councils
Association of London Authorities
Association of Metropolitan Authorities
London Boroughs Association
Association of Chief Police Officers
Chief and Assistant Chief Fire Officers Association
County Emergency Planning Officers Society
Emergency Planning Association
Institute of Civil Defence and Disaster Studies
Society of Industrial Emergency Services Officers
Society of Local Authority Chief Executives

The guidance was distributed by the Home Office on behalf of the Ministry of Defence.

Motor Vehicles

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of motor vehicles purchased by the police, by the fire service and by the civil defence authorities were built or assembled in Britain.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The vehicles for these services are all purchased locally. The Home Office does not keep records of the numbers, make, models or country of origin of vehicles purchased by these forces and could obtain such information only at disproportionate cost.

European Elections (Constituencies)

Mr. Fry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Nottingham, North (Mr. Allen) on 8 February, Official Report, column 424, when the boundary commission was instructed to produce proposals for distributing the additional European Parliament seats; when he expects to receive the proposals; and what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the time available for their implementation before the next European elections.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The boundary commisions has at present no power to undertake a review of boundaries to accommodate the six additional seats.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements he will make for the additional European parliamentary constituencies; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Government are currently formulating proposals for accommodating the six extra seats, and when we have done so we will consult the Opposition parties.

Unit Fines

Mrs. Angela Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to change the unit fine system; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: The operation of the unit fine scheme is being very carefully monitored and we will be considering whether any change is called for in the light of practical experience of its operation.

Murder by Children

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many children were found guilty of the murder of another child in each of the last 20 years.

Mr. Jack: The number of suspects aged under 16 convicted of murder of a victim aged under 16 for the years 1982-91 is in the table. Information for the years requested before 1982 is not available except at disproportionate cost and information for 1992 is not yet available.

Year	Number
1983	2
1984	1
1985	—
1986	1
1987	1
1988	1
1989	1
1990	—

Cricketers

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cricketers granted work permits in 1992 by the overseas labour section of the Department of Employment to play cricket in the United Kingdom failed to return to their country of origin on or before the expiry of their work permit; how many such individuals are believed still to be in the United Kingdom; and how many, to date, have been removed from the United Kingdom.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Cricketers are not identified separately in Department of Employment or Home Office statistics.

Fire Regulations

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of whether existing fire regulations are being implemented properly.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: It is the responsibility of local authorities to implement and enforce fire safety legislation. This includes work carried out under section 1(1)(f) of the Fire Service Act 1947, whereby fire authorities are required to give fire prevention advice, and enforcement of the statutory requirements of the Fire Precautions Act 1971.

Members of Her Majesty's fire service inspectorate report annually on individual fire brigades. Each report is published and contains detailed information on the performance of the brigade's fire safety department. On the basis of the information contained in these reports, we are content that they are discharging their statutory obligations satisfactorily.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the cost to British industry of the implementation of existing fire regulations.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Fire safety legislation exists to protect people from the effects of fire. Current statutory requirements are contained in a wide range of national and local legislation, some of which has existed for many years. Figures are not available for the costs of implementing these requirements.

Intimidation of Witnesses

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what recent representations he has had about cases of intimidation of witnesses in major crime trials; and what proposals he has to combat this intimidation.

Mr. Jack: The Government are aware of concern about the intimidation of witnesses in criminal trials and occasionally receives representations both on the general issue and in relation to specific cases. Such intimidation amounts to a serious criminal offence punishable by a maximum of life imprisonment. The investigation of alleged offences and, where necessary, the protection of witnesses, are operational matters for the chief officer of the police force concerned.

I also refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from the hon. Member for Coventry, South-West (Mr. Butcher) on 28 January at column 789, and to the replies given to the hon. Member for Stretford (Mr. Lloyd) on 15 March at columns 41 and 68.

Prison Service

Sir John Wheeler: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what change he is making in the status of the Prison Service.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The Prison Service becomes an executive agency of the Home Office with effect from 1 April. Its director general, Derek Lewis, is the chief executive of the agency and will be responsible for the day-to-day management of the service.

I have set the following key targets for 1993-94, which are published in the Prison Service's business plan:

1. To ensure that the number of escapes from prison establishments and from escorts, expressed as a percentage of the average prison population, is fewer than in 1992-93.
2. To reverse, over the period of the corporate plan, the rising trend of assaults on staff, prisoners and others, expressed as a percentage of the average prison population.
3. To ensure that by 31 March 1994 no prisoner is held three to a cell in accommodation which is intended for one prisoner, subject to ensuring that no prisoners are held in police cells unless this is absolutely unavoidable.
4. To provide 24-hour access to sanitation in at least 4,700 more prison places, excluding new and renovated accommodation, as part of the programme to provide all prisoners with this facility by 31 December 1994.
5. To ensure that prisoners spend, on average, at least 3 per cent. more hours a week in purposeful activity, resulting in an average of 24·9 hours per week per prisoner.
6. To ensure that by 31 March 1994 at least 34 per cent. of prisoners are held in establishments where prisoners are unlocked for a total of at least 12 hours on weekdays.
7. To ensure that by 31 March 1994 at least 90 per cent. of prisoners are held in establishments where prisoners have the opportunity to exceed the minimum visiting entitlement.
8. To ensure that the average cost per prisoner place does not exceed £23,561.

I am placing in the Library copies of the Prison Service's framework document, corporate plan, business plan and a statement of citizens charter standards of service.

SCOTLAND

Craft Funding

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will, following the transfer of responsibility for the Scottish Arts Council to the Scottish Office, consider arranging funding for crafts in Scotland directly with the Scottish Arts Council rather than via the Crafts Council in England.

Mr. Lang: I am still considering the respective roles of the Scottish Arts Council and the Crafts Council in providing support to individual craft makers in Scotland and will announce my decision shortly.

Council House Repairs

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish for each local authority (a) the amount spent on council house repairs and maintenance, (b) the number of council-owned properties and (c) the average spent on repairs and maintenance per council-owned property in the latest available year.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested relating to 1991-92 is set out in the table.

Coastal Pollution (Sewage)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what amount of sewage sludge has been discharged into the sea near the Firth of Clyde and elsewhere off the coast of Scotland in each of the past five years; what consultations have taken place concerning alternative methods of disposal; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro: The practice of discharging small quantities of sewage sludge from pipelines into coastal waters is only adopted in a few isolated areas where alternative arrangements are impracticable. It will be phased out completely by the end of 1998. Information is not held centrally about the small amount involved.

However, sludge dumping from ships, which will also be phased out by the end of 1998, accounts for some 75 per cent. of Scotland's sewage sludge disposal. The quantities involved are shown in the table.

Strathclyde regional council and Lothian regional council are the only Scottish authorities which dispose of sewage sludge by dumping at sea. Both have received consultants' reports on the options available to them after 1998. I understand that Lothian regional council is developing proposals based on incineration, whereas Strathclyde regional council favours land-based disposal routes involving agricultural land, forestry and land reclamation. Strathclyde regional council has embarked on a series of public awareness meetings to publicise its strategy.

Private Finance Initiative

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps his Department has taken to implement the private finance initiative announced in the autumn statement on 12 November 1992 and in the Treasury private finance guidance published on 9 December 1992.

Mr. Lang: The Government's initiative is an important opportunity to capitalise both on the financial resources of the private sector and also its skills, for the provision of important projects and services. I am looking to make the maximum use of the opportunities it provides.

A number of ventures in Scotland are being designed to take advantage of the new arrangements which encourage co-operation between the public and private sectors.

Significant steps to improve transport links through private sector involvement have been taken with the appointment of consultants for two major projects: first, to define the terms of the competition for construction of the central Scotland fastlink scheme between Douglas on the new M6 and Whitburn on the M8, and secondly to conduct feasibility studies on the development of transport links around the firth of Forth, including a second Forth road bridge. The Forth study also endorses the development of a light rapid transit or busway from Edinburgh airport to central Edinburgh and consultants are examining the scope for private finance in this venture.

A consultation document entitled "Where Now?" was recently published, with the purpose of stimulating private sector interest in the provision of in-car traffic control and information systems in Scotland.

The potential for involving private finance in other areas is also being examined. In particular, there may be possibilities for attracting private sector investment in health, higher and further education and government property. The management executive of the national health service has issued information on the initiative to health boards and NHS trusts in Scotland and encouraged them to consider actively how to make full use of the opportunities offered. From 1 April, Scottish higher education institutions will, with the approval of the Scottish Higher Education Funding Council, be able to borrow on the security of Exchequer-funded assets to finance capital developments. Guidance on the procedures which apply have been issued to institutions by the funding council.

Trunk Roads

Mr. Kynoch: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on progress in constructing trunk road schemes during 1992-93 and on the schemes the Government propose to start in Scotland in the next three financial years.

Mr. Lang: The publication of "Roads, Traffic and Safety 1992" in March last year set out in detail our policies for developing and improving the trunk road network. In the recent and current period the emphasis of major projects is on:

(1) completion of the A9 Perth-Sterling dualling;
(2) completion of an M90/A90 Edinburgh-Aberdeen arterial route;
(3) upgrading of the A74 to motorway.

Projects are currently being prepared to permit in the medium term:

(1) completion of M80 Glasgow-Stirling motorway;
(2) completion of M8 Edinburgh-Glasgow motorway;
(3) completion of M77 Glasgow-Kilmarnock motorway;
(4) completion of M6 Carlisle-Glasgow motorway;
(5) Central Scotland Fastlink (to link M6 at Douglas with M8 at Whitburn);
(6) completion of A1 Edinburgh-Dunbar to near motorway standard and dualling schemes between Dunbar and the Border;
(7) integrated roads and transport provision around the Firth of Forth.

This is an ambitious programme requiring very substantial investment.

Significant progress has already been made. Five major schemes with a total value in excess of £125 million were completed during 1992-93. These were:

A74(M)	Elvanfoot to Paddy's Rickle Bridge
A74(M)	Kirkpatrick Fleming to Gretna
M80	Stepps Bypass
A9	Greenloaning to Blackford
A1	Tower to Dunglass

In the course of 1992-93, some 15 major schemes—each with a cost of more than £3 million—were either under way or started. These schemes had a total value in excess of £380 million. They include seven schemes valued at £180 million to upgrade the A74 to motorway. As a result, over 65 per cent. of the Scottish upgrading, which will lead to an extension of the M6 motorway from Carlisle to Glasgow, is now either completed or underway. The final two schemes on the Perth to Aberdeen route were also started and are now well under way. These schemes will complete the upgrading of this key road to dual carriageway providing a high quality link from the north east to the motorway network. On completion, this route will be designated by a single M90/A90 Edinburgh-Aberdeen route number in place of the five route numbers at present. The opening in 1992-93 of the A9 Greenloaning-Blackford scheme also brought with it the full completion of the A9 Perth-Stirling dualling.

The additional £8·5 million I was able to announce in December 1992 for the roads programme in Scotland allowed me to bring forward into the financial year 1992-93 further major schemes. The schemes costing over £3 million started since 1 April 1992 are as follows:

A74(M)	Lockerbie Bypass (Muirhouse to Water of Milk)
A74(M)	Water of Milk to Ecclefechan
A74(M)	Eaglesfield to Kirkpatrick Fleming
A74(M)	Dinwoodie Green to Muirhouse
A74(M)	Cleuchbrae to Dinwoodie Green
A74(M)	Ecclefechan to Eaglesfield Phase 1
A94	Brechin Bypass (dualling)
A830	Morar Bypass (Lochan Doilead to Kinsadel)
A87	Skye Bridge Approach Roads
A9	Broomhill to Logie Easter

These schemes have a total value of almost £190 million. As well as the publicly funded schemes, private finance also additionally allowed the start of construction of the Skye bridge.

I am now able to announce those major schemes with an estimated cost of over £3 million each which are expected to start between 1 April, 1993 and 31 March, 1996:

1993-94
M8	Newbridge to Edinburgh
M77	Ayr Road Route (trunk road section)
A74(M)	Ecclefechan to Eaglesfield Phase II

1994-95 and 1995-96
A1	Tranent to Haddington
M8	North Lanarkshire Stage 1
M77	Fenwick to B764
A74(M)	Beattock to Cleuchbrae
A96	Kintore Bypass
A96	Keith Bypass
A828	Creagan Bridge

These schemes have a total value approaching £290 million.

Our plans are, of course, subject to schemes satisfying the usual value for money criteria together with satisfactory completion of statutory procedures and the necessary preparatory work.

In addition to the major starts, funding for route action plans, road safety and other schemes has been substantially increased. This will allow work on the A76 Kilmarnock-Dumfries route and on the A9 Perth-Thurso route to be taken forward and continue the excellent progress which has already been made on the A96 Aberdeen to Inverness; the A85 Perth to Dundee; and the A7 from Hawick southwards.

Quangos

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the (a) chairmen/women, (b) vice-chairmen/women and (c) the members of each of the boards of quasi-autonomous non-governmental organisations over which he has direct control; if he will indicate which of the appointments are part-time; and if he will list the date when each appointment is due to be renewed.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 3 March 1993]: As the information sought is extensive, I have arranged for a copy of the information sought by the hon. Member to be placed in the Library of the House. It shows as at 1 September 1992 the name of the body, the appointees to that body, their rank, the expiry date of the appointment where it is of a fixed term and whether it is a full-time or part-time appointment. Information on appointments to JP advisory committees and children's panels is limited to chairmen and deputy chairmen, as information on members is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Forestry Enterprise

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the Forestry Enterprise assets currently for sale and those he expects to dispose of before 1995.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 19 March 1993]: The areas of forest land currently being offered for sale by the Forestry Commission on the open market are given in the table. It is not possible to predict which areas will be sold before 1995.

Hong Kong

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to increase the budget and staffing of Scottish Enterprise's office in Hong Kong; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 26 March 1993]: Scottish Enterprise does not itself have an office in Hong Kong. However, the joint Scottish Office/Scottish Enterprise inward investment bureau, Locate in Scotland, operates a one-man office there. There are no plans at present to increase the budget or staffing of this office.

Shetland (Oil Spill)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 10 March, Official Report, column 597, when he expects the marine nature conservation review team to conclude its assessment of its visit to Shetland; and if he will put a copy of the assessment in the Library.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 31 March 1993]: An initial impact assessment bulletin on the oil spill and severe weather conditions during January will be issued by Scottish Natural Heritage in April on request. This will give details of the effects on the marine biota in south Shetland, together with analysis of the effects on the earth science interest in coastal sites of special scientific interest in the area. The final report of the joint team of marine biologists from SNH, the Countryside Council for Wales and the Joint Nature Conservation Committee support unit is also expected in April. Copies of both reports will be placed in the Library.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he has taken to recruit women, members of ethnic minorities and disabled people, respectively, in top grades of employment at his Department.

Mr. Mates: The Northern Ireland civil service and the home civil service are equal opportunity employers and welcome applications from men and women, irrespective of their religion, disability or ethnic origin. Recruitment to the senior grades of the home civil service and the Northern Ireland civil service is on the basis of merit in fair and open competition. Both are members of Opportunity 2000, and the Northern Ireland civil service has set itself a voluntary goal of increasing the proportion of women in the senior general service, grade 5 and above, to 10 per cent. by 31 December 1998.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when his Department last conducted surveys of (a) ethnic origins and (b) the number of women among its employees; when it next plans to do so; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Mates: The Northern Ireland Office, home civil service, last conducted a complete survey of the ethnic origins of all staff in 1988; the data have been updated as and when staff have joined the Department. The number of women in post can be surveyed by means of the personnel information system at any appropriate time.

Compositional analysis of the Northern Ireland civil service by religion, sex and disability is a regular feature of the work of its equal opportunities unit. Particular surveys to establish the number of female staff are not required. The Northern Ireland civil service does not monitor the ethnic origin of staff.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many and what percentage of officers in each grade from 1 to 7 and overall in his Department are (a) women, (b) from ethnic minorities and (c) disabled people.

Mr. Mates: At 1 January 1993 there were 114 female staff in the Northern Ireland Office, home civil service, which represents 50 per cent. of the Department. The number in grades 1 to 7 was as follows:

Grade	Number	Percentage

A total of 14 per cent. of the Department are from the ethnic minorities—London only—and none of the staff is registered disabled.

At 1 January 1992 there were 12,661 female staff in the Northern Ireland civil service, which is 43 per cent. of the service. There were 431, 1·5 per cent., who were, or had been registered as disabled. The Northern Ireland civil service does not monitor the ethnic origin of its staff.

The number and percentage of female staff and staff with disabilities in each grade, 1 to 7, was:

Grade	Number of females	Percentage female	Number who self-reported a disability (SRD)	Percentage SRD	Number registered as disabled (RD)	Percentage RD
1	—	—	—	—	—	—
2	—	—	—	—	—	—
3	1	2·4	1	2·4	1	2·4
4	—	—	—	—	—	—
5	14	7·4	5	2·6	—	—
6	60	17·2	13	3·7	3	0·9
7	81	9·7	22	2·6	3	0·4

In addition, 64 registered disabled people are currently working in the Northern Ireland civil service under the sheltered placement scheme.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will authorise legal support for individual members of the Royal Ulster Constabulary who have been falsely accused in future action for damages against their false accusers.

Mr. Mates: No. It is appropriately the relevant police staff associations who provide legal support for their members at disciplinary hearings and for other relevant matters, or individual officers may make their own arrangements. However, the police authority for Northern Ireland does provide financial assistance to members of the Royal Ulster Constabulary who intend issuing defamation proceedings, in accordance with set criteria which also apply to forces in Great Britain.

VAT (Fuel and Power)

Mr. Stott: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps his Department will take to ensure that those on low incomes who do not qualify for social security payments are able to meet the extra costs of fuel bills after the value added tax increases have been applied; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mates: As my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer made clear in his Budget statement, extra help will be available to those dependent on income-related benefits. This will be paid from 1 April 1994 and will be in addition to the automatic increases in benefits to reflect the impact of the increases in fuel bills on the retail prices index.

Wasting Police Time

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many prosecutions have been initiated against persons in Northern Ireland who have been responsible for wasting police time in each of the last five years.

Mr. Mates: The requested information is as follows:

Year	Number
1988	8
1989	21
1990	4
1991	6
1992	3

Paramilitaries

Rev. William McCrea: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people have been killed by (a) republican paramilitaries and (b) loyalist paramilitaries over the last 20 years; and if he will give details by constituency.

Mr. Mates: From the information available it is believed that over 2,600 people have been killed as a result of the actions of terrorist organisations in Northern Ireland during the period from 1969 to 1992. It is not known in every case precisely which paramilitary organisation was responsible, but it is likely that 69 per cent. of deaths involved republican groups and 31 per cent. involved loyalist groups. It is not possible to provide this information by constituency without disproportionate cost.

Newtownabbey RUC Station

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many reported crimes have been recorded at Newtownabbey RUC station in each of the last three years; and how many prosecutions have taken place in respect of reported crimes.

Mr. Mates: The total number of crimes reported and detected in the Newtownabbey station and sub-divisional areas during the last three years is as follows:

Year	Newtownabbey Station Area		Newtownabbey Sub-divisional Area
	Number of crimes recorded	[1]Number of crimes detected	Number of crimes recorded	[1]Number of crimes detected
1990	1,153	539	2,867	1,246
1991	1,188	470	3,007	1,187
1992	1,411	499	3,290	1,178

[1] The number of crimes detected for each year may include crimes recorded/committed in previous year.

Figures in respect of prosecutions are available only by sub-divisional area and are as follows:

Year	Persons proceeded against
1990	403
1991	372
1992	409

Notes:

1. The statistics shown refer to the area in which the crime was committed and not necessarily the area where the person proceeded against resided.

2. One person may be proceeded against for more than one offence or a number of persons may be convicted in relation to one offence.
3. The figure for persons proceeded against in each year includes persons proceeded against for offences committed in previous years.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps are being taken to increase patrolling and surveillance in estates for which Newtownabbey RUC station is responsible in east Antrim.

Mr. Mates: This is an operational matter for the Chief Constable of the RUC, but I understand that police patrols have recently been increased in the Newtownabbey sub-division area.

Housing Executive

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many dwellings are owned by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive in (a) each housing executive district, (b) each council area and (c) each housing executive region.

Mr. Atkins: I am advised by the chief executive of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive that at 1 March 1993, the number of dwellings owned by the housing executive in each housing executive district, region and council area was as follows:

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the costs of closing the Housing Executive's direct labour organisation this year and the total number of jobs which would be lost by district.

Mr. Atkins: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland housing executive, but I understand from the chief executive that the net cost of closing the direct labour organisation after taking account of anticipated receipts from the realisation of assets and the disposal of depots is £2·2 million. The number of job losses, by depot, based on employees, permanent and temporary, in post at the end of January 1993 is:

	Number
Central unit	22
Belfast	250
Craigavon	54
Ballyclare	164
Coleraine	52
Derry	90
Omagh	102
Support services	15

The Housing Executive hopes that some of the salaried staff included in the above can be redeployed. It should also be noted that the Housing Executive had intended to scale down the DLO labour force from around 750 at present to about 250 to 300 by the end of 1993-94.

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list by district the total number of Housing Executive contract modules per category for which the executive's DLO tendered, the number of contracts which the DLO actually won and the number in which it came second.

Mr. Atkins: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive, but I understand from the chief executive that the information, by Housing Executive region, is as follows:

	COT			Electrical			Building			Plumbing			Grounds Maintenance

[1] The Housing Executive has questioned the viability of a number of these tenders.

Notes:
COT = Cchange of Tenancy.
A = Number of modules competed for.
B = Number of modules won by DLO.
C = Number of modules in which DLO came second.

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement giving details of the criteria for commercial viability applied by the Housing Executive to its DLO; and what consultation took place with the DOE regarding the establishment, interpretation and implementation of these criteria.

Mr. Atkins: The criteria were that all work undertaken from April 1993 had to be won following competition with the private sector and that from the same date no deficit financing would be available to cover trading losses. This followed discussion between the Department and the Housing Executive in the light of trading losses of some £4·5 million in 1991-92 and a projected loss of £3 million in 1992-93. There was regular discussion between the Housing Executive and the Department on the interpretation and implementation of these criteria.

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the total value of contracts won be each DLO district of the Housing Executive for the next year and the projected profits or losses.

Mr. Atkins: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive, but I understand from the chief executive that the information is as follows:

A. Building maintenance

Depot	Valuations of contracts won	Trading account projections for 1993-94
Belfast	1,561,942	[1]155,000	Loss
Ballyclare	308,713	[2]—
Coleraine	445,777	35,000	Loss
Pennyburn	168,388	[2]—

[2] The tenders won by these depots represented such a small fraction of the turnover required to support the existing Depot structures that the Housing Executive considered it impossible to conduct meaningful projected trading accounts with prospects of future viability.

B. Grounds maintenance

Depot	Valuations of contracts won	Projected profit-loss 1993-94 before application of overheads and running costs
Belfast	473,994	41,000	Loss
Ballyclare	306,671	35,000	Profit
Coleraine	142,695	17,000	Profit
Pennyburn	498,500	1,000	Loss
Omagh	110,920	14,000	Loss

Note:
An attempt to aggregate the Ballyclare and Coleraine operations with the most viable tenders won by other depots into a single operational unit (to reduce overheads and running costs to a minimum) produced a projected trading account net loss of £54,000.

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what profits were made by each section of the Housing Executive's DLO over the past year.

Mr. Atkins: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive, but I understand from the chief executive that provisional accounts for the 11 months to 28 February 1993 are as follows:

Depot	Building maintenance (£)	Grounds maintenance (£)	Total (£)
Belfast	(571,000)	(235,000)	(806,000)
Carn	(816,000)	(75,000)	(891,000)
Ballyclare	(224,000)	39,000	(185,000)
Coleraine	45,000	5,000	50,000
Pennyburn	(147,000)	36,000	(111,000)
Omagh	(713,000)	(75,000)	(788,000)
Total loss	(2,426,000)	(305,000)	(2,731,000)

Note: Figures in brackets indicate a loss.

The Carn depot building maintenance operation was terminated at the end of October 1992. The estimated total DLO trading loss for the full year to 31 March 1993 is presently estimated at £3 million.

Employees (Religious Affiliation)

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the annual cost of monitoring the religious affiliation of the employees of Northern Ireland Railways.

Mr. Atkins: This is a matter for the company. I am advised by the managing director that the annual cost of monitoring the religious affiliation of the employees of Northern Ireland Railways Company Ltd. is not identified separately but is built into clerical and management labour costs within the human resources department and into general administration costs.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the annual cost of monitoring the religious affiliation of the employees of (a) Ulsterbus Ltd., (b) Citybus Ltd. and (c) Flexibus.

Mr. Atkins: This is a matter for the companies. I am advised by the managing director that the annual cost of monitoring religious affiliation is not readily available since it is not separately quantified but forms part of the overall cost of personnel administration.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the annual cost of monitoring the religious affiliation of the employees of the Youth Council for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Hanley: The approximate cost in 1991-92 was £250.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the annual cost of monitoring the religious affiliation of the employees of the Local Enterprise Development Unit.

Mr. Atkins: The annual cost is negligible.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the annual cost of monitoring the religious affiliation of the employees of (a) Belfast international airport and (b) Belfast city airport.

Mr. Atkins: The annual cost of monitoring the religious affiliation of the employees at Belfast international airport and Belfast city airport is estimated to be £3,500 and £20,000 respectively.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the annual cost of monitoring the religious affiliation of the employees of the Queen's university, Belfast.

Mr. Hanley: The annual cost is estimated to be some £42,000.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the annual cost of monitoring the religious affiliation of the employees of the Northern Ireland Transport Holding Company.

Mr. Atkins: This is a matter for the company. I am advised by the chief executive that the annual cost of monitoring religious affiliation of the employees of the NITHC is not identified separately but absorbed within normal administration costs.

Terrorism

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the most comprehensive list of terrorist-related incidents kept by his Department; and where it can be inspected.

Mr. Mates: Official records of terrorist-related incidents contain sensitive information and it is not therefore appropriate to make them available for public inspection. However, I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave to a question by the hon. Member for Kingston-Upon-Hull, North (Mr. McNamara) on 3 December 1992 at column 308. A comprehensive list of persons who have been killed as a result of the security situation in Northern Ireland, Great Britain, Republic of Ireland and mainland Europe, including the name, date of death, and a brief report of the incident, is currently being compiled and will be placed in the Library.

Labour Statistics

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people are employed by (a) the Northern Ireland Curriculum Council, (b) the university of Ulster and (c) Queen's university, Belfast.

Mr. Hanley: A total of 61 people are employed at the Northern Ireland Curriculum Council, 3,018 at the university of Ulster and 2,819 at the Queen's university of Belfast.

Ulster Museum

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are the attendance figures for 1992 for the Ulster museum and its outstations, with the percentage increase or decrease on the 1991 figures.

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given to the hon. Member for Warley, East (Mr. Faulds) on 19 January 1993, Official Report, columns 174-75.

Private Finance Initiative

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps his Department has taken to implement the private finance initiative announced in the autumn statement on 12 November 1992 and in the treasury private finance guidance published on 9 December 1992.

Mr. Mates: The potential scope of the initiative will vary between Departments. The Northern Ireland Office and Northern Ireland Departments are examining the scope for involving the private sector in the ways suggested by the interim guidance published by the Treasury on 9 December and the further published guidance on contract energy management—17 February 1993—and joint ventures—16 March 1993.

Valuation and Lands Agency

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made in establishing the Valuation and Lands Agency.

Mr. Mates: I am pleased to announce that the Valuation and Lands Agency has been established as an executive agency of the Department of Finance and Personnel for Northern Ireland with effect from today. It will be responsible for the provision of a good quality, cost-effective valuation and estate management service and fair, prompt and helpful service to clients, taxpayers and ratepayers. The following targets have been set for the agency:

(1) Rating—to complete 42,000 continuous revision cases and 700 appeals to the Commissioner of Valuation, equivalent to a case weighted output of 25,500 units;

Other—to complete 23,750 cases for other Government Departments and public bodies, equivalent to a case weighted output of 31,800 units;
(2) To achieve an increase in valuer productivity and all staff productivity of 3·8 per cent. and 2·5 per cent. respectively;
(3) To achieve a reduction of 3 per cent. in the real value of unit cost of casework;
(4) Where continuous revision cases are subject to retrospective backdating, to issue 75 per cent. of certificates within six months and 92 per cent. within 12 months of the event giving rise to the revision of the valuation list.
(5) To increase by 3 per cent. the percentage of selected representative cases completed within agreed time targets.
(6) To complete 85 per cent. of appeals where the assessment of NAV decided by the Commissioner of Valuation falls within established valuation tolerances of the initial assessment.

The valuation and Lands Agency has also to achieve running costs cash efficiency savings of at least 2·5 per cent.

I am confident that the new status as a next steps agency will lead to a significant and sustained improvement in the delivery of this important public service. I am delegating full managerial authority for the agency's day-to-day operations to the chief executive. The policy and resources framework for the agency is set out in the framework document, copies of which are being placed in the Library of the House.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Defence Diversification

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what resources he expects to be released from the EC PERIFRA II programme in inward investment to support diversification from defence industry manufacture.

Mr. Needham: A total of 8·128 mecu of grant under the EC scheme PERIFRA II has been awarded to eight United Kingdom projects. Five of the eight, attracting grant of 5·729 mecu, are defence diversification projects. No further projects will be considered by the Commission under this scheme.

Direct Selling

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many people are employed in the direct selling industry in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Leigh: I regret that this information is not available.

Energy Advisory Panel

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he expects to establish his new energy advisory panel mentioned in Cm. 2235, paragraph 3.32, how many experts he plans to be members of the energy advisory panel; how the selection of panel members will be made; what additional resources he will make available to support the energy advisory panel's work; whether the energy advisory panel will meet annually; and whether information submitted to or obtained by the energy advisory panel will be treated in commercial confidence.

Mr. Eggar: I shall announce further details about the energy advisory panel in due course.

Annual Energy Report

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade at what time of year he intends to publish the annual energy report announced at paragraph 3.31 of his report, "The Prospects for Coal", Cm. 2235.

Mr. Eggar: An announcement about the timing of the annual energy report will be made in due course.

Private Finance Initiative

Sir John Stanley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps his Department has taken to implement the private finance initiative announced in the autumn statement on 12 November 1992 and in the Treasury private finance guidance published on 9 December 1992.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade is considering, in consultation with the Treasury, how the private finance initiative can be applied to projects for which his Department is responsible.

Non-fossil Fuel Levy

Mr. Morgan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he proposes to review the 1998 data for ending the non-fossil fuel levy and obligation; what consultations he has had with the Energy and Competition Commissioners of the European Community; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: My Department is in discussion with the European Commission concerning the 1998 limitation on the non-fossil fuel obligation in relation to renewables.

Aerospace Companies

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the amount of launch aid made available to British aerospace companies for each year since 1986.

Mr. Heseltine: Launch aid payments to British aerospace companies for each year since 1986 are as follows:

Year	£ millions
1986-87	119·0
1987-88	51·9
1988-89	98·4
1989-90	133·6
1990-91	141·1
1991-92	78·7
1992-93	31·3

Firework-related Injuries

Mr. Moss: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many firework-related injuries were referred to hospitals in 1992.

Mr. Leigh: According to reports from accident and emergency units in hospitals in England, Wales and Scotland, 942 people required treatment for injuries caused by fireworks, an increase of 13·25 per cent. over the annual average of 830 injuries since the end of 1987. A breakdown of the figures for 1992 and for the previous four years by region, type of injury and kind of firework involved is being placed today in the Libraries of both Houses of Parliament. My Department will be discussing with the industry what further steps are to be taken to encourage safer use of fireworks in the future.

Atomic Energy Authority

Mr. Hayes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement about his plans for the future of the Atomic Energy Authority.

Mr. Eggar: In its report on the Atomic Energy Authority published last May, Cm 1947, the Monopolies and Mergers Commission recommended a further review of strategic options for the Atomic Energy Authority, including that of removing the Atomic Energy Authority's business activities from the public sector where practicable. As a first step, I am commissioning independent consultants to consider the practicability of privatisation and to advise on the main options. I shall decide how best to proceed in the light of the report and the Atomic Energy Authority's own views.

Ministerial Travel Costs

Mr. Tipping: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total cost to his Department of each trip abroad on coal and energy-related matters undertaken by himself and the Minister for Energy; and what contributions to the costs were made by other organisations.

Mr. Heseltine [holding answer 9 March 1993]: The information requested is as follows:

Destination	Total cost £
President
Russia and Azerbaijan[1]	11,600
President and Mr. Eggar
Belgium	2,200
Mr. Eggar
United States of America (twice)	13,200
Belgium (twice)	900
Portugal	1,000
Norway (four times)	6,300
Austria	1,000
Germany	1,200
Japan/China	10,100
France	600

[1] Energy related matters formed only part of the purpose of this trip.

No contributions to the costs of these visits were received from other organisations.

Opencast Coal Mining

Mr. Dover: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what assessment he has made of the level of private sector investment in the supply of British coal from opencast sites; and how many people are employed in this sector;

(2) how many jobs of private sector employees engaged in opencast coal production would be lost if British Coal opencast coal production was cut by (a) one quarter, (b) one third or (c) one half.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 24 March 1993]: British Coal has advised me that private sector companies have invested over £1 billion in plant and other assets engaged in opencast mining in the United Kingdom. Some 10,000 people are directly employed in opencast operations. Employment levels could be expected to change broadly in line with changes in output.

Mr. Dover: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the assessed reserves of opencast coal in England, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 24 March 1993]: British Coal advises me that proved reserves of opencast coal in Great Britain are in excess of 300 million tonnes, and there are further substantial unproved reserves. There are no figures available for lignite reserves in Northern Ireland.

Chemical Weapons

Mr. Flynn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many chemicals and families of chemicals could potentially be used as chemical weapons.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 31 March 1993]: Any toxic chemical could potentially be used as a chemical weapon.

Regional Selective Assistance

Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 22 March, Official Report, column 484, what was the cost to public funds, in cash terms and at 1993 prices, of the offers for regional selective assistance in the Cinderford and Ross-on-Wye travel-to-work area in each year since 1984.

Mr. Needham: The totals of payments made in cash terms and at 1993 prices under the offers of RSA made in the Cinderford and Ross-on-Wye travel-to-work area for the years 1984 to 1993, to dates are as follows:

Year	Cash Terms £000	1993 Prices £000
1985	1,086	712
1986	947	641

WALES

Employment Projects, North Wales

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the projects under way in north Wales designed to improve employment prospects, and the number of people they are helping.

Mr. David Hunt: As well as a substantial number of capital projects in north Wales, my Department has recorded nearly 100 industrial projects in the counties of Gwynedd and Clwyd since 1 January 1992 which, in total, promise to create or safeguard in excess of 5,200 jobs. These figures are based on information provided by companies at the time projects were recorded and have not been amended to take account of subsequent developments. The following is a list of the companies concerned, excluding those that have requested confidentiality.

Water Disconnections

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what guidelines on special circumstances have been issued to Welsh Water in respect of the disconnection of customers for delinquent payments.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Director General of Water Services issued guidelines to water companies last year on a consistent and fair approach towards customers with unpaid charges. This followed a review of companies policy and practice. He is now considering reports from the regional customer services committees on the effectiveness of the guidelines and will be considering what further action may be necessary.

Class Sizes

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, what was the average class size of (a) primary schools, (b) secondary schools, (c) sixth form colleges, (d) colleges of further education, (e) colleges of higher education and (f) infant schools in each year since 1979.

Mr. David Hunt [pursuant to his reply, 17 February 1993, c. 273]: The methodology applied to the 1990-91 data was inconsistent with other years. The figures for primary schools has now been revised as shown in the table. The average class size in primary and secondary schools and further and higher education courses in Wales since 1979 is shown in the following table. Figures are not available for further and higher education courses prior to 1982-83 and for secondary schools prior to 1986-87. Information on the average class size of infant schools and sixth form colleges is not collected separately. Information for the colleges of the university of Wales is not available.

[1] Prior to 1986-87 information on the size of classes in secondary schools was collected on a different basis. These data, relating to the numbers of classes by size, are given in the Secondary Education section of "Statistics of Education in Wales: Schools", copies of which are available in the Library of the House.

[2] Average class sizes for Wales are calculated on a further education or higher education basis and the figures do include a small number of further education courses run at higher education establishments and higher education courses at further education establishments.

[3] Changes in methodology introduced in 1988-89 may affect comparisons of indicators between 1987-88 and 1988-89.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the number of unemployed (a) men and (b) women in south Wales; and if he will give for each sex the percentage unemployment rate.

Mr. David Hunt: In February 1993 there were 70,178 male and 17,295 female unemployed claimants in south Wales—defined as the counties of Gwent and Mid, South and West Glamorgan—representing 15·5 and 5 per cent. of the male and female work force respectively.

M4 (Sign Board)

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he will re-locate the sign board on the M4 westbound carriageway welcoming motorists to Wales to its correct geographical position.

Sir Wyn Roberts: I do not intend to relocate the existing "Welcome to Wales" sign, which is not intended to mark the border. The border itself is the centre of the River Wye. The sign is currently situated half a mile from the border and as close to the border as highway safety considerations will allow.

Dredging

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will place in the Library all the information he has received to date in relation to the monitoring processes required under the licence conditions imposed on the Llanelli Sand Dredging Company for dredging on the Helwick bank.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: No material required under the Government view has yet been received. Once it has, and my right hon. Friend is satisfied that it meets the conditions attached to the licence, I will make copies available in the Library of the House. Copies will also be sent to interested parties.

Llantarnam Abbey

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will make a statement about the future of Llantarnam abbey.

(2) what representations he has received regarding the future of Llantarnam abbey; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Llantarnam abbey is a grade II listed building and proposals affecting its future will be considered against published planning guidance. Representations were made to the Department concerning the impact on the abbey of our proposals for the A4042 Llantarnam bypass. These were considered at a public inquiry held in February/March 1992 and orders for the bypass were published in December 1992.

Cardiac Surgery

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to establish a second cardiac surgery unit in south Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend will announce his proposals for the further development of cardiac services when he has had an opportunity to consider the conclusions of the Touche Ross options appraisal report.

Consultants

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish for each health authority in Wales a list of reports commissioned from management consultants in each of the last three years to date specifying (a) the date on which the work was commissioned, (b) the name of the management consultants and (c) the subject area.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Nurses (Grading)

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many appeals are still outstanding under the scheme for the regrading of nurses in Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The numbers of clinical grading appeals currently outstanding in Wales are as follows:

	Number
At employing authority level	120
At regional level (Welsh Appeals Committee)	1,285
At national level (Negotiating Council)	223

British Council

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what initiatives have been taken by the British Council to raise the profile of Wales abroad.

Mr. David Hunt: The British Council in Wales aims to promote an overseas awareness of the distinctive culture, resources and achievements of Wales. It co-ordinates educational missions and exhibitions overseas, for example in Hong Kong, Malaysia and Germany, to enhance an understanding of contemporary Wales and to publicise the quality of Welsh further and higher education and Welsh achievements in science and research. In May 1993, it is arranging in collaboration with British Council offices overseas and commercial sponsors—an art event "Wales Week at Stuttgart".

There are a number of other activities which the British Council undertakes which enable overseas specialists to visit Wales, and also to enable Welsh specialists to go to other countries to organise specialist courses.

Radiotherapy

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will now take steps to ensure that radiotherapy treatment for cancer patients can be made available at Ysbyty Gwynedd; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend is currently considering an investment appraisal report on how best to establish a dedicated cancer treatment centre with radiotherapy facilities in north Wales. A separate economic appraisal of a recent proposal by the Clatterbridge centre for oncology for a networked radiotherapy treatment service is also being considered. My right hon. Friend hopes to be in a position to make an announcement soon.

Continuing Care Beds

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are the latest figures for the numbers of continuing care beds in each health authority in Wales; and what the corresponding figures were five years earlier.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The requested information is not available centrally.

Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowance

Mr. Jonathan Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what progress his Department has made in meeting its targets for settling hill livestock compensatory allowance claims in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: The target was to pay, by the end of March, 80 per cent. of claims received. I am pleased to report that 86 per cent. of claims received had been met.

Urban Programme

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the implications for Wales of the reduction in the resources committed for the 1993-94 programme.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Excluding special commitments for the national garden festival and the community revival strategy in 1992-93, Wales will benefit from a slightly higher urban programme settlement in 1993-94 than in the previous year.

Mental Handicap

Mr. John Townend: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the average cost to public funds of mentally handicapped patients in small group homes in Wales, including their DHS benefit; and what is the corresponding figure for long-stay accommodation.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The cost of providing a home and support in the community varies widely according to individual need. It can be slightly greater than providing support in long-stay institutions. The additional cost is spent to ensure a better quality of life in the community.

Health Checks

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proportion of patients reaching the age of 65 years are receiving an automatic health check under his new general practitioner contract in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information is not available centrally. As from today, patients will be able to require a three-year health check, as prescribed in general practitioners' terms of service and in line with the patients charter.

Community Care

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assistance his Department has given to the Welsh Consumers Council to evaluate the requirements of consumers of community care services in Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Welsh Office has not given assistance to the Welsh Consumer Council for this purpose. It is a function of local councils to assess the needs of their local populations for community services in preparing their social care plans. Resources have been made available to the Welsh Consumer Council to manage a scheme to set up panels of users and carers across Wales to evaluate the published information about social and community care which is produced by the statutory authorities.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he has taken to distribute in Wales his Department's brochure, "Community Care Changes in April 1993"; how many copies of the brochure have been printed; and what has been the cost to date .

Mr. Gwilym Jones: A total of 80,000 bilingual copies of the leaflet, "Community Care in April 1993", have been produced, at a cost of £13,550. They have been distributed to main post offices and Benefits Agency offices throughout Wales.

Mr. John Townend: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate has been made of the total revenue cost to public funds in respect of the 20-year old male mentally ill patient designated in the very challenging behaviour class who recently left the Llanfrechfa Grange hospital, Newport, into community care; what was the amount of special grant given to the Welsh Office; and what are the capital costs for this patient.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Information relating to specific individuals is not kept centrally. The costs of support in both long stay institutions and in the community are based on individual needs.

Funds are available from the mental handicap strategy for the revenue costs to support individuals with a mental handicap in the community. While they may be slightly greater than comparable costs of hospital care, the additional cost is well spent to ensure improvements in the quality of life for the individuals concerned.

No central information is available on capital costs of individual schemes funded by housing associations or private mortgages. The mental handicap strategy does not normally supply capital monies for the purchase of houses.

Schools (Fires)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many schools have been damaged or destroyed by arson since 1980 in each local education authority area;

(2) what has been the estimated financial cost of the damage to schools by fire, by accident or deliberate means, since 1980.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Schools (Vandalism)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what initiatives he is taking to lessen vandalism in and about Wales;

(2) what policies he has to lessen damage to schools by arson; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Building bulletins relating to crime prevention and fire safety in schools have been issued to local education authorities. These provide practical guidance to help combat vandalism and arson.

Rough Sleepers

Mr. Jonathan Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he is taking to assist rough sleepers in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Office of Population Censuses and Surveys carried out a census of people sleeping rough in England and Wales on the night of 21 to 22 April 1991 and found 29 rough sleepers in the Principality.

Local councils wishing to test innovative approaches in the exercise of their responsibilities for dealing with such cases may apply under the homelessness reserve, which has been maintained for 1993-94.

Local Government Reform

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will take account of the results of the referendums to be held in the Llangollen area on the proposals for local government reform when drawing up the legislation.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend and I will be interested to see the results when they are available.

Pupil-Teacher Ratio

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the average pupil-teacher ratio in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in Wales.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The information requested is shown in the table:

	Pupil teacher ratio within schools
(a) maintained primary schools	22·3
(b) maintained secondary schools	15·6

Note: As at January 1992.

Social Rented Housing

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what support his Department gives to research into fire protection in social rented houses in Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: A grant of £27,000 has been awarded to the Cardiff institute of higher education under the Welsh Office's housing options Wales small grants scheme which is enabling a fire risk and safety assessment project to be undertaken.

Hazardous Waste

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what account has been taken of the guidance given in the World Health Organisation European Series Number 46 publication on Site Selection for New Hazardous Waste Management Facilities (1993) in making decisions to grant planning permission for waste incineration facilities in Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: No planning applications for waste incineration facilities have been considered by my right hon. Friend in 1993. Information on decisions taken by local planning authorities is not held centrally.

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many of the appointments made by him as listed in "Public Bodies 1992" came within the categories set out in paragraphs 49 and 50 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers" and required a submission to the Prime Minister.

Mr. David Hunt: I consult the Prime Minister as necessary in accordance with the guidance in "Questions of Procedure for Ministers".

Private Finance Initiative

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps his Department has taken to implement the private finance initiative announced in the autumn statement on 12 November 1992 and in the Treasury private finance guidance published on 9 December 1992.

Mr. David Hunt: My Department is examining the scope for involving the private sector in the ways suggested in the interim guidance published by the Treasury. In a number of areas, the Welsh Office and its sponsored bodies are actively engaged in joint ventures with the private sector. I expect the new guidelines to help expand this practice into new fields. A number of such projects are already under consideration.

Schools (Capital Spending)

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the amount of capital spending on schools for each of the local education authorities for each of the last five years in (a) cash terms and (b) real terms.

Mr. David Hunt: The information available is given in the table.

Quinquennial Reviews

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to commence the quinquennial reviews of (a) the national library of Wales, (b) the national museum of Wales, (c) the Royal Commission on Ancient and Historical Monuments in Wales, (d) the Welsh National Board for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting, (e) Housing for Wales and (f) the Curriculum Council for Wales; what proposals he has for meeting his staffing requirements for release for undertaking these quinquennial reviews; what proposals he has to set up a section of his Department to undertake reviews; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Financial management and policy reviews are planned to begin during 1993-94 for all these bodies, with the exception of the Curriculum Council for Wales, because, subject to the passage of the Education Bill, it will be replaced by the Curriculum and Assessment Authority for Wales on 1 April 1994.

Reviews are normally carried out by staff temporarily transferred from other duties; I have no proposals for setting up a special section.

Housing Survey

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects the Welsh Office housing survey to be completed and published; what data he has collected in that survey in relation to numbers speaking or understanding Welsh; which company won the contract to carry out the survey; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Welsh house condition survey is being undertaken in two stages. Two separate contracts have been placed after competitive tendering.

The first stage was a social survey which incorporated questions on housing, training and education, and the Welsh language. A copy of the questionnaire used to collect data about understanding of the language will be placed in the Library of the House. The contract for this survey was won by Research and Marketing Ltd. Survey fieldwork was completed at the end of 1992 and processing of responses is continuing. Results for the various topics covered will be published separately later this year.

The second stage will be a physical survey. The fieldwork will be undertaken in the next few months and results will be published by early 1994. The contract for this survey has been won by Bailey Widnell.

Llwynmawr Site, Swansea

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on what date his deferment of his planning directive relating to the Llwynmawr site in Swansea expires.

Mr. David Hunt: In view of the strength of local feeling expressed to me by parents and their representatives in the Sketty and Ty Coch areas, I am today consulting the West Glamorgan county council about revocation of the direction to sell the land at Llwynmawr road, Swansea.

Health Promotion

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the outcome of the recent efficiency scrutiny of health promotion in Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: The scrutiny team made 37 recommendations aimed at improving the value for money obtained from the resources invested in health promotion in Wales. In particular, the team considered that local responsibility and accountability for health promotion should be strengthened, but with improved links between local and national planning, and that the disciplines of commissioner/provider arrangements should be extended in the field of health promotion.

The Department has accepted almost all of the recommendations, and has already set action in hand with a view to implementing the great majority of them by the beginning of financial year 1994-95.

I have today placed in the Library of the House a copy of the efficiency scrutiny report and the Department's response.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list, for each of the last five years, the duration, value and nature of contracts awarded by his Department to Arthur Andersen, Andersen Consulting, KPMG Peat Marwick McLintock, Touche Ross, Ernst and Young and Price Waterhouse.

Miss Widdecombe: The information has been placed in the Library under the heading "DSS Management and Information Technology Consultancy Contracts 1988-89/ 1992-93".

Income-related Benefits

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate for 1993-94 the number of pensioners (a) in receipt of income-related benefits, (b) entitled to receive but not claiming income-related benefits and (c) with income £10 per week or less above the eligibility level for receipt of income-related benefits.

Mr. Burt: The available information is in the tables. The latest available figures on the take up of income-related benefits can be found in "Income Related Benefits—Estimates of Take Up in 1989" published on 11 January 1993, copies of which are in the Library. It is not possible to provide information regarding take-up of benefit in 1993-94 as DSS does not produce such forecasts.

Mr. Dewar To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate for 1993-94 the number of (a) claimants and dependants in receipt of income-related benefits, (b) people and their dependants who are eligible for, but not claiming, income-related benefits or (c) people and dependants with incomes £10 a week or less above the eligibility limits for income-related benefits.

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether participants on learning for work and the new community action programme who are unable to get jobs after they leave their scheme can immediately take advantage of the 21-hour rule; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: People who have completed the learning for work scheme or the community action programme have to satisfy the normal qualifying conditions before they can take advantage of the 21-hour rule concession. Those who receive an element of income support during their participation will be treated in the same way as other income support recipients. The three months in receipt of a qualifying benefit required under the 21-hour rule can therefore include time spent in either of these schemes.

Utilities Charges

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what allowance is made when calculating how much income support/pension is to be paid for the variations in charges between privatised utilities in different parts of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Burt: None. Income support is a national scheme.

Correspondence

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he intends to reply to the letters to him dated 8 January, 21 January and 25 February, with regared to Mr. McNulty, 12 Osborne road, sent to him by the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton.

Mr. Scott: The right hon. Member's letter of 8 January was passed to Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency to reply as it concerned an operational matter. I understand from Mr. Bichard that he replied on 19 January 1993. The letter of 21 January did not seek action or comment on the part of Ministers. I have no record of receipt of the letter of 25 February from the right hon. Member on this matter.

Mr. Kaufman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he intends to reply to the letter to him dated 25 February from the right hon. Member for Manchester, Gorton, with regard to Mrs. A. Ali, 25 Hator road, about whom the right hon. Member originally wrote on 12 October 1992.

Mr. Scott: The administration of mobility allowance is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the benefits agency. I understand that the right hon. Member has already received from the agency a reply both to his earlier letter and to his question. I regret the delay he has suffered.

Letter from Ann Robinson to Mr. Gerald Kaufman, dated 1 April 1993

As Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency it is the responsibility of Mr. Michael Bichard to answer questions on relevant operational matters. However, as Mr. Bichard is away at the moment I am replying on his behalf to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking when he will reply to the letter to him dated 25 February asking about Mrs. A. Ali, 25 Hector Road, about whom the Right honourable Member originally wrote on 12 October 1992.

I am pleased to inform you that Mrs. Ali's claim to Mobility Allowance on behalf of her daughter Shabana has now been decided and due notification has been sent to her. I am sorry that there has been such a long delay in dealing with Mrs. Ali's claim and I offer my sincere apologies to her for the distress and inconvenience this must have caused. I have written to you separately and in greater detail about this matter.

I hope you find this reply helpful. A copy will appear in the Official Report and a copy will also be placed in the Library.

Council Tax

Mr. Nigel Evans (Ribble Valley): To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what help will be available to people on low incomes to pay their council tax bills from 1 April; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: The new council tax benefit scheme will replace the community charge benefit scheme from 1 April and is expected to help more than 5 million people to pay their council tax bills, at an estimated cost of around £1·6 billion. People on low incomes will be eligible to claim benefit whether they are in or out of work, sick or unemployed.

Unlike community charge benefit, there will be no minimum charge to pay under the council tax benefit scheme, so that people on income support or equivalent levels of income, will receive help with up to 100 per cent. of their tax bills. Smaller rebates, based on a sliding scale, will be available to people with incomes above income support levels.

Council tax benefit will also be available to certain people with higher incomes who would not normally qualify for income-related benefits where they share their home on a non-commercial basis with another person who is on a low income.

In addition, people on income-related benefits will gain from the Government's decision not to re-claim the amount included in these benefits for the 20 per cent. contribution under the community charge. This measure is worth £0·75 billion at 1993-94 prices.

This means that even after paying their local tax, around six million liable people on income-related benefits will be better off under the new council tax benefit scheme. Some people will be up to £2·80 a week better off.

The new benefit has already been publicised in local, regional and free newspapers during March, and will be followed up by further advertising during April and May at a cost of around £750,000. A comprehensive leaflet called "Council Tax Benefit—Help with the Council Tax" —CTB1—has already been produced and can be obtained from post offices, social security offices and council offices, or by returning the coupon or telephoning free the number shown in the press advertisement. The leaflet is also available in 12 other languages.

A detailed information pack, setting out the principles of the new scheme, has been sent to each Member of Parliament, and will be made available to other interested groups.

Disability (Grants) Bill

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how he intends to fund the independent living (extension) fund, the independent living (1993) fund and motability while the Disability (Grants) Bill is passing through the legislative process; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: The Disability (Grants) Bill currently before Parliament will allow the Secretary of State to make grants to certain named organisations that help disabled people lead a more independent life in the community. These organisations are the independent living (extension) fund, the independent living (1993) fund, and motability.

I am pleased to be able to announce the launch today of these new funds for independent living. The extension fund will continue to pay cash to everyone who is currently receiving money from the ILF, while the 1993 fund, in conjunction with local authorities will begin to accept new applications.

Parliamentary approval of expenditure on these new services will be sought in the 1993-94 main estimate for the housing benefit administration and council tax benefit administration, payments into the social fund in respect of discretionary expenditure, and other grants vote—class XIII, vote 3. Pending that approval, urgent expenditure estimated at £42,400,000 will be met by repayable advances from the contingencies fund.

Contrary to Government accounting conventions, expenditure on these new services was included in the 1993-94 main estimate for class XIII, vote 3 in advance of the necessary legislation achieving Second Reading. The provision in question, totalling £120,277,000 will not be used for this or any other purpose until the enabling legislation has come into force.

National Insurance Fund

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the arrangements for paying the new Treasury grant to the national insurance fund.

Miss Widdecombe: The Social Security Act 1993, which received Royal Assent in January 1993, gave powers for the payment of a Treasury grant to the national insurance fund to strengthen the fund's balance. Parliamentary approval for this new expenditure will be sought in the 1993-94 main estimate for the Department of Social Security's housing benefit, council tax benefit, payments into the national insurance fund and payments into the social fund in respect of regulated expenditure vote—class XIII, vote 2—presented to the House on 9 March. Pending that approval, expenditure estimated at £1·5 billion will be met by repayable advances from the contingencies fund.

Fuel Costs

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what measures he is taking to protect pensioners and those on low incomes from the effects of the imposition of value added tax upon domestic fuel; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to the hon. Member for Bradford, West (Mr. Madden) on 22 March, at column 511.

Private Finance Initiative

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps his Department has taken to implement the private finance initiative announced in the autumn statement on 12 November 1992 and in the Treasury private finance guidance published on 9 December 1992.

Miss Widdecombe: Our next steps agencies are examining the scope for private finance in a number of areas, including joint ventures in information technology projects, setting up and running staff child care facilities, property development and redeveloping existing sites, and leasing computer hardware.

Pensioners

Mr. Dover: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pensioners are estimated to have benefited from increases in the pensioner premium in income support since the introduction of the scheme.

Mr. Burt: The latest available data[1] indicated that there were 1,369,000 income support recipients aged over 60 receiving one of the pensioner premiums. There have been increases in some or all of the pensioner premiums, over and above the normal annual upratings, in October 1989, April 1991, April 1992 and October 1992.

Percentage Disablement Award

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the level of percentage disablement award for the claims prior to 1992 which went to the medical appeal tribunal in the northern region.

Mr. Scott: Social security administration is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from David Riggs to Mr. Bill Etherington, dated 31 March 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency it is the responsibility of Michael Bichard to answer questions about relevant operational matters. However, as Mr. Bichard is away at the moment I am replying on his behalf to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking what was the level of disablement award for the claims prior to 1992 which went to the Medical Appeal Tribunal in the Northern Region.

There may be some misunderstanding as to the way the appeals system operates. A customer can appeal against the decision of the adjudicating authorities irrespective of the level of the percentage disablement award. However, if you are relating your question to a specific subject I would be grateful if you would write to me with further details as to the information you require and I will be pleased to answer you with such information as is available.

I am sorry that I am unable to be of more assistance on this occasion. A copy of this letter will appear in the Official Report and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Mucous Membrane Disease

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many claims for mucous membrane disease were made to his Department in the northern region in the two years prior to the take-up campaign of April 1992; and how many claims have been made since April 1992;

(2) what general guidance his Department has issued since 1992 to (a) regional chief medical officers, (b) adjudicating medical authorities and (c) medical appeal tribunals, as to what is considered the appropriate loss of faculty in considering cases of mucous membrane disease.

Mr. Scott: The administration of industrial injuries disablement benefit is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from David Riggs to Mr. Bill Etherington, dated 31 March 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency it is the responsibility of Michael Bichard to answer questions about relevant operational matters. However, as Mr. Bichard is away at the moment I am replying on his behalf to your recent Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking (i) how many claims for mucous membrane disease were made to his Department in the Northern Region in the two years prior to the take up campaign of April 1992; and how many claims have been made since April 1992 (ii) what general guidance his Department has issued since 1992 to (a) regional chief medical officers, (b) adjudicating medical authorities and (c) medical appeal tribunals, as to what is considered the appropriate loss of faculty in cases of mucous membrane disease.

Figures relating to the number of claims to mucous membrane disease(D4) prior to April 1992 are not available, as figures relating to individual prescribed diseases are not routinely kept, and could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. However, as a result of a special exercise undertaken by the Department following the take up campaign I am able to tell you that from June 1992 until the end of February this year 4,146 claims had been received for Prescribed Disease D4 in the Tyne Tees Area.

In answer to your second question; the Department issues "Notes on the Diagnosis of Prescribed Diseases", to the senior medical officers who organize the training of Adjudicating Medical Authorities. Copies of this guidance have been placed in the Library. These adjudicating authorities must make up their own minds on the evidence of particular cases. Medical Appeal Tribunals (MATs) operate independently of the Department as part of the Independent Tribunal Service and the Secretary of State does not issue guidance on such matters to MATs.

I hope that you find this reply helpful. A copy will appear in the Official Report and a copy will also be placed in the Library.

Care Homes

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the implications of his policy of curtailing payment of residential allowance to claimants in care homes when the claimant is away from the care home for longer than six days.

Mr. Burt: We have recently received a number of representations from hon. Members and others on this issue and we are giving careful consideration to all the implications. We shall make an announcement shortly.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Crown Courts

Mr. Byers: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what percentage of defendants appearing in a Crown court changed their plea from not guilty to guilty for each of the court circuits in England and Wales in each year since 1989.

Mr. John M. Taylor: This information is not collected.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what percentage of defendants pleaded guilty in the Crown court for each of the court circuits in England and Wales in each year since 1989.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The information is set out in the table. The figures given are for those defendants who pleaded guilty to all counts. Data for 1992 are provisional and liable to revision to account for any late amendments.

[1] Excluding those defendants for whom bench warrants issued, no pleas recorded, indictment to lie on file, found unfit to plead and other results.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what percentage of defendants were found not guilty in Crown court cases for each of the court circuits in England and Wales in each year since 1989.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The table shows the percentage of defendants acquitted against the number of defendants who pleaded not guilty to all counts during each year since 1989. The 1992 figures are provisional and liable to revision to account for any late amendments.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what was the average time a defendant had to wait between being charged with an offence and having his or her case heard in the Crown court for each of the court circuits in England and Wales in each year since 1989.

Mr. John M. Taylor: Figures for waiting times from date of charge are not available. The table shows the average waiting time in weeks between the date of committal for trial and the start of hearing. Data for 1992 are provisional and liable to revision to account for any late amendments.

Bradford Courts

Mr. Madden: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will arrange for the Bradford combined court centre to be designated as a care centre for the hearing of care cases brought under the Children Act 1989.

Mr. John M. Taylor: Bradford county court currently enjoys some Children Act jurisdiction as a family hearing centre. A national review of the designation of care centres has always been part of the Lord Chancellor's arrangements for the monitoring of the Children Act. This review will begin in the summer and will involve extensive consultation at local level. Consideration of any recommendations to my Department will take place during the autumn with a view to implementing any changes in the spring of 1994.

Magistrates

Mr. Allason: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many magistrates have resigned since the implementation of the Criminal Justice Act 1991; and of these how many have given as their reason for resigning concern about the effect of that Act.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The number of resignations during 1992, other than on grounds of age, for the Lord Chancellor's area of responsibility was 1,034. No information is collected centrally on how many magistrates gave concern about the effects of the Criminal Justice Act 1991 as a reason for resignation.

Northern Ireland Court Service

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the annual cost of monitoring the religious affiliation of the employees of the Northern Ireland court service.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The equal opportunities unit of the Northern Ireland court service is responsible for the full range of equal opportunities issues within the service which includes monitoring by religious affiliation, gender and disability. It is not possible to separate the cost of monitoring by religious affiliation. The annual staff costs for the unit are £21,378·03.

EMPLOYMENT

London East TEC

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how much money has been given in grants from her Department to the London East training and enterprise council in each year since 1988.

Mr. McLoughlin: This Department has funded London East Training and Enterprise Council since 1 April 1991.

Details of funding for each financial year since then are:

Financial year	£ million
1991-92	26.415
1992-93	32.958

Funding is split into five blocks and allocated to specific areas. The blocks are youth training and education, adult training, enterprise, local initiative fund and management fee.

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how expenditure by training and enterprise councils is monitored.

Mr. McLoughlin: Training and enterprise councils (TECs) are paid sums specified in their business plan and claimed in accordance with the provisions of the TEC operating agreement. This is renewed annually and signed on behalf of my right hon. Friend by the Department's regional directors. A copy of the operating agreement is in the Library.

Invoices submitted by TECs are subject to regular appraisal and monitoring by finance control staff in ED regional offices. Departmental procedures are designed to ensure that public and parliamentary accountability is maintained.

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if she will list the names of all members of the board of the London East training and enterprise council since its establishment and their period of office.

Mr. McLoughlin: Details of board membership are available from London East training and enterprise council's corporate plans or direct from the acting chief executive, Steve Crow.

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how much money has been given in grants by her Department to the London East training and enterprise council for business education partnerships and to which organisations, and for what amounts, in each year since 1988.

Mr. McLoughlin: This Department has funded London East training and enterprise council since 1 April 1991.

Details of funding for each financial year since then are:

Education business partnerships payments to TECs

Financial year	£ million
1991-92	0·075,300
1992-93	0·046,175

Information on who the TEC contracts with and how much it pays them is commercial in confidence between the TEC and the organisations concerned.

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many staff are employed by the London East training and enterprise council; and how many staff have left in the last year.

Mr. McLoughlin: Direct employment of staff by training and enterprise councils is entirely a matter for the TECs themselves. The hon. Gentleman may wish to contact the acting chief executive of London East TEC, Steve Crow.

Business-Education Partnerships

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what arrangements are made in those boroughs and local authorities which do not have a business-education partnership for finance to be made available from training and enterprise councils for the work which would be carried out by such a business-education partnership;

(2) how many local authorities have business-education partnerships.

Mr. McLoughlin: Education business partnerships are operating in all training and enterprise council and local education authority areas.

Unemployment Benefit Disqualifications

Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when and where the figures for unemployment benefit disqualifications for the quarter to December 1992 will be published.

Mr. McLoughlin: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mr. J. Turner to Ms Angela Eagle, dated 2 April 1993:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, it is the responsibility of Mike Fogden, the Agency's Chief Executive to answer parliamentary questions about relevant operational matters. In his absence, I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State about the publication of statistics relating to unemployment benefit disqualifications for the quarter ending 31 December 1992.

The Analysis of Adjudication Officers' Decisions for the quarter ending 31 December 1992 has now been published and copies were sent to the Library of the House on 29 March.

As decided by the Administration Committee of the House of Commons, Chief Executive replies to written Parliamentary Questions will now be published in the Official Report. I will also place a copy of this letter in the Library of the House.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Forensic Investigations

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will instruct all police authorities to use forensic archaeologists at excavation sites where a body or bodies are believed to have been buried; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will ensure that all police authorities use physical anthropologists at crime scene investigations as soon as they commence; and if he will make a statement;

(3) if he will list the police authorities who currently use forensic anthropologists in their investigations; and if he will make a statement;

(4) if he will list by police authority those who use archaeologists for their forensic investigations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The use of forensic archaeologists, forensic anthropologists and other specialists to assist with the investigation of crime is a matter for individual chief officers.

The information requested about the use of forensic archaeologists and forensic anthropologists is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Terrorism

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will institute all-party talks on a more effective legal mechanism to combat terrorism than the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1989.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: No. I believe that the Prevention of Terrorism Act provides the powers which are needed for the prevention and investigation of terrorist crime. I am not prepared to weaken those powers while the threat of terrorism remains. However, I am ready to consider any proposals which might improve the effectiveness of the existing powers.

Trial Judges

Mr. Elletson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about the number of prosecutions during the last 10 years for offences relating to illegal approaches to trial judges; and what plans the Government have to provide for stiffer sentences to deal with such offences.

Mr. Jack: It is not possible from the information held centrally to identify offences relating to illegal approaches to trial judges from other common law offences of attempting to pervert the course of public justice.

The table shows the number of prosecutions in England and Wales from 1981 to 1991 for attempting to pervert the course of public justice. 1992 data will not be available until autumn 1993.

Number of prosecutions at magistrates' courts for the offence of attempting to pervert the course of public justice[1] under common law for the years 1981-1991
England and Wales

	Prosecutions
1981	290
1982	279
1983	333
1984	308
1985	326
1986	386
1987	652
1988	864
1989	1,139
1990	1,376
1991	1,565

[1] Under common law the offence of attempting to pervert the course of public justice includes fabrication of false evidence, causing a person to be wrongly convicted, interference with witness, etc.

Fire Safety Regulations

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he has completed his re-examination and re-drafting of the proposed new fire safety regulations; and if he will make a statement.

(2) what is the estimated cost to British industry of the implementation of the proposed new fire safety regulations.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: My right hon. and learned Friend expects to publish proposals for revised regulations and the associated guidance in the early summer. An estimate of the compliance costs for industry will be included in the consultative document.

Sheehy Inquiry

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reasons no (a) police advisers or (b) persons with special knowledge of policing in Scotland have been appointed to the Sheehy inquiry team; and if he will consider extending its membership to incorporate police officers.

Mr. Charles Wardle: My right hon. and learned Friend considered it important for the inquiry to be conducted by a fully independent team with expertise in a number of disciplines. The inquiry is, however, working very closely with the police service. My right hon. and learned Friend does not propose to change the composition of the inquiry team.

Police National Network

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment criteria his Department used in the recent shortlisting for the police national network; and what weight was given to the technical expertise and experience in providing communications to Her Majesty's Government of each company expressing an interest in this project.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Each company was assessed on the basis of (1) whether any circumtances of article 29 of the Services Directive (which relates to financial probity) apply to the company in question; (2) its audited accounts for the last three years; (3) its overall turnover and its turnover from operating managed telecommunications services; (4) the managed networks which it provides; (5) the technical expertise within the organisations; (6) its total manpower and managerial staffing; (7) its technical infrastructure, equipment and facilities; and (8) the level of professional expertise in its operation of managed networks. The technical expertise of potential suppliers and their experience in providing communications to Her Majesty's Government and other users were therefore fully taken into account.

Court Escorts

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has included special requirements for pregnant women, nursing mothers and very young children in the tender documents for the court escort services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Tender documents for the court escort service in the London area have not yet been finalised, but a copy of the operational specification for the court escort service in the east midlands and Humberside area has been placed in the library of the House. It outlines the general principles concerning the welfare of prisoners. The contractor has a contractual responsibility for the welfare of prisoners, for their humane treatment and for their medical needs.

Animal Rights

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many names are currently contained in the animal rights national index.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The animal rights national index (ARNI) holds about 13,300 names.

Race Relations Legislation

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many posts in the public services are exempt from the requirements of the Race Relations Act; and in what occupations these exemptions occur.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Section 75(5) of the Race Relations Act 1976 states that nothing in the Act invalidates rules made for restricting employment in the public service to persons of particular birth, nationality, descent or residence. Information on the particular posts or occupations concerned is not held centrally.

EDUCATION

Adult Education

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what were the levels of enrolments for adult education in London for this year.

Mr. Boswell: Data for academic year 1992-93 are not yet complete. In 1991-92 there were 280,000 enrolments in adult education centres in London at the 1 November census date.

Assisted Places

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what fees were charged in the academic year 1991-92 in each school taking part in the assisted places scheme.

Mr. Forth: The information requested is given in the following table:

Birmingham City Council

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Education when his officials asked the Birmingham city council for more information to justify its bid for capital expenditure in 1993-94 to deal with substandard places; when his officials received this information from Birmingham city council; and when he expects to take a decision on this bid for the financial year 1993-94.

Mr. Forth: The Department wrote to Birmingham city council on 22 December 1992 and the authority responded on 8 January 1993. Twenty-five other LEAs were asked to provide information on the same issue and not all have yet done so. Nevertheless, I expect to announce my decisions shortly.

College Fees

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is the total amount of college fees in respect of students in higher education which is funded by his Department; and if he will make a statement on how such funding is distributed on behalf of the Department.

Mr. Boswell: The total amount of college fees funded by the Department in respect of undergraduate students at collegiate unversities was £46 million in the academic year 1990-91, the latest year for which full information is available. These fees are payable by local education authorities on behalf of students holding mandatory awards and are reimbursed in full by the Department.

Higher Education (Benefits in Kind)

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what study he has made of the benefits in kind to the families of those participating in higher education away from home by various household income levels.

Mr. Boswell: The Department commissioned surveys of undergraduates' income and expenditure in 1986-87 and 1988-89 academic years and of mature students' income and expenditure in the 1987-88 academic year. The Department has commissioned a further survey of undergraduate students' income and expenditure which is currently being undertaken. All of these surveys have sought information on the circumstances of students who study either while living in the parental home or away from it.

London East TEC

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) how much grant from his Department was paid to London East training and enterprise council for business education partnerships and to which organisations, and for what amounts, in each year since 1988;

(2) how much grant has been given by his Department to the London East training and enterprise council in each year since 1988.

Mr. Boswell: This Department has made no such grants.

Education Costs

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is the average annual cost met from public funds of (a) a nursery school place, (b) a primary school place, (c) a secondary school place and (d) a full-time undergraduate place in bands 1, 2 and 3.

Mr. Forth: Figures for spending on nursery and primary school pupils are not collected separately. For 1990-91, the latest year for which information on actual spending is available, the average cost per pupil at LEA-maintained schools was £1,339 per nursery and primary pupil and £2,019 per secondary pupil.

Public funding for higher education is provided through grant to the higher education funding councils and publicly funded tuition fees. The assumed average total recurrent grant per student through the Higher Education Funding Council for England in 1993-94 is £2,927. The maximum tuition fees reimbursable through mandatory awards for undergraduate courses in the academic year 1993-94 are £1,300 for classroom-based courses; £2,770 for laboratory and workshop-based courses; and £4,985 for the clinical elements of medical, dental and veterinary courses.

TRANSPORT

London Buses Ltd.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to issue guidance to London Transport on the handling of the privatisation of London Buses Ltd.

Mr. Norris: My right hon. Friend has recently written to the chairman of London Transport to give guidance on this issue. Copies of the letter have been placed in the library.

Transport Schemes, London

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list all railway, light railway or underground schemes in London currently supported or proposed to be supported by public funds, which he intends should have a private sector contribution; when they commenced or will commence; in each case and for each relevant financial year, how much public funding is already allocated; and how much private sector funding he estimates will be required.

Mr. Norris: The information requested is as follows:

Project name	Start date	Public funding (£million cash) 1993-94	1994-95	1995-96	Private sector funding
Jubilee line extension	Construction is expected to start when the current negotiations on the private sector contribution are completed.	385	460	405	£100 million cash developer contribution during construction period and a stream of payments adding upto £300 million cash over time after extension is opened.
CrossRail	Bill currently in Parliament.	80	64	65	Re-examination to assess ways of involving private sector announced in Budget statement. Results of re-examination will determine relative involvement of public and private sectors.
Channel tunnel rail link	Construction could start in 1995.	44	—	—	Private sector interest needs to be tested before decisions can be taken on the timing and amounts of public and private funding.
Docklands light railway—Lewisham extension	Construction could start this financial year.	—	—	—	The cost, of £140 million, must be met by the private sector.
Heathrow express	Main works expected to start during 1993-94.	—	—	—	The project is a joint venture with BAA as private majority partner. The total cost is estimated at £250-300 million.

The proposed Croydon tramlink project would proceed on the basis of private funding though the Government is prepared to consider an element of grant.

The possibility of securing private sector contributions to other projects will be considered at the appropriate time.

Lower Road, SE16

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what moneys are allocated for the Lower road widening scheme, London SE16, for each financial year from 1992-93 onwards; when he intends work on the scheme will commence; and when it will finish.

Mr. Norris: This is a London Borough of Southwark scheme that is jointly funded by the Department of Transport and London Docklands Development Corporation. Funds are allocated by the Department as and when necessary and as laid down by a tripartite agreement. No moneys have been allocated to date for construction works. The timing of the scheme is a matter for LB Southwark in consultation with the Department and the LDDC.

Jubilee Line Extension

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will now make a statement on the arrangements, funding and commencement date of the Jubilee line extension.

Mr. Norris: No. Negotiations are continuing on the private sector contribution and it would not be sensible for me to speculate when they might be concluded.

Airlines (State Assistance)

Sir Keith Speed: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received about proposals for state aid to Aer Lingus; and what has been his response.

Mr. Norris: Concern has been expressed to me from a number of sources about reports of an injection of state aid to Aer Lingus, and the serious distortion of competition which might result from this on many routes, including London-Dublin. The Minister for Aviation and Shipping has written to Commissioner Matutes, seeking assurance that any formal application for state aid by the Irish authorities will be very fully scrutinised in the light of the market economy investor principle and the need to avoid distortion of competition, and that member states will be given the opportunity to comment.

Sir Keith Speed: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has made to the European Commission about recent state assistance to Air France.

Mr. Norris: We are aware of reports of further state assistance to Air France, following the support allowed by the European Commission in 1992. Since there has been no formal notification of further support by the French authorities, we have made no formal representations to the European Commission: but on many occasions we have made clear to the Commission that all applications for state aid should be very fully scrutinised in the light of the market economy investor principle and the need to avoid distortion of competition, and that member states should be given the opportunity to comment.

Sir Keith Speed: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the extent to which state aid to airlines of the European Community has continued after 31 December 1992.

Mr. Norris: The responsibility for approving state aids under the treaty of Rome rests with the European Commission. The Government have consistently urged the Commission to take a tough line to combat aids which distort free fair and open competition in the air transport market. So far this year, the only state aid which has been approved by the Commission is the settling by the Portuguese Government of the deficit accumulated by the carrier TAP in operating service between the Portuguese mainland and the Atlantic islands over the 13 years to 1991. We are generally aware of other forthcoming cases and will continue to monitor the situation.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent representations he has had from the north of England regional consortium about the channel tunnel rail link; what reply he is sending; what action he is taking; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State recently received a letter from the North of England regional consortium to which he has replied. My right hon. Friend and I have no objection to the contents of the reply being made public but any inquiries about the correspondence should be directed to the consortium to whom the letter was sent.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what resources will be made available to local community groups in Islington for them to make representations on the channel tunnel route to St. Pancras.

Mr. Freeman: The Government have asked Union Railways to take the lead in the public consultation on the rail link. They will be devoting engineering and environmental resources to examining worthwhile suggestions put forward for any improvements to the proposals.

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if customs, immigration and security checks for international rail services will be handled on board international train services using the channel tunnel line.

Mr. Freeman: Immigration controls will be carried out on board channel tunnel day passenger services using Waterloo. Customs and security checks will be carried out in the station. All three controls on night trains using Waterloo will be carried out at the station. All three controls for channel tunnel passenger services running beyond London will be carried out on board the trains.

Midibuses

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the effect on traffic congestion of increasing use of smaller midibuses.

Mr. Norris: Midibuses are more manoeuvrable and smaller than traditional buses. They have proved to be popular with passengers. I have seen no evidence that bus size has any significant impact on traffic congestion.

Barking to Gospel Oak Railway Line

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has had with British Rail about expenditure on maintenance and rolling stock on the Barking to Gospel Oak railway line necessary to maintain safety.

Mr. Freeman: None. Expenditure priorities are a matter for British Rail, which has a statutory duty to operate safely.

Plutonium

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if the transportation of plutonium nitrate is being considered under the auspices of the Braer inquiry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: Lord Donaldson's inquiry is to advise on whether any further measures are appropriate and feasible to protect the United Kingdom coastline from pollution from merchant shipping, giving due consideration to the international and economic implications of any new measures. These terms of reference are wide enough to allow Lord Donaldson to consider the matter raised, should he decide to do so.

London Bus Routes

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what considerations underlay the timing of the decision to put a further 30 London bus routes out to tender; and what assessment was made of the results of previous tendering.

Mr. Norris: The decision on which routes to put to tender could not be taken until the completion of the negotiations to put all London Buses Ltd. bus routes on to a contractual basis.

Since its introduction in 1985 London Transport's route tendering programme has delivered substantial quality of service improvements and reductions in costs.

Public Transport, London

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list for each year since 1983 the capital and revenue support given to public transport in London by central and local Government at constant prices.

Mr. Norris: Grants to London Transport are as follows at 1993-94 prices: (for 1984-85, they were made by the GLC; since that year, they have been made by the Department of Transport).

£ million

Year	Capital	Revenue
1984-85	192	236
1985-86	297	187
1986-87	333	94
1987-88	269	65
1988-89	222	28
1989-90	291	58
1990-91	502	94
1991-92	557	130
1992-93	579	241

Amounts up to 1991-92 include grant for the Docklands light railway. In 1992-93 the Department of the Environment paid grant of £149 million for the Docklands light railway.

Public service obligation grant allocated by British Rail to Network SouthEast was as follows, in 1993-94 prices:

	£ million
1986-87	288
1987-88	290
1988-89	168
1989-90	97
1990-91	162
1991-92	367

No separate figures are available for London services. No comparable figures are available for pre-1986. Figures for 1992-93 are not yet available.

These figures exclude financial support by local authorities for concessionary fares in London.

Concessionary Fares

Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those local authorities in England that provide concessionary fares for people of or above the age of retirement on (a) buses and (b) any other form of local public transport; and if he will list the extent of the subsidy in each case.

Mr. Freeman: I am sending the hon. Member a copy of "Concessionary Fare Schemes in Great Britain in 1992", which was produced by the Department's directorate of statistics on the basis of returns by local authorities.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if the senior citizen railcard scheme will be retained to ensure concessionary fares for pensioners over the entire railway network after privatisation.

Mr. Freeman: The senior railcard is a commercial initiative designed by British Rail to attract passengers and to maximise revenue by filling seats which might otherwise by empty; BR is not under any legal obligation to provide it. We believe that in a competitive environment it will be in the interests of the rail operators to continue to offer such discounts. We therefore see no need to impose requirements on operators to offer this particular discount facility. Transitional arrangements will be made to ensure that franchisees continue to honour existing railcards.

Cycle Routes, London

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guidelines his Department sets for classifying the quality of cycle routes implemented by the London boroughs; and what discussions he has had with cycling organisations and representatives in setting them.

Mr. Norris: The Department has provided advice and guidance on the design and construction of cycling facilities in Local Transport Note 1/89 "Making Way for Cyclists". We consulted widely on the document before publication and were grateful for the contribution made by cycling organisations. We also hold regular meetings with the borough cycle officer group and the London Cycling Forum.

Unstaffed Railway Stations

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many British Rail stations in Greater London are unstaffed after 6 pm; and what discussions he has had with the Transport police about the effect on crime and fear of crime at stations as a result.

Mr. Freeman: I understand that statistics are not maintained in the form requested. However, of some 500 stations within the London regional passenger committee's area 56 are totally unstaffed and a further 145 are staffed on the basis of less than two full shifts on any week day. The British transport police are, of course, employed by the British Railways Board and the Secretary of State regularly meets the BR chairman and board members to discuss a wide range of matters relating to the railways, including policing and crime.

Traffic Noise, London

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the existing targets for acceptable noise levels of traffic in London; who is responsible for setting them; and if he will list those monitoring areas where they are being exceeded.

Mr. Norris: There are no such targets. However, the United Kingdom has recently secured EC agreement to lower limits for the noise standards to which individual vehicles are built; tighter standards for vehicles have reduced noise levels by up to 10 dB(A) over the last 10 years.

Travelcard

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the Travelcard in London will be retained after his Department's proposed deregulation of buses and privatisation of British Rail.

Mr. Norris: The Government believe that, in the light of travelcard's popularity, private sector bus and rail operators will be keen to offer such a facility.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Potatoes

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish a table showing the acreage of each variety of seed potatoes planted in each of the last four years; what is his estimate of the average yield per acre of seed and the total yield of seed of each variety, in those years and also show the tonnage (a) exported, with the destination and (b) the tonnage used for home planting.

Mr. Hanley: The available information is set in the tables. Those relating to yields and exports have been limited to the main varieties not subject to plant breeder's rights. This information cannot be disaggregated further for reasons of commercial confidentiality.

Mr. Williams Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish a table showing (a) for October 1989, (b) for October 1990, (c) for October 1991 and (d) for each month since October 1992 to the latest available date the price ex-farm of each of the principal varieties of seed potatoes, and of each of the categories of ware potatoes ex-farm sold in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Hanley: The information requested on ware potatoes is given in the following tables. The Department of Agriculture for Northern Ireland does not collect information on the price of seed potatoes.

Equal Opportunities

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the annual cost of monitoring the religious affiliation of the employees of each health and social services board.

Mr. Hanley: The costs of equal opportunities monitoring in the health and social services boards are shown in the table. The costs not only include the monitoring and analysis of perceived religious affiliations within the boards but also the cost of the collection and analysis of information relating to gender and disability issues.

Board	Cost £
Eastern	78,000
Northern	66,435
Southern	45,000
Western	54,300

Firearms Licences

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many gun licences are held in Northern Ireland; and what is the number per head of population.

Mr. Mates: Firearms licensing is the responsibility of the Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary. He has advised me that at the end of February this year a total of 87,421 firearm certificates were held in Northern Ireland. This figure equates to approximately one certificate per 13 persons aged 18 and over.

Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowances

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many farmers are in receipt of hill livestock compensatory allowance payments in (a) severely disadvantaged areas and (b) disadvantaged areas in each county in Northern Ireland containing less favoured area land.

Mr. Hanley: The number of farmers in receipt of 1992 hill livestock compensatory allowances is as follows:

	SDA	DA
County Antrim	1,703	1,330
County Armagh	956	1,409
County Down	1,386	904
County Fermanagh	3,213	90
County Londonderry	1,667	816
County Tyrone	3,368	1,683

Livestock Auctions

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the turnover in terms of value, of livestock auctions for each county in Northern Ireland; and how many auctions account for that value in each county.

Mr. Hanley: The information requested is not available.

Driver and Vehicle Licensing

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on progress in establishing an executive agency under the next steps initiative to carry out the work of driver and vehicle licensing in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Atkins: Preparations for the establishment of an executive agency to carry out the work of driver and vehicle licensing in Northern Ireland are well in hand. A chief executive (designate) was appointed on 1 March 1993. However, further consideration of the business plan for the first year of the agency's operation is required before I will be in a position to finalise targets for the agency which will ensure that there will be a satisfactory level of improved customer service and value for money. Accordingly, it has not been possible to establish the agency on the target date of 1 April 1993 but I hope to be in a position to announce a new date for the launch of the agency shortly.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Integrated Administration and Control System

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will carry out and publish a survey of the penalties other EC countries are applying to the integrated administration and control system; and what information he has as to the date set for compliance in each other country.

Mr. Curry: The penalties for late or inaccurate applications are laid down in the EC regulations and apply equally in all 12 member states. Details are set out in full at annexes 6, 7 and 8 of the IACS explanatory booklet. Member states may impose additional penalties at the national level. Under the EC regulations, all member states have to set a deadline not later than 15 May this year for receipt of completed application forms. The majority of member states have deadlines of 14 or 15 May.

Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowance

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many farmers are in receipt of hill livestock compensatory allowance payments in (a) severely disadvantaged areas and (b) disadvantaged areas in each county in England containing less-favoured area land.

Mr. Gummer: The table shows the number of claims paid under the 1992 hill livestock compensatory allowance scheme from producers farming eligible land wholly within the severely disadvantaged area (SDA), or the disadvantaged area (DA) or on mixed land (i.e., SDA combined with DA land).

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the turnover in terms of value, of livestock auctions for each county in England; and how many auctions account for that value in each county.

Mr. Gummer: The information requested is not readily available.

However, to give an indication of the distribution of sales through auction markets the table provides the total number (rather than value) of cattle, sheep, pigs and calves sold through livestock auctions in England by county.

EC Agri-environment Package

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what plans there are to renegotiate the EC agri-environment package; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what monitoring and targets for monitoring will be set by (a) the EC and (b) the United Kingdom for schemes operating under the agri-environment package; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: The Government's proposals for implementing the EC Agri-Environment Regulation (2078/92) were issued for public consultation on 26 March and we have no plans to seek a renegotiation of the regulation. Monitoring of schemes operating under the regulation is the responsibility of individual member states and we will determine our monitoring arrangements when individual schemes are finalised after the public consultation period.

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much will be spent or has been spent in each year from 1990-91 to 1995-96 on (a) stage 1 environmentally sensitive areas, (b) stage 2 ESAs, (c) stage 3 ESAs and (d) stage 4 ESAs, identifying how much of the total is allocated for the public access payments (i) nitrate sensitive areas, (ii) moorland scheme, (iii) habitat improvement scheme, (iv) set-aside management identifying how much of the total will be for public access payments and (v) organic farming; if he will identify which schemes are part of the agri-environment package; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: There is a single budget for the Ministry's environmentally sensitive areas (ESAs). Expenditure on payments to farmers in English ESAs was £7·5 million in 1990-91, £8·0 million in 1991-92 and is forecast to be £10·8 million in 1992-93. Planned expenditure is £30·2 million in 1993-94, £42·6 million in 1994-95 and £43.1 million in 1995-96. The figures for the last two years include the proposed payments for public access in ESAs. Expenditure on payments to farmers in the pilot nitrate sensitive areas (NSAs) was £0.3 million in 1990-91, £1.0 million in 1991-92, and is forecast to be £1.4 million in 1992-93. Planned expenditure is £1.6 million in each of the years 1993-94 to 1995-96. In addition to this expenditure on ESAs and pilot NSAs, we have issued for public consultation proposals for a moorland scheme, a habitat improvement scheme, a meadowland scheme for public access to set-aside land and an organic scheme, and will shortly be issuing proposals for new nitrate measures. Planned expenditure on payments to farmers under these proposed new measures in England is £0.2 million in 1993-94, £4·5 million in 1994-95 and £18·8 million in 1995-96. The precise allocation between the schemes will be decided in the light of the results of public consultation.

Grant Schemes

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which of his grant schemes currently operating are monitored; what is the target for that monitoring; what action is taken if abuses are discovered; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: All applications for aid under the Ministry's capital grant schemes are carefully checked to ensure that they are valid and comply with the rules of the scheme. The action which is taken if abuses are discovered will depend on the circumstances but can include loss of grant and prosecution.

Integrated Admission Control Scheme

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will place in the Library copies of the equivalent of the integrated administration control scheme forms for each of the member states of the European Community.

Mr. Curry: I will place copies in their original languages in the Library when they are available.

WALES

Welsh Language

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of primary school children in each local education authority area in Wales speak Welsh fluently as a second language; and what the corresponding figures were for each year since 1977.

Sir Wyn Roberts: Information collected about the percentages of pupils, aged five and over, in maintained primary schools, who speak Welsh as a second language, are shown in the following tables. Prior to 1986 the school census sought information on the proportion of pupils who speak Welsh as a second language. This information is shown in table 1. Since 1986 information about the fluency of second language Welsh speakers has been collected under two separate categories as shown in table 2.

The figures for 1986 onwards are not directly comparable with those for 1985 and preceding years. From September 1986 the wording and format of the question on Welsh speaking ability was changed to permit a more detailed analysis of Welsh medium education.

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what change there has been in the percentage of fluent Welsh-speaking primary school children in each local education authority area in Wales since 1986-87.

Health Authority Administration

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list for each of the health authorities in Wales the number of (a) full-time and (b) part-time staff who are employed on administration for the latest date for which figures are available, together with the corresponding figures for each of the past six years.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: It is essential that the NHS is sufficiently staffed at the administrative level to manage effectively its record budget, in the best interests of patients.

The available information relates to staff in the administrative and clerical group, which includes senior managers. The figures include staff within the groups performing clinically related duties which account for over 25 per cent. of the total, so freeing clerical staff to concentrate their skills and experience on direct patient care.

Part of the increase in the size of this group is due to the transfer of some nursing and other professional staff to the senior manager grades.

The 1992 figures for Pembrokeshire are not readily available and I will supply these as soon as possible.

Water Disconnections

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what evidence he has of a connection between cases of hepatitis and dysentery and the disconnection of household water supplies.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Dysentery and hepatitis A are commonly spread by direct contact between individuals. I am aware of no evidence of a direct causal association between cases of hepatitis and dysentery and the disconnection of household water supplies.

Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowance

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many farmers are in receipt of hill livestock compensatory allowance payments in (a) severely disadvantaged areas and (b) disadvantaged areas in each county in Wales containing less favoured area land.

Mr. David Hunt: The numbers who received HLCAs in 1992 were as follows:

Psychogeriatric Care Beds

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what is the total in each district health authority of NHS funded psychogeriatric continuing care beds currently available;

(2) how many psychogeriatric continuing care beds are funded by the NHS in the independent sector in each district health authority;

(3) how many NHS funded psychogeriatric continuing care beds were available in 1980, 1985 and 1990 in each health authority.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The available information does not distinguish between continuing care, acute and assessment beds, but the average numbers of daily available psychogeriatric beds for the years specified and for the latest available year were as follows:

	1980	1985	1990-91	1991-92
Clwyd	10·3	10·0	91·5	94·2
East Dyfed	—	34·0	165·0	137·2
Gwent	239·0	338·0	327·0	338·9
Gwynedd	—	9·0	73·0	75·4
Mid Glamorgan	26·5	56·0	521·3	449·8
Pembrokeshire	—	—	—	—
Powys	—	—	13·0	101·3
South Glamorgan	—	—	229·4	229·0
West Glamorgan	—	38·9	181·5	235·8
Wales	275·8	485·9	1,601·6	1,661·5

The apparent large increase in beds between 1980 and 1990-91 is principally due to a reclassification of mental illness beds following the recognition of psychogeriatrics as a separate specialty by the royal colleges in 1989.

Information on the numbers of such beds funded by the NHS in Wales in the independent sector is not held centrally.

Respite Care Beds

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many respite care beds are provided in each district health authority; what is the waiting time; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The requested information is not available centrally.

Welsh Development Agency

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his anwer of 18 March, Official Report, column 331, on what date the postponed inward investment mission to Japan by the chairman of the Welsh Development Agency is now expected to take place.

Mr. David Hunt: In June.

Homes for the Elderly

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the number of beds in each county, in county council homes for the elderly.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The most recently available information on the number of places in local authority residential homes for the elderly is shown in the following table.

	Number of places at 31 March 1992
Clwyd	676
Dyfed	1,041
Gwent	953
Gwynedd	786
Mid Glamorgan	1,211

West Glamorgan	698

Continuing Care Provision

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the likely future provision for continuing care in district health authorities, instancing the likely number of beds.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information is not available centrally.

Elderly People

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people in each district health authority are aged 65 years and over.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The 1991 mid year estimate of the population aged 65 and over in each district health authority in Wales is shown in the following table:

	Thousands
Clwyd	73·6
East Dyfed	46·3
Pembrokeshire	19·5
Gwent	72·0
Gwynedd	47·1
Mid Glamorgan	84·7

Myalgic Encephalomyelitis

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what research is being conducted in hospitals or medical research centres in Wales into myalgic encephalomyelitis.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Welsh Office is funding no such research. Information on research projects that may be funded from other sources is not held centrally.

Tourism

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many visits of four nights' duration or longer were undertaken by British tourists within Wales in each year since 1985.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The number of visits of four nights' duration or longer by British tourists within Wales is given in the following table:

Data Protection Act 1984

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many certificates have been signed under the terms of section 27 of the Data Protection Act 1984 for each year since 1987.

Mr. David Hunt: None.

Ancient Monuments Board for Wales

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he intends to publish the 37th annual report of the Ancient Monuments Board for Wales.

Sir Wyn Roberts: The 37th annual report of the Ancient Monuments Board for Wales has been published today. The report covers the financial year 1990-91 and copies have been placed in the Library of the House.

Council Tax

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will provide details of the council tax set by local authorities in Wales for 1993-94.

Mr. David Hunt: The average council tax for a band C property set by local authorities in Wales for 1993-94 is £292. This is before account is taken of exemptions and discount under the new system. Around two-thirds of properties in Wales are within band C and the lower valuation bands A and B. Details of the band C council tax set by each county and district council in Wales are in the following table:

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Catering Facilities (Visitors)

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Chairman of the Catering Committee, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Hemsworth (Mr. Enright) of 22 February, Official Report, column 439 what plans his Committee now has to arrange for catering facilities to be available to visitors to the Palace; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Colin Shepherd: The Committee hopes to report to the House on this matter soon after the Easter recess.

Young Enterprise (Exhibition)

Mr. Wilshire: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee if he has considered an application for an exhibition relating to "Young Enterprise—30th Anniversary of Business Practice in Education" to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall.

Mr. Michael Martin: I understand that, under procedures agreed by the Administration Committee arrangements have been made for the exhibition to be held in the Upper Waiting Hall from 7 to 11 June.

Sittings of the House

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Lord President of the Council what actions he proposes to take to implement the recommendations of the Select Committee on Sittings of the House of Session 1991-92.

Mr. Newton: Discussions are continuing through the usual channels.

PRIME MINISTER

Environment

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Prime Minister in how many instances papers for Cabinet and for ministerial committees have included a note of significant costs or benefits to the environment, during the course of the past year.

The Prime Minister: "Questions of Procedure for Ministers", published in May 1992, states that memoranda circulated to Cabinet or a ministerial committee should, where appropriate, cover any significant costs or benefits to the environment—paragraph 1.2. I do not propose to give details of papers considered by Cabinet or Cabinet Committees.

Nuclear Proliferation

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister what matters in regard to the control of nuclear proliferation were discussed at his meeting with the President of Turkmenistan on 29 March.

The Prime Minister: During our discussions President Niyazov confirmed to me that all nuclear weapons had been withdrawn from Turkmenistan, in accordance with an agreement between Turkemenistan and Russia.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister whether he discussed (a) the prospects of Pakistan joining the nuclear non-proliferation treaty and (b) the risks of nuclear proliferation in Asia during his meeting with his Pakistani counterpart on 29 March.

The Prime Minister: Nawaz Sharif and I discussed these matters briefly. The Pakistan Government are well aware of our views.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) of 29 March, Official Report, column 46, if he will set out the reasons underlying the assessment of the indefinite extension of the non-proliferation treaty as being in the interests of all signatories.

The Prime Minister: The prevention of the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction is vital to the security of the whole world. We believe that the non-proliferation treaty represents the best available means of preventing the proliferation of nuclear weapons and that therefore it is in the interests of all states parties to secure the indefinite extension of the treaty in 1995.

Question Time

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make it his policy when announcing his engagements to Parliament in Question Time to give details of the persons he has met and plans to meet and the meetings he has attended and plans to attend that day.

The Prime Minister: No.

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the Prime Minister how many of the appointments made by him as listed in "Public Bodies 1992" came within the categories set out in paragraphs 49 and 50 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers".

The Prime Minister: Paragraphs 49 and 50 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers" cannot concern such appointments as they cover the need for Ministers to consult me on appointments which they make.

Egypt

Mr. Alton: To ask the Prime Minister what levels of United Kingdom aid Egypt will receive during 1993-94; what account, in allocating this aid, is taken of the Egyptian Government's human rights record; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: Current commitments for 1993-94 are some £5·3 million. We are working with the Egyptian Government to develop new projects in support of economic reform, the environment and education. Human rights and good government are factors which the Government take into account in determining their aid policy.

HEALTH

Chairmen and Directors

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list by (a) regional health authority, (b) district health authority, (c) family health service authority and (d) hospital trusts in England the total emoluments and expenses paid to (i) chairmen and (ii) non-executive directors in 1991-92.

Mr. Sackville: Information for 1991-92, as reported in annual accounts and financial returns submitted to the Department, has been placed in the Library.

Mental Illness

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the national average cost of caring for a mentally ill person in (a) a mental illness hospital, (b) a general hospital psychiatric unit, (c) a four to six bed group home, (d) a staffed hospital and (e) in the patients's own home.

Mr. John Townend: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average revenue cost of a mentally ill person who has been moved out of hospitals into a small care in the community home; what was the corresponding revenue cost when the person concerned was in a hospital; and what is the average capital cost of the move.

Mr. Yeo: This information is not available centrally. Specialty cost returns submitted to the Department for 1991-92 indicate the average daily cost for patients using a bed—in-patients and day cases—for the mental illness specialty was £122. This figure, which is provisional, is inclusive of treatment, accommodation and overhead costs.

Mentally Ill Offenders

Mrs. Browning: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consideration she has given to the Reed report about health services for mentally ill offenders.

Mr. Yeo: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Teignbridge (Mr. Nicholls) on 27 November 1992 at columns 873-74. We have endorsed the main principles set out in the report of the Department of Health/Home Office review of services for mentally disordered offenders. The White Paper on "The Health of the Nation" requires health authorities to include these services in their strategic and purchasing plans. Capital funding for medium secure psychiatric services has been further increased from £17 million in 1992-93 to £22·4 million in 1993-94. We are still considering a number of the detailed recommendations in the report. We will be assisted by the new national advisory committee on mentally disordered offenders whose membership was recently announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State.

Anaesthetics

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the annual savings achieved in the NHS sector by the prescribing of short-acting anaesthetics enabling patients requiring minor surgery to be treated at out-patient day clinics rather than being admitted to hospital.

Mr. Sackville: The Department has made no specific assessment. General anaesthesia is not routinely administered in out-patient clinics. Patients requiring minor surgery under general anaesthesia are normally admitted as day cases or as in-patients.

Mental Handicap

Mr. John Townend: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the revenue cost per head from the Croydon health district area for mentally handicapped people in the very challenging category; and what were the previous costs in hospitals.

Mr. Yeo: This information is not available centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact Mrs. Adrienne Fresko, chairman of Croydon district health authority for details.

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many of the appointments made by her as listed in "Public Bodies 1992" came within the categories set out in paragraphs 49 and 50 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers" and required a submission to the Prime Minister.

Mr. Sackville: Ten of the appointments made by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State as listed in "Public Bodies 1992" came within these categories and required a submission to the Prime Minister.

Medicines (Safety Tests)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which safety tests for potential new medicines are carried out on human cells in vitro rather than on animals.

Dr. Mawhinney: One type of safety testing that is appropriate for most new medicines involves assaying for mutagenic potential. The purpose of the test is to discover whether a substance may cause change in the genetic material which could be inherited by future generations of cells or individuals.

Three of the routine screening assays are performed in vitro with bacteria or mammalian, including human, cells as the target system. Specifically, human lymphocytes are used to ascertain whether the test substance is capable of producing chromosome breakage or other aberrations such as deletion of sections of chromosome. In second line testing, when confirmation of routine assay effects is required, procedures for measuring chromosome exchange and unscheduled DNA synthesis are employed. These may also use human cell lines in vitro to achieve their objective.

The safety of, for example, monoclonal antibody carriers of toxic cancer therapy agents can be tested by determining specificity of tissue affinity, using human material in vitro.

Carnegie Report

Mr. Ancram: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the forthcoming publication of the report of the Carnegie inquiry into the third age in relation to life, work and livelihood.

Mr. Yeo: The Department of Health has maintained close links with the Carnegie inquiry throughout the study and I am looking forward to studying the final report. We will be giving the fullest consideration to its findings and their implications for future policy.

The development of services for older people is one of the Government's priority areas. Spending on hospital and community health services in England used mainly by elderly people has increased during the life of the present Government by 41 per cent. in real terms and by about 40 per cent. in the personal social services.

Older people will be one of the groups who will benefit most from the changes to the health service and from the community care reforms. The reforms will mean better assessment of individual needs and better targeted care. The special needs of older people and their carers will now be fully reflected in the planning and purchasing of services.

The Department also has co-ordinating responsibility within the United Kingdom for the European Year of Older People and Solidarity between Generations. A seminar on the implications of the Carnegie inquiry will form part of the core programme of events organised to mark the year. We are also promoting many initiatives as part of the year which closely reflect recommendations made in the Carnegie report. Work on the European year involves extensive liaison across Government Departments and with a wide range of voluntary, statutory and professional bodies.

We have made widely available the Department's publication, "Health and Healthy Living: A Guide for Older People", and have taken a number of steps to promote activities which help to keep older people free of sickness and disability. All the key areas in the White Paper "The Health of the Nation" are relevant to older people and we are looking at ways to take this work forward with special reference to the needs of the older age groups.

Dentists

Mr. Eastham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evidence she has as to the frequency with which people over the age of 65 years visit a dentist, and as to the factors which influence this frequency.

Dr. Mawhinney: The evidence held indicates that there is no set pattern of dental attendance among those over age 65 and that the factors which influence the frequency of their attendance are varied.

Hospital Charges

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information she has as to which other EC countries have (a) no hospital charges per day for any in-patient and (b) no charges for being seen by a general practitioner.

Dr. Mawhinney: In the state health care sector, hospital in-patient services are provided without daily charges being levied in Denmark, Greece, Netherlands, Portugal and Spain. Free general practitioner consultations are available in Germany, Greece, Netherlands, Spain and for almost all the population in Denmark. Details are in leaflet T4 "Health Advice for Travellers" available in post offices and the Library.

Brain Cancer

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research she funds into possible links between pesticides commonly used in household sprays and childhood brain cancer; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: None. The main body through which the Government support biomedical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council, which is funded by the Office of Science and Technology.

We are not aware of any research into this issue in the United Kingdom. Before any pesticide is approved for use it must be approved by Ministers who will have consulted the Advisory Committee on Pesticides, a statutory body of independent experts.

The recently published study in America which is reported as suggesting an association between childhood brain cancer and pesticide usage will be considered by the Department's professional staff and if necessary the expert advisory committees.

Community Care

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will meet the Association of Directors of Social Services to discuss their criticisms of the Department's guidelines in regard to assessing the community care needs of elderly disabled people and people who are mentally ill and the association's urgent call for more precise guidance; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: I met the Association of Directors of Social Services last month, as did the chief inspector of the Department's social services inspectorate. On neither occasion was the need for an urgent meeting on this guidance raised.

Helicopter Ambulance

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on how many occasions in each of the last four years the helicopter ambulance has landed on school premises in the Greater London area; and if she will list which schools.

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact Mr. Martin Gorham, chief executive of the London ambulance service, for details.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many emergency calls have been received by the helicopter ambulance service in London in each of the past four years; on how many occasions a patient has been air-lifted to hospital; and if she will list which hospitals.

Mr Sackville: In the period April 1991 to April 1992, 331 calls were answered by the helicopter emergency medical service. No other information is available centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact Mr Martin Gorham, chief executive of the London ambulance service, for further details.

Fuel Oil Duty

Mr. Purchase: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what estimate she has made of the additional costs faced by the national health service resulting from the increase of fuel oil duty announced in the Budget; and if she will make it her policy to ensure that patient care is not diminished through the budget reductions necessary to meet the increased costs.

(2) what is the expected cost to Staffordshire ambulance trust of the increased duty announced in the Budget on petrol and diesel fuel; and whether she expects the costs to be passed on to its client health authorities.

Mr. Sackville: The effect of the increased fuel duty is expected to add less than 0·05 per cent. to health service costs, depending on other developments in the fuel market. Indeed, since the budget one petrol company has reduced its prices by 9p a gallon. Authorities are expected to manage cost pressures within existing resource allocations and obtain best value for money through current management processes.

The estimated increased cost for the Staffordshire ambulance trust is £6,000. The trust will not increase prices to purchasers.

Perinatal Deaths

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will place in the Library a copy of the report commissioned by Burnley, Pendle and Rossendale health authority into perinatal deaths by Professor Barker.

Mr. Sackville: The report referred to is a local report commissioned by Burnley, Pendle and Rossendale district health authority and North Western regional health authority, and is not yet complete. Publication will be a matter for the DHA.

Hospices

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much money was allocated by her Department to each region for the funding of hospices in 1992-93; and how much money was allocated in 1992-93 by regional health authorities to hospices.

Mr. Sackville: Since 1990-91, the Government have allocated funds annually to regional health authorities in England specifically to increase the support they give to voluntary hospices. In 1992-93 £31·7 million was made available for hospice funding. Additionally, since 1991-92, funds have been provided to ensure the supply of drugs to hospices without charge. The allocation for 1992-93 was £5·5 million. The combined allocation to each region was:

Region	Amount £000
Northern	2,329
Yorkshire	2,892
Trent	3,443
East Anglian	1,589
North West Thames	2,469
North East Thames	2,807
South East Thames	3,233
South West Thames	2,473
Wessex	2,513
Oxford	1,737
South Western	2,835
West Midlands	3,828
Mersey	1,940
North Western	3,105

Information on how much individual regions make available to hospices is not available centrally.

Asthma

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what actions have been taken by her Department to monitor asthma levels among children in London; what further research is planned; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: This information is not routinely collected. In 1992 the Department set up a Committee on the Medical Effects of Air Pollutants under the chairmanship of Professor Stephen Holgate. The committee has recently set up a sub-group on asthma and air pollution to look at asthma trends and geographical variations, to consider what effect air pollutants might be having on asthma rates and to recommend research objectives.

Drug or Alcohol Dependency

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she intends to issue new guidance regarding ordinary residence with respect to potential users of drug or alcohol dependency services.

Mr. Yeo: Guidance on ordinary residence for people requiring social services, which includes this client group, was issued this week. A copy will be placed in the Library.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish a list of comparable costs of providing a residential place in (a) a residential unit for drug dependency, (b) a rehabilitation unit for alcohol dependency and (c) a local prison.

Mr. Yeo: The standing conference on drug abuse produces a guide for services for drug and alcohol rehabilitation and has indicated that the costs of residential rehabilitation care range from £280 to over £1,000 per person per week depending on the locality and the type and level of care provided.

I understand from my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department that the cost for a place in local prisons and adult remand centres is £437 per week and for the generality of all prisons £442 per week.

NHS Management

Sir Michael Grylls: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will give, in real terms, the salary cost of all grades of management/administrators employed within the national health service in each year since 1980, and also give this figure as an annual percentage using 1980 as the base.

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 9 March 1993]: Information on hospital and community health services in England is shown in the table. Those for 1991-92 are provisional.

The administrative and clerical pay group covers a wide variety of staff including senior ambulance officers, some departmental managers, ward clerks, medical secretaries and medical records staff in addition to clerical and secretarial staff. Many A and C staff are employed to support clinicians and others concerned with the direct provision of patient services.

General and senior managers comprise a separate pay category which was not established until 1986. Its adoption throughout the national health service occurred over a period of some years and its numbers include many employees re-classified from other pay groups including senior nursing staff.

Notes:

1. HCHS covers the total expenditure by the health authorities (and the NHS Trusts) including hospital, community health, patient transport (ie ambulance), blood transfusion and other services.
2. The figures are the gross pay costs of directly employed staff including employers' National Insurance and superannuation contributions.
3. The figures have been expressed at 1992-93 prices by the use of Gross Domestic Product deflators.
4. The table excludes salaries and wages costs incurred by family health services authorities and special health authorities providing central services to the NHS. However, the figures for administrative and clerical staff for the years prior to 1985-86 cover those staff employed by family practitioners committees whose costs were included with those of area health authorities and were not separately identified.

Source: Annual accounts (1982-83 to 1990-91) and annual financial returns (1991-92) of regional and district health authorities in England and those of the special health authorities for the London postgraduate teaching hospitals. Annual accounts of area health and other predecessor authorities (1980-81 and 1981-82). Annual financial returns of the first wave NHS Trusts (1991-92).

Deaths

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will publish a table showing for each year from 1979 (a) the number of deaths that were expected annually in each health region and (b) the number of actual deaths that occurred in each health region using (i) England as standard, (ii) Wessex region as standard and (iii) northern region as standard;

(2) if she will publish a table showing for each year from 1979 (a) the number of deaths of those under 75 years that were expected annually in each health region and (b) the number of actual deaths of those under 75 years that occurred in each health region using (i) England as standard, (ii) Wessex region as standard and (iii) northern region as standard.

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 22 March 1993]: The information requested has been placed in the Library. Expected numbers of deaths were calculated using popu'ation estimates for 1979-90, based on the 1981 census, and on the provisional estimates for 1991, based on the 1991 census.

North East Thames Regional Health Authority

Mr. Channon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what amount of public money per head of the population was spent in each of the districts of the North East Thames regional health authority in each of the last five years for which figures are available.

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 30 March 1993]: The information on revenue expenditure per head of population is shown in the table.

The district health authorities' figures for 1991-92 are not comparable with those for earlier years as they show the authorities primarily as purchasers rather than providers of health care. The figures for DHAs will vary reflecting a transitional position as the North East Thames regional health authority moves towards allocating funds to DHAs on a weighted capitation basis. Figures for total spending per capita include other resources, such as regional budgets and local income, in addition to allocations for resident population.

Notes:
1. The figures for the DHAs are based upon their total revenue expenditure on the services which they managed or accounted for in the relevant financial years. Those for 1991-92 cover their total revenue expenditure including that on purchases of health care and directly related services, administrative and purchasing functions and other expenditure.
2. Capital expenditure incurred by the DHAs and all expenditure incurred by the North East Thames Regional Health Authority is excluded. Expenditure on family health services, which is accounted for by Family Health Services Authorities and cannot strictly be attributed to particular districts, is similarly excluded.
3. The population figures used make no allowance for residents of particular districts who receive treatment in others. The figures used for mid 1991 are provisional and based on the 1991 census.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Taxpayers

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update his answer of 25 February, Official Report, column 690, on the number of taxpayers, giving estimates for 1993-94.

Mr. Dorrell: Latest estimates for 1992-93 and 1993-94 are given in the table. The figures for 1992-93 have been revised in line with more recent information. Taxpayers are classified as lower rate, basic rate or higher rate by comparing their taxable income with the lower rate and basic rate limits. Taxable income is defined as gross income less those allowances and reliefs which are available at taxpayers' marginal rates. In the earlier answer mortgage interest relief at source was deducted from taxable income in classifying taxpayers as basic or lower rate. However, as MIRAS is given at a single rate, and does not affect the taxpayer's marginal rate, it is more helpful for this purpose to disregard it. The effect of the definition now adopted is to reduce slightly the estimated number of lower rate taxpayers.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update the information given in tables 5.6 and 5.8 of the autumn statement 1992 on the basis of changes announced in the Budget.

Mr. Dorrell: The table updates the information contained in table 5.6 of the Autumn Statement and shows the cost/yield in 1993-94 of illustrative tax changes implemented at the start of the year (receipts basis) and the corresponding cost/yield once the full effect of the changes come through (the full year basis) after taking into account the tax changes proposed in the Budget. Detailed information for the effect of the complete range of ready reckoner changes in 1994-95 is not yet available but will be published in "Inland Revenue Statistics" during the summer.

The estimates of the direct effects of illustrative changes in indirect taxes given in table 5.8 are broadly unchanged.

[1] The estimated revenue effects of changes on receipts are rounded. The extent of rounding reflects the desire to avoid undue compounding of its effects when numbers are pro-rated, rather then the accuracy of the estiamtes.

[2] The figures for income tax changes include consequential effects on the yield of capital gains tax. Changes are assumed to take effect from April 1993.

[3] Allowances for those aged 65 to 74 and aged 75 and over.

[4] Figures include revenue effects of changing additional personal allowance and widow's bereavement allowance by £100.

[5] Percentage changes are calculated with reference to 1993-94 levels.

[6] Assessment to corporation tax normally relates to the preceding year. These estimates are the changes to revenue that would occur if the changed rates were applied to profits from 1 April 1992.

[7] These figures ignore effects arising from the imputation system.

[8] These changes are assumed to take effect from April 1993.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update his answer of 25 February, Official Report, column 688, on the number of taxpayers who pay tax at the rate of 20 per cent. only, giving estimates for 1993-94.

Mr. Dorrell: Latest estimates for 1993-94 indicate that about 4·9 million taxpayers will pay tax only at the lowest rate of 20 per cent. Their average gross income will be about £5,300 and average taxable income (defined as gross income less those allowances and reliefs which are available at the taxpayer"s marginal rate) will be £1,200.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate for 1993-94 the number of people with (a) taxable income and (b) other income who have no tax liability, giving figures separately for (i) families with children, (ii) childless couples, (iii) single people and (iv) pensioners and non-pensioners.

Mr. Dorell: The estimated numbers of taxpayers and non-taxpayers for 1993-94 are shown in the table. The estimates in the first table are based on a projection of the 1990-91 Survey of Personal Incomes and estimates of the total population. Information on types of family is derived from a number of sources including the 1991 Family Expenditure Survey and the estimates are approximate.

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish figures estimating the number of taxpayers in 1993-94 with (a) gross and (b) taxable incomes in the following income ranges: (i) under £5,000, (ii) £5,000 to £10,000, (iii) £10,000 to £15,000, (iv) £15,000 to £20,000 (v) £20,000 to £25,000 (vi) £25,000 to £30,000, (vii) £30,000 to £40,000, (viii) £40,000 to £50,000, (ix) £50,000 to to £70,000, (x) £70,000 to £80,000 and (xi) over £80,000.

Mr. Dorrell: Latest estimates are given in the table:

Thousands

	Number of taxpayers by range of [1]Gross income	[2]Taxable income
Under £5,000	2,200	9,100
£5,000 to £10,000	7,600	6,600

£70,000 to £80,000	50	30
over £80,000	140	110
Total taxpayers	24,500	24,500

[1]Gross income is defined as total income for income tax purposes. It excludes income from certain social security benefits and some investment income such as National Savings Certificates.

[2]Taxable income is defined as gross for income tax purposes less those allowances and reliefs which are available at the taxpayer's marginal rate.

Value Added Tax

Miss Lestor: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer to which items a zero rate for value added tax has been extended since 1979; and if he will make a statement.

Sir John Cope: Under the terms of the EC Sixth VAT Directive, agreed on 17 May 1977, items which are standard rated for VAT cannot generally be moved to the zero rate. But permissible minor changes which have slightly extended the scope of the reliefs have been made in a number of areas, including reliefs for aids for the handicapped, supplies to and by charities and most recently for certain protective boots and helmets and motor-cycle crash helmets meeting EC standards. A comprehensive list of all such minor changes going back to 1979 could be made only at disproportionate cost.

Domestic Fuel

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of their budget is spent on fuel by (a) the poorest decile and (b) the richest decile; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Portillo: According to the Family Expenditure Survey, over the period 1989 to 1991, expenditure on fuel, light and power accounted for 10¼ per cent. of total expenditure for the bottom decile and 3¼ per cent. of total spending for the top decile.

Civil Servants (Salaries)

Ms Estelle Morris: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much money in interest the Government gained by withholding the salaries of 63,000 civil servants for three days in February 1993.

Sir John Cope: The Exchequer benefit from the late payment in error of the salaries of some civil servants in the Department of Employment Group at the end of February was approximately £25,000.

Credit Institutions

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the publicly-owned credit institutions in each EEC member state specified in the proposed article 104(2) in the Maastricht treaty to which prohibition in article 104(1) of overdraft and credit facilities to central and local governments does not apply.

Mr. Nelson: It would not be possible to provide this list without disproportionate expense. The provision in article 104(2) would enable national central banks and the European central bank to treat publicly-owned credit institutions, in the same way as private credit institutions, in the context of the supply of reserves by central banks. In the absence of this provision, the prohibitions in article 104(1) would prevent the European central bank or national central banks from dealing with publicly-owned credit institutions in normal money market operations, which often involve, for example, the purchase by central banks of short term instruments.

Bank of England

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how ways and means advances from the Bank of England to Governments operate; and what proposals he has for monetising rather than funding any proportion of the public sector borrowing requirement by means of such advances.

Mr. Nelson: The daily flows of cash between the Consolidated Fund and the National Loans Fund may result in either a surplus or a deficit on the National Loans Fund. Where there is a deficit, that deficit is met by ways and means advances from the Bank of England.

The Government have no intention of monetising rather than funding any proportion of the public sector borrowing requirement by means of such advances.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the prohibition of overdraft facilities with the Bank of England in the proposed article 104 in the Maastricht treaty is proposed to come into effect.

Mr. Nelson: Article 104 would come into effect on 1 January 1994. Under paragraph 11 of the protocol on "Certain Provisions relating to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland", the United Kingdom may maintain its ways and means facility with the Bank of England if, and so long as, the United Kingdom does not move to the third stage of economic and monetary union.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recourse he has had to ways and means advances from the Bank of England in each year since 1979; and for what amounts.

Mr. Nelson: The level of ways and means advances outstanding fluctuates from day to day. The ways and means advances outstanding on the last working day of each financial year, which includes ways and means advances from the Bank of England, is published in the supplementary statements to the Consolidated Fund and National Loans Fund accounts for that year.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what interest rate is payable on ways and means advances from the Bank of England to (a) central Government, (b) local authorities and (c) nationalised industries.

Mr. Nelson: The interest rate payable on ways and means advances to central Government is the band 1 eligible Bill rate. The Bank of England has no ways and means arrangement with either local authorities or nationalised industries.

Mr. Darling: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will bring forward proposals for the Bank of England's report of its supervisory functions under the Banking Act 1987 to include details of support operations to authorised banking institutions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nelson: Section 1(3) of the Banking Act 1987 requires the Bank to make an annual report on its activities under the Act. I have no intention of varying these requirements. It is for the Bank of England to decide whether to include in the Banking Act report matters other than its activities under the Act.

European Monetary Union

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which provisions of stage II of European monetary union apply to the United Kingdom before notice is given under article 1 of the protocol of the Maastricht treaty relating to the United Kingdom.

Mr. Nelson: All the stage 2 provisions of the Maastricht treaty will apply to the United Kingdom except that, by virtue of paragraph 11 of the United Kingdom protocol, our ways and means facility with the Bank of England can be maintained if and so long as the United Kingdom does not move to the third stage.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for what reasons it was considered desirable for the United Kingdom, to retain the ways and means facility, according to paragraph 11 of the Maastricht protocol on provisions relating to the United Kingdom, under stage II of European monetary union.

Mr. Nelson: The Government saw no reason to change our existing ways and means arrangements during stage 2 to meet the intention of article 104 in prohibiting monetary financing.

European Central Bank

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what negotiations his Department has had with European officials over the possible siting of the headquarters of a European central bank in London.

Mr. Nelson: The site of the European central bank has been discussed on a number of occasions and my Department continues to press the strong market case for locating the new European monetary institutions in London.

Mergers and Divisions (Taxation)

Sir Michael Grylls: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many EC countries have failed to implement the directive on a common system of taxation of mergers and divisions of parents and subsidiary companies in EC countries.

Mr. Dorrell: The Commission of the European Communities is responsible for ensuring that member states comply with their obligations to implement Community legislation. Provisions implementing the directives on cross-border mergers and on parent and subsidiary companies in the United Kingdom were included in the Finance (No. 2) Act 1992.

General Government Expenditure

Ms Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide a table breaking down the series in line 1, general Government expenditure, of table 2C.2 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1993-94" into its principal components.

Mr. Portillo: Table 1.2 of the 1993-94 "Financial Statement and Budget Report" (FSBR) sets out a comparison of the current estimates of the components of spending for 1992-93 with the equivalent forecasts from the 1992-93 Report. Projections for general Government expenditure in the FSBR are consistent with the plans for public expenditure announced in the Autumn Statement. Details of the differences from previous plans for 1993-94 and 1994-95 are set out in section 7 of the Statistical Supplement to the 1992 Autumn Statement (Cm 2219). Similar comparisons for 1995-96 and 1996-97 are not practical, because the projections in table 2A.3 of the 1992-93 edition of the FSBR were compiled on the basis of the planning total, rather than the new control total.

Myalgic Encephalomyelitis

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to exempt the value of invalidity benefit available to the sufferers of myalgic encephalomyelitis from taxation.

Mr. Dorrell: Invalidity benefit is not currently subject to taxation.

World Economy

Ms Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will set out a table indicating the effect of the changes to the world economy variables in table 3.2 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1993-94" relative to the equivalent table in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1992-93" on his Department's estimates of the public sector borrowing requirement in 1992-93 and 1993-94.

Mr. Portillo [holding answer 1 April 1993]: Estimates of their separate effect are not available.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

London Marathon

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what agreement his Department has now reached with the organisers of the London marathon over proposed charges for their use of the royal parks for the event.

Mr. Key: The London marathon has agreed to pay the fee of £15,000 for the use of the royal parks.

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many of the appointments made by him as listed in "Public Bodies 1992" came within the categories set out in paragraphs 49 and 50 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers" and required a submission to the Prime Minister.

Mr. Brooke: I am responsible for appointments to the following bodies identified in "Public Bodies 1992":

Arts Council of Great Britain.
British Film Institute.
British Library.
British Tourist Authority.
Broadcasting Complaints Commission.
Broadcasting Standards Council.
Crafts Council.
English Tourist Board.
Football Licensing Authority.
Historic Buildings and Monuments Commission for England (English Heritage).
National Film and Television School.
National Film Development Fund.
Advisory Committee on Historic Wreck Sites.
Advisory Committee on the Government Art Collection.
Library and Information Services Council.
Regional Councils for Sport and Recreation.
Reviewing Committee on the Export of Works of Art.
Theatres Trust.
Independent Television Commission.
Radio Authority.
Welsh Fourth Channel Authority.
Registrar of Public Lending Right.
South Bank Theatre Board.
Sports Council.

Of the bodies listed below, the procedures set out in paragraphs 49 and 50 of Questions of Procedure for Ministers would apply to:

Arts Council of Great Britain.
British Library.
British Tourist Authority.
Broadcasting Complaints Commission.
Broadcasting Standards Council.
Crafts Council.
English Tourist Board.
Historic Buildings and Monuments Commission for England (English Heritage).
Reviewing Committee on the Export of Works of Art.
Independent Television Commission.
Radio Authority.
Welsh Fourth Channel Authority.
Sports Council.

Royal Parks

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what progress his Department has made in privatising the management of the royal parks in London.

Mr. Key: The management of the royal parks is not being privatised. As my right hon. Friend announced to the House on 1 April, the Royal Parks Agency was established on that day with delegated responsibility for the day-to-day management of the royal parks. The agency's chief executive will remain accountable to my right hon. Friend for the agency's performance.

Welsh Language Broadcasting

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what assessment his Department has made of the potential audience for S4C, in respect of the numbers of Welsh speakers, especially with relation to those with modest knowledge of, or understanding of the Welsh language in relation to the level of public subsidy for the channel; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: I understand that 67 per cent. of the population in Wales, and up to 90 per cent. of all Welsh speakers in Wales, watch S4C programmes each week.

National Lottery

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) what powers he intends to give to the director general of the national lottery to determine the levels of profit and administrative costs for the body corporate licensed by him to run the national lottery or for those bodies corporate licensed by him to promote lotteries as part of the national lottery;

(2) what powers he plans to give to the director general of the national lottery to determine the extent to which radio and television advertising is used to promote the national lottery;

(3) what control the director general of the national lottery will have over the contracting out of work to other bodies corporate by the body corporate licensed by him to run the national lottery and by the bodies corporate licensed by him to promote lotteries as part of the national lottery;

(4) if the applications made to the director general of the national lottery by bodies corporate to run the national lottery, or by bodies corporate to promote lotteries as part of the national lottery, will be required to detail any proposed contracting out of work to other bodies corporate;

(5) if the licence authorised by the director general of the national lottery to a body corporate to run the national lottery, or to bodies corporate to promote lotteries as part of the national lottery, will include authorisation for those bodies corporate to contract out work to other bodies corporate;

(6) what control the director general of the national lottery will have over the contracting out of work to other bodies corporate by the body corporate licensed by him to run the national lottery and by the bodies corporate licensed by him to promote lotteries as part of the national lottery;

(7) if work contracted out to other bodies corporate by the body corporate licensed by the director general of the national lottery to run the national lottery, or by those bodies corporate licensed by him to promote lotteries as part of the national lottery, will be on the basis of competitive tender.

Mr. Key: The powers of the director general are set out in the National Lottery etc. Bill. In considering whether to grant a licence under clause 5 the director general will no doubt take into account a number of matters, which might include the levels of profit and administrative costs of those bidding; these may then be reflected in licence conditions. Whether or not to contract out work would be an operational matter for the body which was awarded the clause 5 licence. It would be subject to normal commercial tendering arrangements. However that body could not contract out the running of games unless they were regulated under a clause 6 licence. In addition, the director general could, through the clause 5 licence, ensure that any sub-contracts included conditions to enable him to carry out effectively his statutory duties under clause 4. Advertising would be a matter for the operator, and would be subject to the constraints of the ITC and Radio Authority codes; however, in assessing the merits of particular bids the director general would no doubt take into account the effectiveness of the proposed marketing strategy.

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what powers he intends to give the director general of the national lottery to determine places of sale for national lottery tickets.

Mr. Key: My right hon. Friend has powers under clause 12 of the National Lottery etc. Bill to regulate the places where lottery tickets can be sold. The director general may, among other things, consider the retail strategy of applicants for a licence under clause 5.

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) what powers he plans to give to the director general of the national lottery to decide on the frequency of national lottery games;

(2) what powers he plans to give the director general of the national lottery to determine the size of the prize offered by the national lottery;

(3) what powers he plans to give to the director general of the national lottery to determine the extent to which the national lottery is allowed to roll over prizes.

Mr. Key: In consideration whether to grant any licence under clause 6, the director general will examine the rules of proposed games and will be able to take into account matters such as the prize structure, odds (and therefore the likelihood of rollover), and the frequency of competitions. In addition, my right hon. Friend is minded to direct the director general to use his powers to limit rollover to no more than three consecutive games.

Private Finance Initiative

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what steps his Department has taken to implement the private finance initiative announced in the autumn statement on 12 November 1992 and in the "Treasury Private Finance Guidance" published on 9 December 1992.

Mr. Brooke [holding answer 1 April 1993]: My Department is examining the scope for involving the private sector in the ways suggested by the interim guidance published by the Treasury on 9 December 1992, and the further published guidance on contract energy management (17 February 1993) and joint ventures (16 March 1993).

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Korea

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to visit the Korean peninsula; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Garel-Jones: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary will visit the Republic of Korea from 7 to 9 April. This will be a good opportunity for wide-ranging talks with members of the new Administration there and with business representatives.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of recent changes in the human rights situation in the Republic of Korea; and if he will make a statement on the recent amnesty granted by the Government there.

Mr. Garel-Jones: Together with our European Community partners, we continue to monitor developments over human rights in the Republic of Korea. We are very encouraged by progress in the democratic process, most recently demonstrated by the presidential election. We regard the recent amnesty for prisoners as further evidence of the Government's desire to establish a broader base of popular trust within the country.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether each American nuclear base installed in South Korea has been examined and cleared by the International Atomic Energy Agency; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: South Korea acceded to the non-proliferation treaty as a non-nuclear weapon state in 1975 and has in place a full scope safeguards agreement with the International Atomic Energy Agency. No reports of non-compliance have been received.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library a copy of the resolution approved by the board of governors of the International Atomic Energy Agency on 18 March on the attempts to implement the request for nuclear safeguards inspections in North Korea.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: A copy has been deposited in the Library of the House.

Somalia

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the current waiting time for Somali refugees who are awaiting entry certificates to join dependants; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Garel-Jones: Most Somali refugee applications for entry clearance to join dependants are received at Nairobi, Addis Ababa and Djibouti/Sana'a. Where Home Office authority has been pre-advised to post, in accordance with the concessions agreed by Ministers in 1988, visas are issued on the day of application. All other applicants are interviewed by an entry clearance officer and their applications referred to the Home Office. Applicants at Nairobi are usually interviewed within seven days. The waiting time for interview at Addis Ababa is currently about six weeks. There are no visa issuing staff at Djibouti. Entry clearance officers from Sana'a visit Djibouti every two months to carry out interviews. The Home Office decision on applications can take between three weeks and six months depending on the complexity of individual cases.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the way applications for entry certificates by citizens of Somalia are dealt with at the British high commission, Nairobi; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Garel-Jones: Entry clearance procedures at all posts overseas are constantly monitored. Applications for entry clearance by citizens of Somalia are processed at the British high commission, Nairobi, in accordance with the operating standards established by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office for all overseas posts. Somali applicants for transit visas are interviewed on the day of application and, if appropriate, visas issued on the same day. Somalis who wish to join relatives in the United Kingdom for settlement are granted interviews usually within seven days from submitting their applications and details are then sent to the Home Office for decision, a process which usually takes between 10 and 25 days.

Nuclear Testing

Dr. Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what costs have been incurred by the British embassy in Washington DC in the last year in the process of lobbying the United States Congress on the question of nuclear testing; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Garel-Jones: Lobbying congressmen on a wide range of issues is a routine activity for the embassy in Washington. It is not practical to extrapolate with precision the costs of lobbying Congress on this specific issue from those of the overall activities of the embassy. But within the context of the embassy's work the time taken to do so was minimal, and the costs are likely to have been similarly minimal.

Western Sahara

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what actions the United Kingdom representative at the United Nations has taken to ensure that a referendum is held on the future of the Western Sahara.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Following the unanimous adoption of Security Council Resolution 809, the United Kingdom permanent representative has been in touch with the United Nations Secretary-General to offer our support and to encourage him to redouble his efforts with both parties to bring about a referendum by the end of the year. The Secretary-General's special representative, Yaqub Khan, is currently visiting the region.

Nuclear Non-Proliferation

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those countries which have signed the nuclear non-proliferation treaty.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: A list of states party to the non-proliferation treaty has been deposited in the Library of the House.

Iran

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent discussions he has had with the Government of Italy with regard to joint efforts to combat terrorism emanating from Iran.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We and our European partners made clear at the Edinburgh summit in December our concern at Iranian behaviour in a number of areas, particularly the fatwa against Salman Rushdie and terrorism. We maintain regular contact with our European partners including the Italians, on ways of combatting terrorism.

Council of Ministers

Mr. Booth: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish a statement of forthcoming business in the European Community Council of Ministers.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The information is as follows:

(g) Research Council—29 April

Agenda unavailable

3. The Foreign Affairs Council will meet on 5-6 April. EC Foreign Ministers will consider a revised negotiating mandate for partnership and co-operation agreements with the States of the former Soviet Union. Ministers will also consider a negotiating mandate for new Europe Agreements with the successor Czech and Slovak Republics, as the Europe agreement signed with Czechoslovakia in December 1991 was not ratified prior to the country's dissolution at the beginning of 1993. Ministers will agree to open accession negotiations with Norway.

4. The Internal Market Council will meet on 5 April and will discuss statutory markings and braking for two and three wheeled vehicles; CE mark regulation; cable and satellite broadcasting copyright and duration of copyright. Ministers will also discuss directives on the official control of foodstuffs and sweeteners for use in foodstuffs. Public supply contracts and the final adoption of the directive on machinery will also be discussed.

5. A formal meeting of the Labour and Social Affairs Council is planned for 6 April. The agenda has not been finalised, but the directives on biological agents, working time, and fishing vessels are likely to be discussed. A policy debate will also be held on the directives on protection of young workers and European Works Council. There is likely to be an open session on employment.

6. The Economic and Finance Council will meet on 19 April to discuss action to promote recovery in Europe resulting from the initiative launched by the Edinburgh European Council. It will also discusss the negotiations between the Council, the Presidency and European Parliament on a new inter-institutional agreement on budget discipline. The Council may also discuss a draft directive on company taxation concerning interest/royalties. The proposal to amend the 7th VAT Directive (Special VAT regime for second-hand goods, works of art, antique and collectors' items) is also scheduled for further discussion. It is possible, but unlikely, that there will also be discussions of EURATOM loans for nuclear safety in central and eastern Europe and the Commonwealth of Independent States, EIB loans for projects in Albania, and the proposed Council directive on deposit-guarantee schemes.

7. A joint Energy/Environment Council will be held on 23 April. The Council will discuss the Community's strategy on climate change, including the proposals for a tax on carbon dioxide emissions and energy.

8. The Agriculture Council will meet on 26 and 27 April. Ministers will discuss the 1993-94 price-fixing proposals; milk quotas; the agricultural aspects of the GATT negotiations and sugar. They may also discuss Greek tobacoo and the review of the potato regime.

9. The Research Council will meet on 29 April. At present, the agenda is not available.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Child Support Act

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the impact of the European charter on the rights of the child upon the provision within the Child Support Act 1991 to name the father of the child in question; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: The European charter to which the hon. Member refers was discussed in the European Parliament on 6 and 8 July 1992, when it was forwarded to the Commission, the Council and the Council of Europe. A European Parliament resolution is not binding on the member states. The provisions of the Child Support Act 1991 meet the standards set out in the United Nations convention on the rights of the child.

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to monitor the effect of the Child Support Act 1991 on ethnic minorities.

Mr. Burt: The Child Support Act will apply in all cases where child maintenance is an issue. It will ensure that parents meet their responsibilities to their children whenever they can afford to do so and that the costs of maintaining those children does not unnecessarily fall to the taxpayer. No distinction will, or should, be made on grounds of ethnic origin.

Disabilitiy (Grants) Bill

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what recent representations he has received from the British Council of Organisations of Disabled People in regard to the Disability (Grants) Bill; and what response he has made.

Mr. Scott: The Secretary of State received a letter on this subject from the Council at the beginning of February. The letter was also copied to the Prime Minister, and a reply was sent from his office.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has had from the British Council of Organisations of Disabled People in regard to the Disability (Grants) Bill and the £500 limit on help to enable disabled people to live independently in the community; what reply he is sending; and if he will make a statement.

Miss Widdecombe: The Secretary of State received a letter on this subject from the Council at the beginning of February. The letter was also copied to the Prime Minister, and a reply was sent from his office.

Young People, Scotland

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many applications were made by 16 to 17-year-old persons for income support due to severe hardship in (a) Inverclyde, (b) Strathclyde and (c) Scotland as a whole in each of the past three years; and of these how many were successful in (i) Inverclyde, (ii) Strathclyde and (iii) Scotland as a whole.

Mr. Burt: The administration of income support is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Ann Robinson to Dr. Norman Godman, dated 1 April 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency it is the responsibility of Mr. Michael Bichard to answer questions about relevant operational matters. However, as Mr. Bichard is away at the moment I am replying on his behalf to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking how many applications were made by 16 to 17 year old persons for Income Support due to severe hardship in (a) Inverclyde, (b) Strathclyde and (c) Scotland as a whole in each of the past three years; and of these how many were successful in (i) Inverclyde, (ii) Strathclyde and (iii) Scotland as a whole.

The relevant information is appended. Information is not available prior to June 1990 because statistics were not kept until that date. In addition, the 1991 statistics for Inverclyde and Strathclyde do not include information relating to March 1991. This information has been obtained from the Severe Hardship Claims Unit.

I hope you find this reply helpful. A copy of this letter will appear in the Official Report and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. Robert B. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether for the case of Mr. Christopher Fenlon (NL 02 20 33 C) he will set out (a) the date of application for disability living allowance, (b) the date of any subsequent appeal and (c) the date of the decision on the appeal.

Mr. Scott: The administration of disability living allowance is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to my hon. Friend and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from David Riggs to Mr. Robert B. Jones, dated 1 April 1993:

As chief Executive of the Benefits Agency, it is the responsibility of Mr. Michael Bichard to answer questions raised about relevant operational matters. However, as Mr. Bichard is away at the moment I am replying on his behalf to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking whether for the case of Mr. Christopher Fenlon (NL 02 20 33 C) he will set out (a) the date of application for DLA, (b) the date of any subsequent appeal and (c) the date of the decision on the appeal.

Mr. Tenion applied for DLA on 17 June 1992. The claim was received on 7 July. On 11 August he requested a review of the decision dated 27 July. A decision was made on the review on 19 January 1993.

I have written to you separately and in greater detail about this matter.

I hope that you find this reply helpful. A copy will appear in the Official Report and a copy will also be placed in the Library.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects that Ms Margaret Owen, of Mullins avenue, Rumney, Cardiff, NI number NX 304327A, will receive a copy of her medical records requested on 18 January in relation to her claim for disability living allowance.

Mr. Scott: The administration of disability living allowance is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from David Riggs to Mr. Rhodri Morgan, dated 1 April 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency, it is the responsibility of Mr. Michael Bichard to answer questions about relevant operational matters. However, as Mr. Bichard is away at the moment I am replying on his behalf to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about when he expects that Ms Margaret Owen, 25 Mullins Avenue, Rumney, Cardiff, will receive a copy of her medical records requested on 18th January in relation to her claim for disability living allowance.

I have written to you separately and in greater detail about this matter.

I apologise for the delay in sending the evidence to Ms Owen. Staff are aware of the need to respond quickly to requests from our customers for such information.

You will be aware from Mr. Bichard's letter of 19 October 1992 to all MPs of the problems the Benefits Agency has faced since the launch of DLA and the positive steps taken to improve the situation. Since then we have taken further steps to improve the service to our customers including recruiting additional, and redeploying existing, staff to clear the backlog of reviews and four remote processing units have been set up using staff from other parts of the Benefits Agency. Taken together these steps will enable us to give the standard of service to which every customer is entitled and which we want to deliver.

Thank you for bringing this matter to my attention. I hope that you find this reply helpful. A copy will appear in the Official Report and a copy will also be placed in the Library.

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claims for disability living allowance received in each month since April 1992 are still outstanding; if he will give a breakdown of the figures month by month since the introduction of the benefit; and what steps he is taking to clear up the backlog of outstanding claims.

Mr. Scott: The administration of disability living allowance is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from David Riggs to Ms Mildred Gordon, dated 1 April 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency, it is the responsibility of Mr. Michael Bichard to answer questions about relevant operational matters. However, as Mr. Bichard is away at the moment I am replying on his behalf to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking how many claims for disability living allowance received in each month since April 1992 are still outstanding; if he will give a breakdown of the figures month by month since the introduction of the benefit; and what steps he is taking to clear up the backlog of outstanding claims.

The table below supplies the number of DLA claims (including Special Rules) registered by month and the number of cases outstanding by month of receipt. However, there will always be some cases which although received in one month will not be registered until the following month.

Month	Registered	Cases outstanding by month of receipt
April 1992	50,515	182
May 1992	45,376	172
June 1992	37,640	162
July 1992	36,105	142
August 1992	32,404	143
September 1992	35,570	148
October 1992	38,339	259
November 1992	36,867	503
December 1992	28,902	812
January 1993	34,416	1,949
February 1993	38,104	7,131

Outstanding cases as of 26 March 1993.

DLA management have urgently drawn up a Service Delivery Plan to target older claims received prior to 1 December 1992 to ensure that they are cleared as quickly as possible.

Of course there will always be a very small percentage of claims where customers or external medical professionals are unable to furnish the information required to clear cases within a period of some months.

The Service Delivery Plan also ensures 60 per cent. of new claims are cleared within 30 days in line with the national primary target for DLA. This national target is being consistently achieved.

To answer the second part of your question I have listed below the measures taken to clear the backlog of claims. These include:

- To increase the number of staff in DLA and AA65+ operations by over 800;
- Sanctioning overtime in all Disability Benefit Centres and Units—equivalent to approximately a further 300 more staff;
- Redeployment of staff from other parts of the Benefits Agency to speed claims processing;
- Establishing, staffing and equipping additional three processing units to handle new claims and so relieve some pressures on existing units;
- A review of operations to improve efficiency by rationalising procedures.

I hope you find this reply helpful. A copy will appear in the Official Report and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Income Support

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many people aged 60 years or over receive income support in (a) Northumbria, (b) Tyne and Wear, (c) Cleveland, (d) Durham, (e) North Yorkshire, (f) South Yorkshire, (g) West Yorkshire and (h) Humberside;

(2) what is the take-up of income support on a caseload basis by people aged 60 years or over in the regions (a) Yorkshire and Humberside and (b) North.

Mr. Burt: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency, will write to the hon. Member with such information as is available and a copy will be placed in the Library.

Letter from Ann Robinson to Mr. Hugh Bayley, dated 1 April 1993:

As Chief Executive of the Benefits Agency it is the responsibility of Mr. Michael Bichard to answer questions about relevant operational matters. However as Mr. Bichard is away at the moment I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Social Security asking how many people aged 60 years or over receive Income Support in (a) Northumbria, (b) Tyne and Wear, (c) Cleveland, (d) Durham, (e) North Yorkshire, (f) South Yorkshire, (g) West Yorkshire and (h) Humberside, and also what is the take-up of Income Support on a caseload basis by people aged 60 years or over in the regions (a) Yorkshire and Humberside and (b) North.

The information is not available in the geographical areas requested. Information about the take-up of Income Support is not available.

However, we do retain information concerning the number of recipients of Income Support aged 60 or over by District, and this is appended. The information has been obtained from the latest available Management Information Statistics for Income Support as at the end of February 1993.

I hope you find this reply helpful. A copy will appear in the Official Report and a copy will also be placed in the Library.

Care Homes (Residential Allowance)

Mr. Willetts: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to change the rules relating to the payment of residential allowance during absences from residential care and nursing homes.

Mr. Burt: A number of representations have been received recently from Members and others on this issue. In the light of the concerns raised we have carefully considered all the implications for the new community care arrangements, particularly for local authorities. We have decided to extend the payment of residential allowance for absences of up to six weeks due to admission to hospital and up to three weeks for other reasons. Details of the new arrangements will be announced shortly.

Industrial Diseases

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if the benefit recommended by the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council for underground coal miners with emphysema and chronic bronchitis will be paid to the widows or other dependants of men suffering from these diseases who have died since the IIAC's report was submitted to him in August 1992.

Miss Widdecombe: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on 29 March that regulations will be introduced to prescribe chronic bronchitis and emphysema as industrial diseases in relation to underground coal miners with effect from 13 September 1993. Industrial injuries disablement benefit is not payable for periods prior to the date of prescription of an industrial disease.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Arab Boycott

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what investigations have been made of the impact of the Arab boycott on British exports.

Mr. Needham: Trade frustrated by the boycott cannot be measured.

Medical Products (Malta)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what tariffs or restrictions are applied to medical products manufactured in Malta and exported to EC countries.

Mr. Needham: Under the terms of the EC/Malta association agreement, medical products manufactured in Malta enter the Community without tariff or other restriction. Such products must however comply with any national technical requirements or standards, which currently vary from member state to member state.

Paper Recycling

Mr. Cohen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has received from the British Paper and Board Industry Federation about waste paper recycling; what new measures Her Majesty's Government now propose to take; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade and I have on two occasions recently met members of the British Paper and Board Industry Federation to discuss waste paper recycling. The federation expressed concerns to us over the impact of the German packaging regulations which we are taking very seriously indeed. My right hon. Friend has written to European Commissioners and to the German Economics Minister about this matter, and we are urgently considering what further action, consistent with our EC and international obligations, might be taken to alleviate the difficulties being experienced by some sectors of the United Kingdom recycling industry.

"The Prospects for Coal"

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what information he has received from Nuclear Electric plc and Scottish Nuclear in regard to the prospects for improvement in performance of existing nuclear reactors to which reference is made in the White Paper "The Prospects for Coal", Cm. 2235, at paragraph 7.66.

Mr. Eggar: I have received appropriate information from Nuclear Electric to allow me to discharge my responsibilities as shareholder. One of the formal objectives set by Government for Nuclear Electric is that the company should achieve a continued increase in electricity generation, provided that this is economically justified. The means by which Nuclear Electric fulfils this objective, including improvements in the performance of existing nuclear stations, is a management matter for the company.

Scottish Nuclear Limited is the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will specify those organisations or individuals to which reference is made in the White Paper "The Prospects for Coal", Cm. 2235, at paragraphs 7.68 to 7.70, which are respectively in favour of (a) reducing the current nuclear component and (b) maintaining the current nuclear component in electricity generation.

Mr. Eggar: As the White Paper makes clear, the principal organisations advocating a reduction in the nuclear component in electricity generation were those representing coal mining interests, supported to some extent by consumer groups, environmental groups and the privatised generators. Those who advocated maintaining the nuclear component included the major players in the nuclear industry together with unions and employers' groups and some academics. However, many organisations and individuals discussed the role of nuclear generation as one among a number of issues in their evidence.

A list of all those who submitted evidence forms an appendix to the White Paper, and copies of the evidence are available in the Library.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what consideration he gave to increasing the target for combined heat and power beyond 2,000 MW by the year 2000, in preparation of paragraph 8.24 of his White Paper "The Prospects for Coal", Cm 2235.

Mr. Eggar: The existing target for combined heat and power, which represented a doubling of capacity by the year 2000, was set on the basis of market potential in 1990. My Department, in consultation with the Department of the Environment and others, will be reviewing this target when we have more experience of the developments which are taking place within the new structure of the electricity supply industry.

Insolvency Practitioners

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many inspections were carried out by the insolvency service in each of the last three years into the quality of work of insolvency practitioners; in how many cases practitioners were referred to their relevant supervisory bodies; and what other action was taken.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The insolvency service visits insolvency practitioners to ensure their compliance with the statutory requirements and has carried out 140 such visits to insolvency practitioners since April 1992. Reports are forwarded to the relevant licensing body for its consideration. A smaller number of such visits were also made before April 1992 but statistics are not readily available.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the bodies responsible for the supervision and regulation of insolvency practitioners; what duties are laid on such bodies under the Insolvency Act 1986; and how many practitioners are regulated by each body.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: The following professional bodies have satisfied the Secretary of State for the purposes of regulating the professional practices. They enforce rules to ensure that those individuals they authorise are fit and proper to act as insolvency practitioners and meet acceptable levels of education and practical experience.

The number of individuals authorised by each body is shown in brackets.

The Chartered Association of Certified Accountants: (114).
The Insolvency Practitioners Association: (267).
The Institute of Chartered Accountants in England and Wales: (953).
The Institute of Chartered Accountants in Ireland: (86).
The Institute of Chartered Accountants of Scotland: (200).
The Law Society: (183).
THe Law Society of Scotland: (40).

In addition, the Secretary of State directly authorises 147 insolvency practitioners.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of whether the regulation of insolvency practitioners is meeting the requirements of the Insolvency Act 1986; and what action he proposes to improve those standards.

Mr. Neil Hamilton: Since the introduction of licensing, action has been taken by the appropriate authorising body to withdraw authorisation, where it is satisfied that an insolvency practitioner is no longer a fit and proper person to act as such. Misconduct not amounting to evidence that the practitioner is no longer fit and proper has resulted in lesser disciplinary action.

As part of its continuing review of the effectiveness of the insolvency legislation, the insolvency service introduced routine visits to insolvency practitioners to monitor their compliance with statutory requirements. The licensing bodies are committed to carrying out such visits on their own members.

Clothing and Textiles

Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many multi-fibre arrangements with third world countries are currently in operation in the case of (a) the United Kingdom and (b) Germany; what are the latest figures for clothing and textile (i) exports and (ii) imports for (a) and (b) which country is the world's largest exporter of clothing and textiles; and what is the United Kingdom's rank.

Mr. Needham: Agreements with supplying countries under the multi-fibre arrangement (MFA) are negotiated by the European Commission and apply equally to all EC member states. There are currently 27 MFA agreements.

In 1991, the latest year for which figures are available, the value of United Kingdom exports of textiles and clothing was £4·7 billion and imports totalled £8·4 billion. In the same year German exports totalled £12·6 billion against imports of £21·5 billion.

In 1990, the latest year for which complete comparative figures are available, Hong Kong was the world's largest exporter of textiles and clothing (£13·5 billion). In the same year, the United Kingdom was ranked 10th with exports totalling £4·7 billion.

Assistance to Business (France)

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what information he has on assistance made available to businesses locating in the Nord Pas de Calais region by the French Government and French local authorities; and if he will make a statement on the level of comparable assistance currently available to businesses in Dover, Deal and east Kent.

Mr. Needham: I understand that a range of assistance from central Government and the regional council is available to businesses in Nord Pas de Calais. In east Kent, businesses have access to the overseas trade services provided by my Department, to the DTI consultancy scheme and to technology support. We are currently carrying out a review of the assisted areas in Great Britain and will take into account all of the arguments advanced about east Kent.

Natural Rubber

Mr. Meacher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the United Kingdom position with regard to the renegotiation of the international natural rubber agreement.

Mr. Needham: Government policy towards international commodity agreements was given by the then Minister for Trade in response to a question from the hon. Member for Hertfordshire, South-West, (Mr. Page) on 21 July 1988, Official Report, columns 767-8. Against this background, we do not consider that a third international natural rubber agreement is desirable.

The United Kingdom acts in such matters in consultation with other member states of the European Community. Other member states are also opposed to renegotiation at present.

Overseas Projects

Mr. Meacher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will place in the Library details of the current membership, constitution and operating brief of the Overseas Project Board and the Export Group for Constructional Industries.

Mr. Needham: I am placing details of the Overseas Project Board (OPB) in the Library, with a copy of the 1991-92 annual report and forward plan of the British Overseas Trade Board, which covers the OPB's activities.

The Government are not responsible for the Export Group for the Constructional Industries, which is a trade association for British contracting companies and funded entirely by its members.

Assisted Area Status

Mr. Tipping: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he now intends to announce the result of his review of the assisted area status map.

Mr. Heseltine: The needs and circumstances of all areas are being carefully considered in the assisted areas map review. The results will be announced as soon as possible, after the necessary clearance from the European Commission.

Coal Industry

Mr. Spearing: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his reply to the First report from the Trade and Industry Select Committee on British Energy Policy and the Market for Coal in relation to recommendation 33 on the interest of the consumer, Cm 2235, page 131, what period of time he assumed for the consumers' interest when formulating his response.

Mr. Eggar: As the Government's response to recommendation 33 makes clear, the main protection for the interests of electricity consumers lies in the development of effective competition in the electricity supply industry. The development of competition is a continuing process, which began with electricity privatisation, and which will be further increased by the relaxation of the franchise limit for the RECs next year.

Nuclear Installations

Mr. Parry: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will publish the list of countries who have agreed with the International Atomic Energy Agency methods of inspection of nuclear installations.

Mr. Eggar: Information on the topic is published in the annual report of the International Atomic Energy Agency; a copy of the report for 1991 is available in the Library.

Offshore Exploration

Mr. Salmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will give details of his Department's forecasts of the number of exploration and appraisal drilling wells in the United Kingdom continental shelf in each of the next five years (a) prior to the Budget and (b) in light of the Budget's proposed changes to the oil taxation regime; and if he will also break down the figures by sector of the United Kingdom continental shelf.

Mr. Eggar: My Department does not publish five-year forecasts of the number of exploration and appraisal wells in the United Kingdom continental shelf. It does, however, conduct regular surveys of company intentions to drill wells looking up to two years ahead. The results of the last survey were published in the August 1992 issue of "Energy Trends", a copy of which is in the Library.

Oil Taxation

Mr. Salmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if his Department will be revising its Brown Book forecasts in light of the Budget changes to the oil taxation regime and their likely impact; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: The Brown Book forecasts for petroleum production from 1993 to 1997 to be included in the Brown Book were published on 4 March, Official Report, columns 252-53. The tax changes announced in the Budget are not expected to have a significant effect on production over this period; and there are no plans to revise the figures before the Brown Book is published at the end of April.

Structural Funds Regulations

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will seek to ensure in the current negotiations on the new Structural Fund Regulations, that (a) all projects and programmes comply with EC environmental legislation and policy and (b) all applications for funding submitted to the European Commission contain adequate and appropriate environmental information.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 1 April 1993]: The Government fully agree that structural funds projects and programmes should comply with EC environmental legislation and policies. The Government agree also therefore that, where appropriate, applications for funding should contain adequate environmental information. Full account must be taken account of these concerns during the review of the structural funds regulations.

Environmental Management

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has recently received from the textile industry in connection with BS 7750 on environmental management.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 31 March 1993]: My hon. Friend has written to me about correspondence he has received from the textile industry on BS 7750. This is the only representation I have received.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if he will make a statement on the progress which has been made in connection with the pilot programme relating to the introduction of the BSI standard 7750 for environmental management; how many companies participated in that programme; what success they have had in meeting the requirements; what form of accreditation they will receive on successful completion; and what estimate he has made of the costs which they have incurred in participating in the pilot programme;

(2) by what authority, and through what mechanism, accreditation will be given to those companies which have successfully met the requirements of the BS 7750 standard for environmental management.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 31 March 1993]: In issuing BS 7750 the BSI made clear that it would be reviewed following the completion of the pilot programme. That programme is not yet complete and BSI has not therefore made an assessment of how successful companies have been in applying it. I understand that some 230 companies are implementing the standard in the programme; participation is voluntary and no estimate is available of the costs to the participants. I will ask the chief executive of BSI to write to my hon. Friend when BSI has reached a considered view of the outcome of the programme.

Companies may apply the standard and may contract a third party to certify that they have done so. My Department is considering whether it should set up a scheme to accredit such certifying bodies in relation to the revised version of BS 5570.

Rechar

Mr. Allen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much Rechar money has been (a) approved by his Department, (b) granted to and (c) spent in (i) the east midlands and (ii) Nottingham, since the inception of the scheme; and if he will list the projects and their cost in each category.

Mr. Baldry: I have been asked to reply.

A total of 280 applications have so far been received for the east midlands Rechar programme, seven of which relate to Nottingham. To date, 104 applications, worth £7·6 million in European regional development fund grant, have been approved. Some £2·7 million has been paid. The remaining applications are being evaluated, and if approved as submitted would attract grant of £2·05 million. In Nottingham one project has been approved with a grant of £0·08 million.

Farriers

Mr. Bell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many complaints have been received by his Department dealing with restriction of entry into statutory training systems under the Farrier (Registration) Acts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: I have been asked to reply.

The Department has received two letters of complaint during the past year about the scheme for training apprentice farriers under the Farriers (Registration) Acts 1975 and 1977.

Mr. Bell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what consideration his Department is giving to the licensing of and registration requirements in relation to the Farriers (Registration) Acts; and if he will make a statement;

(2) when he proposes to introduce legislation to repeal the Farriers (Registration) Acts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: I have been asked to reply. There are no present plans to repeal the Farriers (Registration) Acts 1975 and 1977. The Acts are kept under regular review by this Department, to ensure that their requirements remain necessary and appropriate.

Additionally, the Government are committed to reviewing all regulations which impact upon business, and the Acts will be considered as part of that exercise.

Mr. Bell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what mechanisms exist for monitoring the work of registered farriers in accordance with the Farriers (Registration) Acts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: I have been asked to reply.

The Farriers (Registration) Acts 1975 and 1977 established a body called the Farriers Registration Council. The council is responsible for registering farriers and ensuring recognised standards of farriery.

DEFENCE

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many and what percentage of officers in each grade from 1 to 7 and overall in his Department are (a) women, (b) from ethnic minorities and (c) disabled people.

Mr. Aitken: The numbers of women, disabled and ethnic minority staff in grade levels 1 to 7 and overall are given in the table. These figures exclude our executive agencies, the Meteorological Office and the Defence Research agency. I have asked the chief executives to write to the hon. Member.

	Registered disabled[1]	Percentage of staff in grade	Non-registered disabled[1]	Percentage of staff in grade	Ethnic minority[2]	Percentage of staff in grade	Women	Percentage of staff in grade

Aldermaston

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when it is now expected that the A90 building will reach its full production capacity.

Mr. Aitken: Following completion of red commissioning A90 production capacity will be developed to meet the needs of the Trident programme.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the expected delay between the completion of red commissioning and declaration of full operational capability for (a) A89, (b) A90 and (c) A91 at AWE Aldermaston.

Mr. Aitken: A89 is now operational. It is not expected that there will be any delay between the end of red commissioning in either A90 or A91 and planned operational use.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the estimated cost of decommissioning, according to International Atomic Energy Agency guidelines, those facilities due to be replaced by the new capital works programme at AWE Aldermaston.

Mr. Aitken: The decommissioning programme for such facilities is in its initial stages and will take many years to complete. It is not yet therefore possible to determine the likely cost.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date red commissioning is scheduled to be (a) started and (b) completed in (i) A89, (ii) A90 and (iii) A91 at AWE Aldermaston.

Mr. Aitken: Red commissioning is scheduled to be started and completed as follows:

(i) A89—This facility became operational in August 1992 following completion of red commissioning.
(ii) A90—Red commissioning is scheduled to start later this year and will take several months.
(iii) A91—There is currently no scheduled date for the start of red commissioning.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what date white commissioning was (a) started and (b) completed in (i) A89, (ii) A90 and (iii) A91 at AWE Aldermaston.

Mr. Aitken: The information is as follows:

(i) White commissioning was started in A89 in March 1992 and completed in August 1992.
(ii) White commissioning was started in A90 in 1990 and is still in progress.
(iii) White commissioning was started in A91 in 1991 and is in abeyance.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current total estimated cost of the new capital works projects at AWE Aldermaston.

Mr. Aitken: The current total estimated cost of the major programme of capital works at AWE Aldermaston referred to in the Commons Defence Select Committee Fifth Report 1988-89 is £1·2 billion at 1992-93 prices.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received from the current work force at the Atomic Weapons Establishment at Aldermaston in regard to the appointments of Brown and Root as management contractors.

Mr. Aitken: It is Hunting-BRAE Limited and not Brown and Root (one of their parent organisations) who have been selected to operate the atomic weapons establishment. I have received no representations from the current workforce at Aldermaston concerning Brown and Root's involvement in the Hunting-BRAE consortium.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what assessment was made of the health and safety record of Brown and Root Inc. before awarding the contract to operate the Aldermaston nuclear weapons plant;

(2) what assessment he made of the safety record of Hunting plc in advance of awarding the contract to manage the Atomic Weapons Establishment from 1 April.

Mr. Aitken: A comprehensive and detailed assessment was carried out on all tenders received for the contract to operate AWE. Safety factors were extremely important in judging the competition. The fact that Hunting-BRAE were appointed as AWE operating contractor demonstrates that we have full confidence in their meeting our rigorous safety standards and that their parent organisations were judged to be fully acceptable in terms of the demanding safety role and responsibility at AWE.

Kineton Armaments Depot

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is the role and function of the proposed incinerator to be built at the central armaments depot, Kineton; what is the schedule for its construction; and what materials it is intended to destroy;

(2) what regulations exist for controlling the emissions from the proposed incinerator to be built at the central armaments depot, Kineton.

Mr. Aitken: The MOD has a requirement to demilitarise a proportion of its ammunition through an incineration facility. This includes surplus ammunition which has to be burned at high temperatures, and recoveries of explosive ordnance which may be of an uncertain condition or age. Previously, these types of ammunition have been dumped at sea, but that practice has now ceased. We plan to examine the potential for incineration to be carried out commercially before deciding upon the need for a MOD facility. In the event that a MOD facility were required, it would be designed to fully meet the emissions requirements as set out in the 1990 Environmental Protection Act and described in detail in Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution guidance note no. IPR 5/1.

White and Red Commissioning

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the differences between white commissioning and red commissioning.

Mr. Aitken: White commissioning is the process of proving that new plant and facilities operate safely and satisfactorily using similar but non-radioactive materials. Red commissioning is the process of proving that the new plant facilities operate safely and satisfactorily using limited amounts of the actual radioactive materials.

Windscale Decommissioning

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's expected contribution to the costs of decommissioning the Windscale piles and associated chimneys; and what is the total estimated cost of this operation.

Mr. Aitken: My Department is making a contribution of 91·5 per cent. towards the costs incurred in decommissioning the Windscale piles and associated chimneys. Work currently being undertaken constitutes the intial stages of a programme which is expected to take at least 50 years to complete. It is, therefore, too early to determine the likely total cost.

Low Flying

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total number of aircraft movements authorised for flying below 250 ft over the United Kingdom in (a) 1991 and (b) 1992; on how many days such low flying took place in each year; and if he will provide a breakdown of these figures for (i) the northern Scotland tactical training area, (ii) the central Wales tactical training area, (iii) the Borders tactical training area and (iv) other areas.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The number of aircraft movements authorised for flying below 250 ft within the tactical training areas is set out in the table. The number of days on which such flying actually took place is not available, however, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Figures in the table relate to the number of days on which flying was authorised to take place. We would expect actual figures to be significantly lower because alternative dates are often pre-booked for use in case of bad weather. Between August 1990 and March 1991 all three tactical training areas were made available on weekdays for essential operational low flying training associated with the United Kingdom's commitment in the Gulf. Operational low flying in the United Kingdom is confined to the three tactical training areas.

	Tactical training areas
	Northern Scotland	Central Wales	Borders	Total
1991
Operational low flying (OLF) movements	468	90	1,256	1,814
Number of days on which OLF authorised	126	115	119	360
1992
OLF movements	979	174	2,067	3,220
Number of days on which OLF authorised	165	125	187	477

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total number of low-flying sorties carried out over the United Kingdom in (a) 1991 and (b) 1992 calculated by (i) counting the number of sorties directly and (ii) the pre-1985 method of logging movements between low-flying areas.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The information requested is set out in the table:

	1991	1992
Number of sorties	127,400	131,464
The approximate number of sorties flown using the pre-1985 method	99,636	111,288

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of the total number of low-flying sorties flown over the United Kingdom in (a) 1991 and (b) 1992 was accounted for by (i) fast jets, (ii) light jet trainers, (iii) heavy propeller-driven aircraft, (iv) light propeller-driven aircraft and (v) helicopters.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The information requested is as follows:

Per cent.

Category	Proportion of sorties flown
Fast jets	58·13	55·90
Light jet trainers	7·53	5·34
Heavy propeller-driven aircraft	1·36	1·79
Light propeller-driven aircraft	3·35	5·13
Helicopters	29·63	31·84

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many breaches of low flying regulations were reported to the relevant authorities by the aircrew involved in (a) 1991 and (b) 1992.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of the total number of low-flying sorties flown over the United Kingdom in (a) 1991 and (b) 1992 was represented by (i) British military aircraft, (ii) the United States Air Force aircraft and (iii) other aircraft.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The information requested is as follows:

Operating authority	Proportion of sorties flown
	1991 Per cent.	1992 Per cent.
British military	83·9	89·0
USAF	14·7	9·4
Others	1·4	1·6

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Royal Air Force police personnel are currently employed on surveying potential new areas for low flying; and if he will make a statement on the criteria and method used by the Royal Air force police when surveying potential new areas for low flying.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There are no plans to change the basic structure of the United Kingdom low-flying system implemented in 1979. Two RAF Police senior NCOs are, however, occupied full time in carrying out a continuous review of the system to ensure that it remains properly reflective of current environmental and flight safety considerations.

Guards Officers

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the number of officers currently serving in the Guards, other than quartermasters, whose parents were members of socio-economic group 5 when the commission was made.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Jasmin plc

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what work has been carried out for his Department by Jasmin plc of Bulwell, Nottingham, on whether the tests required by his Department on nerve detectors were necessary; over what period the work was carried out; what was its cost; and what plans he has to compensate the company for that work.

Mr. Aitken: Over the last five years the Department has had many contracts with Jasmin, totalling over £10 million in value. The work has been primarily in the fields of chemical and vapour detection and fire control simulators. All tests required by the Department on nerve agent detectors have been necessary. As is our normal practice, payments will continue to be made for all work that has been properly completed in accordance with the terms and conditions of our contracts.

MoD Employees, Northern Ireland

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many people are employed by the Ministry of Defence in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Aitken: At 1 January 1993, the Ministry of Defence employed 2,878 full-time and part-time civil servants in Northern Ireland.

Submarine Refitting

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will name the consultants appointed by him to report on the proposals of the two royal dockyards for refitting submarines;

(2) what are the terms of reference of (a) the financial consultants and (b) the civil engineers, appointed to scrutinise the nuclear submarine refitting bids submitted by the royal dockyards;

(3) if he will publish reports prepared by the consultants assessing the rival bids for the nuclear submarine refitting programme.

Mr. Aitken: A range of specialist consultants have for some considerable time provided advice on future arrangements for warship refitting, chief among these being Coopers and Lybrand (financial and business advice), and, by sub-contracts to Coopers and Lybrand, Allot and Lomax (civil engineering) and the safety and reliability directorate of AEA Technology (nuclear safety). The various consultants provide assessments of, and advice on, those aspects of the proposals from the two Royal Dockyard contractors that fall within their area of expertise. Central to their advice is much commercially sensitive information as well as classified material; their advice will therefore not be published. We will, however, release as much information as possible, subject to the constraints of commercial confidentiality and security, once we have announced our proposals to the House.

Naval Dockyards

Mr. Gordon Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the results of the latest evacuation exercises at Rosyth and Devonport dockyards.

Mr. Aitken: Evacuation of the nuclear licensed sites within the Rosyth and Devonport dockyards is exercised annually. Both the most recent exercises were conducted satisfactorily. Evacuation procedures involving the wider dockyard workforce are tested periodically during nuclear accident response major exercises. The most recent such exercises took place at Rosyth in October 1989 and at Devonport in January 1993. In both cases the evacuations were completed satisfactorily.

Employees, Gosport

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his best estimate of the number of (a) uniformed service personnel, (b) his Department's civilian personnel and (c) defence dependent civilian personnel who are currently employed within the constituency of Gosport.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: At 1 July 1992, 5,849 service personnel and 3,904 full and part-time MoD civilian civil servants were based in the Gosport local authority area. No figures are available for the number of defence dependent civilians in the Gosport constituency.

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the appointments made by him as listed in "Public Bodies 1992" came within the categories set out in paragraphs 49 and 50 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers" and required a submission to the Prime Minister.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: One.

Service Secondments

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for defence how many service personnel have been seconded to outside organisations from each of the services in each of the last five years; if he will list these organisations and the roles undertaken; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: No Royal Navy or Army personnel have been seconded to outside civilian organisations in the last five financial years.

RAF personnel have been seconded to British Aerospace to provide specialist operational, maintenance and support services in connection with the company's contract with the Royal Saudi Air Force, as follows:

	Number
1988-89	107
1989-90	127
1990-91	116
1991-92	52
1992-93	36

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what guidelines cover terms and conditions of employment of service personnel who go on secondment to outside organisations; what insurance conditions apply to them; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The terms and conditions of employment of service personnel seconded to civilian organisations are normally set out in memoranda of understanding between my Department and the organisation concerned. My Department does not purchase insurance to cover service personnel. Those on secondment are in the same position as they are when serving with British forces; they are able to claim compensation from any party, including my Department and the organisation to which they are seconded, if they are injured due to the negligence of that party. In addition, they remain eligible for invaliding benefits payable under the armed forces pension scheme.

RAF Bases

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many man hours were spent on (a) search and rescue work and (b) national defence work at each of the RAF bases in 1992; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Information is not recorded on this basis.

Search and Rescue

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the number of callouts of the search and rescue service from RAF Leuchars in each month in 1992 and to date in 1993; on how many of those occasions search and rescue services were on standby at other RAF stations; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The information requested is given in the table:

RAF Leuchars—search and rescue callouts

Month	1992 Total number of callouts	1993 Total number[2] of callouts
January	9	20
February	11	15
March	9	[1]8
April	12
May	8
June	18
July	14
August	21
September	8
October	7
November	9
December	5
Total	131	[1]43

[1] Provisional figure only.
[2] To end February.

RAF search and rescue services are on standy 24 hours at other RAF stations with the exception of RAF Chivenor which is on standy during daytime only.

University Air Squadron

Mr. Martlew: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much the running of the University Air Squadron has cost in each of the last five years; where it has been based; how many students have benefited from it in each of the last five years; what fees are payable by the students; if any changes are planned in the future; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There are 17 university air squadrons (UAS) located around the United Kingdom and the headquarters is at RAF Cranwell. Responsibility budgets were not in operation prior to financial year 1991-92 and therefore figures are not available. Direct cash costs for financial year 1991-92 were £9·2 million and £8·8 million for financial year 1992-93; 484 students joined the UASs in 1988; 446 in 1989; 496 in 1990; 452 in 1991 and 500 in 1992. Students do not pay fees to the UAS organisation and attend under a bursary scheme or cadetships. Southampton UAS is to relocate from Lee on Solent to Boscombe Down with effect from 19 April 1993.

Non-proliferation Treaty

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the answer from the Foreign Secretary of 15 February, Official Report, column 33, if he will list those organisations his Department has received representations from, or initiated contact with, on the issue of the first preparatory committee meeting of the non-proliferation treaty.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My Department has regular contacts with a range of organisations which have an interest in the nuclear non-proliferation treaty.

Bosnia No-fly Zone

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what effect the imposition of the no-fly zone over Bosnia-Herzegovina will have on the safety and ability of British Forces serving with the United Nations in Bosnia-Herzegovina to carry out the role currently assigned to them.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: We regard the safety of our forces serving in Bosnia as a paramount consideration. All necessary steps will be taken to reduce to the minimum the risks which those forces face. Any change in that risk that could result from the imposition of the no-fly zone or could come from any other source is being taken into account in our planning.

Army Bases (Guards)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to replace service personnel guarding Army bases in the United Kingdom with Ministry of Defence police.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The mix of service personnel, MoD Police and MoD guard service used to protect MoD establishments, including Army bases, in the United Kingdom is kept under regular review. The mix at particular locations may change from time to time according to a variety of circumstances. Our aim is to provide the most cost effective and flexible manpower mix consistent with the level of security required at a specific location. There are no particular plans for a general redeployment of MOD Police to Army locations.

Surplus Departmental Properties

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received from housing associations relating to his policy regarding the sale of surplus MoD accommodation.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There is regular contact between the Department and housing associations interested in purchasing surplus MoD accommodation and a number of deals are currently being negotiated.

Iraq

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will seek to obtain from his United States counterpart a copy of the report, produced by the Central Intelligence Agency in July 1990, "Iraq's Growing Arsenal: Programs and Facilities".

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Yes.

Redundancies

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans the Government have to deal with those who will be homeless after being made redundant as a result of "Options for Change".

Mr. Archie Hamilton: A wide range of resettlement advice and support is available to all personnel leaving the services. A joint services housing advice office has been set up to provide advice and guidance on housing options, working closely with the local authorities and housing associations. Other measures include the sale or lease of surplus property to housing associations in return for the reservation of places for rent by service personnel, and the provision by the Housing Corporation of do-it-yourself shared ownership opportunities specifically for those leaving the services. Any redundee who has failed to find accommodation by the time he comes to leave the services, will be allowed to stay on temporarily in his married quarter provided it is not required for a service family.

ENVIRONMENT

Education Spending

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what correlation there is between the level of standard spending assessment per pupil and the league table of secondary school performance results.

Mr. Robin Squire: For English local education authorities, excluding the Isles of Scilly, in 1991-92 the SSA per pupil for 11 to 15-year-olds was negatively correlated with the corresponding proportion of pupils achieving five or more GCSEs at grades A to C. However, authorities with similar levels of SSA per head exhibit a wide variation of performance at GCSE.

Clarence Dock, Liverpool

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when negotiations were first entered into by the Merseyside development corporation to acquire the Clarence dock site, Liverpool, from Oldham Brothers Ltd., what offers have been made to the owners; when the offers were withdrawn; what estimated costs have been incurred by both sides; whether a public inquiry is planned; what is its estimated cost; what plans the Merseyside development corporation has for the site; what timetable it has for resolving this matter; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Robin Squire: Merseyside development corporation made a first resolution for a compulsory purchase order in April 1989. On 20 April 1989 MDC wrote to Oldham Brothers Ltd, inquiring whether it be prepared to enter into negotiations.

Information as to offers made to the owners is commercial-in-confidence. I shall write about that to the honourable Member.

Costs of approximately £11,000 have been incurred by MDC to date. The costs incurred by Oldham Brothers are not known.

A public inquiry is to commence on 22 June 1993 with an anticipated hearing of four days. The full cost will not be known until after the hearing, but the estimated cost excluding legal fees is approximately £10,000.

MDC has identified the site for a mixed use development to include low rise offices/studios, water-sports centre, residential appartments and local shops and services.

The former Clarence dock power station has been partly demolished for several years and the remaining structure is derelict, acting as a disincentive to inward investment and redevelopment. For these reasons MDC wishes to conclude purchase at the earliest opportunity, subject to agreement on price assessed on the basis of the land compensation code. If the compulsory purchase order is confirmed the property could be transferred to MDC in spring 1994. If compensation cannot be agreed, the lands tribunal may determine the compensation payable.

House Condition Survey

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has received regarding the publication of the house condition survey; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: Since work on the 1991 English house condition survey began in September 1991 10 questions have been asked in the House regarding its publication. In answer to a question on 26 March from the hon. Member for Fulham (Mr. Carrington) at column 739, the Minister for Housing and Planning announced the timetable for the publication of the results of this survey.

Used Tyres

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what new guidelines he plans to issue (a) to enable local authorities to more effectively deal with the problem of unregulated tyre dumps and (b) to ensure the safe disposal of used tyres so as to cause minimal effect on the environment.

Mr. Maclean: Local authorities already have powers under the Control of Pollution Act 1974, the Refuse Disposal Amenity Act 1978 and the Environmental Protection Act 1990 to prosecute those guilty of treating, keeping or disposing of tyres illegally. The maximum penalty for such an offence is imprisonment for up to two years and an unlimited fine.

Those with waste tyres to dispose of are also subject to the duty of care under section 34 of the 1990 Act, which requires that they can pass waste tyres only to a carrier registered with the waste regulation authority or to a licensed disposal facility. A breach of the duty of care is a criminal offence punishable, on conviction on indictment, by an unlimited fine.

My Department is currently involved with the EC priority waste stream project group on used tyres and in the course of this work will be considering all possibilities for achieving satisfactory disposal of used tyres.

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the Government's policy on the disposal of used tyres from its own car fleet.

Mr. Maclean: Used tyres from the Government car service are transferred for disposal to persons appropriately authorised for the purposes of the duty of care under section 34 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990.

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps are being taken with other EC countries to identify a common policy on the safe disposal of used tyres.

Mr. Eggar: I have been asked to reply.

An EC "priority waste stream" group, made up of all interested parties, including member states, has for the past two years been devising action plans to reduce the environmental impact of used tyres. The group, in which my Department has participated fully, is expected to complete its work by the end of the year and to propose targets and measures aimed at reducing the quantities of used tyres going for disposal and at promoting their re-use, retreading, and recycling throughout the Community.

Energy Savings Trust

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what local authority representation there is in the decision-making structures of the Energy Savings Trust.

Mr. Maclean: There is no formal local or central government representation on the board of directors of the Energy Saving Trust. In addition to the chairman, Lord Moore, the trust's board consists of two representatives from British Gas, two from the regional electricity companies and four independent directors, who have been chosen for their wide knowledge and experience, which they bring to bear in developing and directing the trust.

Harmful Substances

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will implement section 140 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990.

Mr. Maclean: Section 140 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 came into force two months after the Act was passed; the committee referred to in section 140(5) was established in July 1991 and several statutory instruments have been made using section 140.

Leases (Confidentiality Clauses)

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce legislation to make it illegal to include confidentiality clauses in leases; and what consideration is being given by the Director General of Fair Trading as to whether such clauses are regarded as being anti-competitive.

Mr. Baldry: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister for Housing and Planning on 31 March to my hon. Friend the Member for Bromsgrove (Sir H. Miller), Official Report, columns 293-94.

Housing Associations

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Members for Oldham, Central and Royton (Mr. Davies) and for Barrow and Furness (Mr. Hutton) of 24 March, Official Report, column 626, when he expects his Department to complete its assessment of the impact of the proposed reduction in average grant levels to housing associations to 55 per cent. in 1995-96 on averge weekly rents for housing association tenants.

Mr. Baldry: Our consideration of evidence put forward by the Housing Corporation, the National Federation of Housing Associations and others about grant rates in 1994-95 and beyond is continuing. Final decisions about grant rates for 1995-96 would not normally be taken until late 1994.

City Action Teams

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what effect the planned future expenditure in respect of the eight existing city action teams as published in his Department's annual report will have on the level of activity of the teams;

(2) what plans he has to wind up each of the eight existing city action teams; and on what date.

Mr. Robin Squire: The city action teams' main task is the co-ordination locally of the Government's programmes for our urban areas, including city challenge. Our expenditure plans will enable that work to continue. The Government are keeping urban needs under review, taking account of information derived from the 1991 census and other sources, and will consider the future of city action teams in the light of that.

City Challenge

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list, for each city challenge area, the most recent figures for (a) population, (b) area of geographical coverage, (c) number of residential dwellings, (d) unemployment rate, (e) the number of training places created since their inception and (f) the numbers completing training courses, by type of course.

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested is shown in the table. Data are not available to show numbers completing training courses.

Community Selfbuild Agency

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent meetings ministers in his Department have had with the Community Selfbuild Agency.

Mr. Baldry: I am not aware of any meetings in the past year.

Urban Land

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has on the proportion of land in urban use for each of the regions and counties in England; and what estimates there are for how this will change.

Mr. Baldry: Estimates of urban growth between 1981 and 2001 for counties and regions of England, and the proportion of land projected to be in urban use in 2001, are available from tables 1(a) and 1(b) in this Department's report "Rates of Urbanisation in England 1981-2001", published by HMSO in 1990, and available in the House of Commons Library.

London Government

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations his Department has had from outside bodies calling for a single strategic authority to oversee transport, land use and environment in London; and if he will list them.

Mr. Baldry: My right hon. and learned Friend has recently received representations from the Institute for Metropolitan Studies, from the London Chamber of Commerce and Industry and from the CBI London region transport task force, calling for some form of strategic body with responsibility for transport, land use and the environment in London.

Council Tax Debtors

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what safeguards exist against the forced sale of council tax debtors' property as a result of charging orders; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Robin Squire: A local authority cannot apply for a charging order if the outstanding debt is less than £1,000. The making of a charging order is at the discretion of the court. The court will consider all the circumstances of the case, including the personal circumstances of the debtor and whether any other creditors of the debtor would be likely to be prejudiced by the making of an order.

Enforcement of a charging order by sale is a separate step. In deciding whether an application to enforce a charging order should be granted the court may have to balance the interest of the creditor with that of members of the debtor's family. The court may also have regard to the size of the debt outstanding in relation to the value of the dwelling to be sold.

Under both procedures the debtor has an opportunity to attend court and make representations.

Freemasons

Mr. Cryer: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce a code of practice for local authorities to ensure that local government employees declare any membership of masonic lodges in a public register.

Mr. Robin Squire: We have no plans to introduce such a code. Terms and conditions of employment for local government officers are matters for local authorities as employers.

Manchester City Planning Officer

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations his Department has received from Manchester's city planning officer about concerns over circular 26/92; what reply he is sending; what action he is taking; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: The city planning officer has written to my Department following the demolition of the Tommy Ducks public house. That building was not listed as being of architectural or historic interest, nor was it in a conservation area; consents under the Planning (Listed Buildings and Conservation Areas) Act 1990 were therefore not required. The demolition of certain other types of building is subject to planning control under the Planning and Compensation Act 1991, section 13. Whether the demolition is subject to control depends on whether the building is either a dwelling house, or a building adjoining a dwelling house. The chief planning officer's view is that Government guidance on the interpretation of the legislation is unclear. I do not share that view, but it is inevitable that central guidance cannot deal with every eventuality and that cases must be considered individually by local planning authorities. The council concluded in this case that the building demolished was not one which fell within the category of buildings subject to planning control; and it would not be right for me to comment on that decision. My officials have replied to the chief planning officer along these lines.

Homelessness

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his Department's latest estimate of the number of homeless people in London, divided in (a) couples, (b) families with children and (c) single people.

Mr. Baldry: Local authorities in England report the number of households for whom they accept responsibility to secure permanent accommodation under the homelessness provisions of the Houseing Act 1985 in their quarterly P1 return.

The latest estimate for London appears in table 1 of "Households found accommodation under the homelessness provisions of the 1985 Housing Act 1985: England. Statistics for the fourth quarter 1992", a copy of which is in the Library.

Information on households with dependent children and households in the other priority need categories and young single people in non-priority need can be found in percentage terms in table 3 of the same publication. The reported information does not identify couples and older single people and my Department has no estimates.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the total number of people in London in (a) bed-and-breakfast accommodation, (b) hostels for the homeless and (c) sleeping rough for the latest available date and 1982.

Mr. Baldry: Information is reported quarterly to the Department—half yearly before 1984—on homeless households for whom local authorities have accepted responsibility to secure permanent accommodation, under the homelessness provisions of the Housing (Homeless Persons) Act 1977 and part III of the Housing Act 1985.

Estimates of the number of such households in bed-and-breakfast and hostel accommodation in London at 31 December, including some on whom inquiries had not yet been completed, are as follows:

	Bed-and-breakfast	Hostels (including women's refuges)
1982	1,150	1,270
1992	3,820	3,550

In the 1991 census some 1,197 households were enumerated as sleeping rough in London on the night of 21-22 April. No count of persons sleeping rough was made in 1982.

Petrol and Diesel Fuel

Mr. Purchase: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of the additional costs faced by local authorities resulting from the increased duties on petrol and diesel fuel and on authorities which have budgeted to spend at their limit; and what additional resources he is making available to such authorities in order to prevent cuts in services.

Mr. Robin Squire: In reaching his decisions on the local government finance settlement, my right hon. and learned Friend took into consideration the expected level of inflation and the anticipated increases in pay and prices. Responsible local authorities make allowances for foreseeable expenditure arising during a financial year when setting their budgets, and we regard the effect of mineral oil excise duties on local authorities as constituting such expenditure. We do not therefore consider it appropriate or necessary to make additional resources available.

Ozone Depletion

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give the results of stratospheric ozone depletion measurement over the United Kingdom and the northern hemisphere during March; and if he will make a statement on the significance of the results.

Mr. Maclean: Measurements of total ozone made at Lerwick and Camborne during March were between 10 and 13 per cent. below the long-term average for the month. This compares with measurements in February over 20 per cent. below the long-term average which I reported in my answer to the hon. Member for Islington, South and Finsbury (Mr. Smith) on 11 March. These results reflect conditions over a wide area of the northern hemisphere where ozone levels have been affected by meteorological conditions and possibly the impact of the Mount Pinatubo volcanic eruption, as well as any contribution from ozone depleting substances.

The risk of an Arctic ozone hole developing this year is now rapidly diminishing as the stratosphere warms up. The reductions in ozone this year have not resulted in any increase in ground level ultraviolet radiation which is within the range expected for the time of year. There are no implications for health. While we rely on stratospheric ozone to absorb the potentially damaging ultraviolet radiation from the sun, radiation is naturally very low at this time of year, even on clear days, because of the low angle of the sun. Analysis of measurements made this year will be included in the next report of the Department's stratospheric ozone review group, due to be published in the autumn.

Hazardous Waste

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the principles of the Basel convention on the control of transboundary movements of hazardous wastes and the control regime under the EC Waste Shipments Regulation.

Mr. Maclean: The United Nations Environment Programme Basel convention on the control of transboundary movements of hazardous wastes and their disposal entered into force in May 1992. The convention provides a framework for states to ban imports of hazardous waste. Shipments are not allowed between parties and non-parties without specific agreements. Where shipments do take place the convention provides a global system of environmental controls.

The convention does not distinguish between shipments of waste for final disposal and for recovery. In March 1992 OECD countries agreed a decision on the control of transfrontier movements of wastes destined for recovery operations. This decision, which is compatible with the convention, placed wastes on one of three lists—green, amber and red—according to the degree of hazard. Green list waste will only be subject to normal commercial controls. Red list waste will be subject broadly to the same controls as waste for disposal under the convention. Amber list waste will be subject to a more streamlined procedure.

The OECD controls have been incorporated in the EC waste shipments regulation agreed at Council in October under the United Kingdom presidency. The regulation will implement the EC's obligations under the Basel convention. The regulation's control system, like that of the convention, is based generally on the principle of prior informed consent.

The regulation will enable member states to ban imports of waste for disposal from other member states and EFTA countries, but there is an exemption for states which do not produce hazardous waste in a sufficient quantity to make the provision of specialised disposal facilities economic. Imports for disposal will also be allowed from other countries which are parties and from countries with which the Community or member states have bilateral agreements. Such imports will be permitted only where exporting countries do not have and cannot reasonably acquire the technical capacity and necessary facilities in order to dispose of waste in an environmentally sound manner. Exports for disposal will be prohibited, except to EFTA countries which are parties.

Shipments of recoverables will continue between OECD countries and to and from non-OECD countries which are parties and/or have concluded bilateral agreements with the EC. All bilaterals involving exports of hazardous—amber and red list—waste outside OECD will include safeguards to ensure environmentally sound management. Exports will be prohibited where a third country refuses to accept them. Before green list waste is exported outside OECD the country of destination will be asked to state whether it will accept the shipments without going through amber or red control procedures. Where the country of destination regards a green list waste as hazardous, shipments of that waste will be subject to the appropriate control regime.

The Environment Council in December agreed the instrument of approval of the convention on behalf of the EC. Council agreed that the EC and member states would as far as possible ratify the convention simultaneously. Under the convention there is a 90-day period between ratification and becoming a party. The waste shipments regulation dictates the legal timetable for ratification. Ratification of the convention by the EC and member states on 6 February 1994 would enable the EC and member states to be parties on 6 May 1994, when the regulation applies. Council on 23 March agreed that the EC would ratify no later than 6 February. In the Government's view ratification any earlier would produce a legal vacuum between the date when the EC and member states became parties and the date of application of the regulation. Ratification on 6 February is therefore the legally correct and practical solution.

Countryside Stewardship Schemes

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many of the countryside stewardship scheme sites have been visited by Ministers or officials of his Department; if, for each site, he will give the name, location, date and rank of personnel involved; whether each site involved payments for additional access for the public; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 26 March 1993]: Information is not kept in the form requested. The scheme is administered by the Countryside Commission. The Secretary of State, Ministers and officials from the Department have visited a number of countryside stewardship sites since the scheme launch in June 1991.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list by county all the 1992 countryside stewardship scheme sites for which access payments are made; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 26 March 1993]: A list in the form requested is being prepared. I will send it to the hon. Gentleman and will place copies in the Libraries of both Houses as soon as it is ready. Full details of each site will be sent to parish councils and will be included in new, improved county registers which will be sent to user groups and highway authorities within the next few months. Copies of the registers will be held at the Countryside Commission regional offices and headquarters and will be available on request. In addition, the Countryside Commission has reviewed its approach to signing and waymarking sites in light of first year experience. More robust and informative map boards will be put in place by June for all sites agreed in the first two years of the scheme. Paths and bridleways will be waymarked. The Countryside Commission is also considering the production of information leaflets to publicise sites further.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many of the linear access routes under the countryside stewardship scheme agreements made in 1992, involving additional access payments, are contiguous with pre-existing rights of way; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 26 March 1993]: Over 100 linear access routes included in 1992 countryside stewardship agreements or agreement offers are linked to existing public rights of way. No payment is made for existing rights of way under the countryside stewardship scheme.

Private Finance Initiative

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps his Department has taken to implement the private finance initiative announced in the autumn statement on 12 November 1992 and in the Treasury private finance guidance published on 9 December 1992.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 1 April 1993]: Private finance already makes a contribution of about £2 billion a year to the achievement of the Department's objectives, notably in housing and urban development.

Private finance is an important element in our housing programme. Housing associations, which are the main providers of new social housing, are required to raise part of their development funds from the private sector; our objective is to increase the proportion of private funding in order to obtain the maximum benefit from the public resources available. In addition, some £1·5 billion of private finance has been raised as a result of large-scale voluntary transfers of local authority properties to housing associations; this finance is being used to improve existing stock, to repay debt and to develop new social housing. We continue to encourage investment in the private rented sector, and to consider how to maximise the use of private sector funding and expertise in meeting housing need.

The Department continues to look for new opportunities to use private finance. An initial list of 21 new urban development projects, has been identified on which proposals from interested developers and financial institutions have been invited. A copy has been placed in the Library. Further projects are in the pipeline.

On 23 March I met the chairman and senior executives of a number of leading development companies to discuss private finance; and I have held discussions with merchant banks and City financial institutions to explore ways in which projects could be financed using private finance.

In addition the Department will shortly publish guidance on how greater use could be made of private finance in the implementation of its policies and programmes.

Water Meters

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the number of domestic prepayment water meters installed in each water company area.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 1 April 1993]: I understand that the number of domestic prepayment water meters which have been installed to date by water companies is as follows:

	Number
Bristol Water plc	10
North West Water Ltd.	20
Severn Trent Water Ltd.	44
Southern Water Services Ltd.	70
South Staffordshire Water plc	30
Wessex Water Services Ltd.	51

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list, by water company area, the numbers and percentage of households with domestic water meters; and what the equivalent figures were for (a) 1979, (b) 1983 and (c) 1987.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 1 April 1993]: Current estimates are shown in the table: similar information for earlier years is not available centrally.

Radon Gas

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to inform the public of the dangers arising from radon gas concentrations in dwellings; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 29 March 1993]: In March 1991 the Government launched a publicity campaign in Cornwall and Devon, the counties where the greatest numbers of homes above the action level of 200 Bq m^{-3} are found, to inform householders of the potential health risk posed by radon. This campaign was extended to Northamptonshire and Derbyshire in October 1992. The leaflet "Radon in Houses" explains what radon is, provides information on assistance available and offers a free measurement service to householders. It was delivered to all homes in the affected areas of these counties, and to other appropriate outlets—libraries, citizens advice bureaux etc. Public service announcements were made available to local radio. As a result, radon concentrations in some 100,000 homes have already been measured and 11,000 householders, whose homes have radon levels above the action level, have been advised on the further action which should be considered.

SCOTLAND

Mentally Ill (Care)

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the average cost of caring for a mentally ill person in (a) a mental illness hospital, (b) a general hospital psychiatric unit, (c) a four-to-six-bed group home, (d) a staffed hospital and (e) in the patient's own home.

Mr. Stewart: The average cost per day of caring for a mentally ill inpatient in 1991-92 was as follows:

	Amount (£)
Mental Illness Hospital	74·20
General Hospital Psychiatric Units	108·90
Staffed Hospitals	77·60

Information on the costs of care in four-to-six-bed group homes and in patients' own homes is not collected centrally. The figure for staffed hospitals is the average cost for all hospitals which provide inpatient care for mentally ill persons.

Hill Livestock Compensatory Allowance

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many farmers are in receipt of hill livestock compensatory allowance payments in (a) severely disadvantaged areas and (b) disadvantaged areas in each county in Scotland containing less favoured area land.

Sir Hector Monro: The information is set out in the table. It is based on payments under the 1992 hill livestock compensatory allowances scheme.

Livestock Auctions

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the turnover in terms of value, or livestock auctions for each county in Scotland; and how many auctions account for that value in each county.

Sir Hector Monro: The information requested is not held centrally.

Water Services

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money has been (a) allocated and (b) spent on capital works programmes for water services in each year since 1987-88 in relation to the compliance with European Community regulations and directives; what delays have taken place in efforts to achieve EC standards on (i) drinking water, (ii) bathing water and (iii) disposal of sewage sludge to land-based sites; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 1 April 1993]: Separate capital allocations are not made for specific parts of authorities' water and sewerage programmes. Projects related to meeting the requirements of EC directives come within the overall water and sewerage programme. Allocations and the outturn expenditure on water and sewerage are given in tables 1 and 2 respectively.

Virtually all drinking water improvement programmes are on target. Detailed information is available in the report "Drinking Water Quality in Scotland 1991", publication of which I announced in reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Aberdeen, South (Mr. Robertson) on 10 February. A copy of the report is available in the Library.

A £100 million programme of sewerage improvements has been drawn up for those bathing waters, arising from the EC bathing waters directive. The improvements are designed to enable compliance by 1997.

The predominant land-based disposal route for sewage sludge is to agricultural land. A recent survey has demonstrated that EC requirements are being attained. As a result of the EC urban waste water treatment directive which, among other things, provides for the ending of sea-based disposal by, at the latest, 1998, the quantity for land-based disposal will rise very steeply. There have been no delays in implementing this directive which was adopted only in 1991.

Hong Kong

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what efforts he is making to attract inward investment to Scotland from Hong Kong; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 26 March 1993]: Locate in Scotland, through the work of its officials in the United Kingdom and overseas, promotes Scotland as a location for inward investment from the Asia Pacific region including Hong Kong.

Written Answers to Questions

Wednesday 14 April 1993

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Contracting-out

Mr. Michael: To ask the Attorney-General whether he has sought external advice on whether the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981 and the acquired rights directive apply to any central or local government businesses that have been contracted out during the last 10 years; and whether any Department will be liable to compensation.

The Attorney-General: It is not the normal practice to disclose whether the Law Officers have advised on a matter. Likewise, the Law Officers would not normally disclose whether they had advised in conjunction with other counsel or had requested that external advice be obtained.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Court Listing

Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is his policy in respect of whether a company which is conducting a court listing field trial under the supervision of his Department should be allowed to sell dedicated computer software and equipment to trial participants as a condition of participation in the trial.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The role of the Lord Chancellor's Department is to co-operate in the court listing field trial through provision of listing information in electronic form. Overall supervision is the responsibility of the General Council of the Bar which is sponsoring the trial. The Department has no formal relationship with the trial participants.

Mr. Oppenheim: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department whether it is intended that one company only will be licensed to distribute court listing information after the current field trials of a computerised court listing system have ended.

Mr. John M. Taylor: At present the Lord Chancellor's Department has no plans for licensing companies to distribute court listing information. In the event of any such licensing being arranged, there is no reason in principle why this should be limited to a single company.

Legal Aid

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the amount of the legal aid budget (a) distributed to applicants and (b) spent on administration in the most recent year for which figures are available.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The net amount paid to solicitors and barristers in 1991-92 in respect of work done for legal-aided clients was £906 million. The administrative costs incurred by the Legal Aid Board in the same year amounted to £40·7 million. In addition, some administrative costs will have been incurred by the courts in respect of those parts of the legal aid scheme—chiefly criminal legal aid—for which they are responsible. These costs cannot be identified separately.

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the application of his plans for legal aid to people on income support.

Mr. John M. Taylor: People receiving income support are presently eligible for free legal aid, advice and assistance and assistance by way of representation, and this will continue to be the case under the regulations which came into force on 12 April.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many of the appointments made by the Lord Chancellor as listed in "Public Bodies 1992" came within the categories set out in paragraphs 49 and 50 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers" and required a submission to the Prime Minister.

Mr. John M. Taylor: Three of the current appointments made by the Lord Chancellor to public bodies listed under his Department in "Public Bodies" were made after a submission to the Prime Minister.

Landlord Mortgages

Mr. Battle: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department whether he has any plans to bring forward legislation as proposed by the Law Commission in its November 1991 report "Transfer of Land: Land Mortgages".

Mr. John M. Taylor: No. The Law Commission's report on "Transfer of Land: Land Mortgages", Law Com. No. 204, contains extensive proposals for reform, which are still being considered by the Government.

Child Abuse

Mr. French: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department in how many court proceedings concerning child abuse video-taped evidence has been admitted.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The provision for the giving in evidence of a video recording of an interview with a child witness in certain specified proceedings is contained in section 54 of the Criminal Justice Act 1991. This provision came into force on 1 October 1992. Since that date there have been nine cases in the Crown court where applications under section 54 of the Criminal Justice Act 1991 to admit a pre-recorded video interview with a child witness have been granted. In two of these cases the defendant pleaded guilty and, therefore, the video tapes were not required in court.

Mr. French: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list those courts where video-taped evidence has been (a) admitted and (b) refused in child abuse cases.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The provision for the giving in evidence of a video recording in certain specified proceedings is contained in section 54 of the Criminal Justice Act 1991. This provision came into force on 1 October 1992. Since that date pre-recorded video-taped interviews with child witnesses have been admitted and used in evidence in proceedings in the Crown court at Cardiff, Croydon, Newcastle and Wolverhampton. According to centrally collected statistics, no applications to admit video-taped evidence in child witness proceedings have been refused.

ENVIRONMENT

Caravan Sites

Mr. Temple-Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he intends to make a statement on the response to his consultation paper, "Reform of the Caravan Sites Act 1968"; when he expects to announce his conclusions; and in what form he will announce them.

Mr. Baldry: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to my right hon. Friend the Member for Woking (Sir C. Onslow) on 31 March 1993, Official Report, column 291.

Contaminated Land

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Halesowen and Stourbridge (Mr. Hawksley), Official Report, 24 March, columns 663-64, on contaminated land, what additional resources he will make available to local authorities in support of their statutory powers to locate and deal with contaminated land while the new interdepartmental review group he announced today conducts its study.

Mr. Maclean: Local authorities already receive general support through revenue support grant for their expenditure on environmental services. This includes expenditure in connection with their duties to identify contaminated land and to ensure that remedial measures are taken where necessary. The Government give additional support to authorities by means of supplementary credit approvals for investigation and remedial works on authorities' own sites or where it is impracticable to recover treatment costs from those responsible.

Home Insulation Grants

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many home insulation grants have been given in the last five years; and what was their value.

Mr. Maclean: There have been several different grant schemes for home insulation over the last five years.

The home efficiency scheme provides grants for loft, tank and pipe insulation, draughtproofing and energy advice. Since its inception in January 1991, some 387,000 grants have been provided at a cost of £55·6 million. Under the house renovation grant system, minor works assistance grants are available for thermal insulation. Since their introduction in April 1990, 11,300 homes have been treated at a cost of £3·8 million. Insulation is also sometimes installed as part of wider works under house renovation grants.

The energy grant scheme provided for draughtproofing materials. Between April 1988 and December 1990 some 360,000 homes were treated at a cost of £25·65 million. The homes insulation scheme provided some 185,800 grants at a cost of £19·4 million between April 1988 and March 1990.

Enterprise Zones

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will estimate the total cost of the enterprise zone scheme in terms of rate relief and capital allowances in each year since 1981 at current prices.

Mr. Redwood: Approximate costs in 1992-93 prices are given in the table.

Year	Capital Allowances[1] £ million	Rates Relief[2] £ million
1981-82	35	9
1982-83	35	19
1983-84	25	23
1984-85	50	33
1985-86	85	42
1986-87	120	57
1987-88	95	73
1988-89	195	82
1989-90	160	106
1990-91	170	90
1991-92	—	80

Notes:

[1]The method of calculating capital allowance costs is currently being reviewed by Inland Revenue and final estimates will not be available until the summer. The estimated costs incurred in 1991-92 are not yet known.

[2]The cost of rate relief in 1990-91 and 1991-92 has been estimated, following the introduction of the Uniform Business Rate.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what schemes for enterprise zones are in the process of preparation and adoption but not yet designated;

(2) what plans he has to invite local authorities or corporations to draw up schemes for enterprise zones in the near future.

Mr. Redwood: Proposals for up to three new enterprise zones were announced by the President of the Board of Trade on Monday 29 March, Official Report, columns 30-31.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the planned winding-up dates of all current enterprise zone schemes.

Mr. Redwood: The information is as follows:

London Buses

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions his Department has had on the effect of the age of the London bus fleet on air quality in the capital.

Mr. Maclean: Emissions from heavy-duty diesel vehicles, including buses, were the subject of the 15th report of the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution (Command 1631) published in September 1991. The Government's response was published in October 1992. Among other things, this refers to measures already taken to improve the in-service testing of vehicles and the introduction of a telephone hotline to enable the public to report smoky vehicles. The response also stated that improvements would be made to the Department of Transport guide for maintaining roadworthiness. These would require operators to make regular engine management and maintenance checks in order to retain satisfactory emissions performance. Steps would also be taken to ensure that the public is made more aware of the existence of the telephone hotlines. These publicity measures will be implemented in the near future.

Homelessness

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are his latest estimates of (a) the cost to a local authority of housing a homeless family for a year in a property which has been leased from a private owner, and (b) the average annual rent charged to homeless families for the occupation of a property which a local authority has leased from a private owner, (i) in London and (ii) in the rest of England.

Sir George Young: The information is not available centrally and my Department has no estimates.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the number of homeless people in the Greater London area on 31 March.

Mr. Baldry: Local authorities in England report the number of households for whom they accept responsibility to secure permanent accommodation under the homelessness provisions of the Housing Act 1985 in their quarterly P1 return.

The latest estimate for London appears in table 1 of "Households found accommodation under the homelessness provisions of the 1985 Housing Act 1985: England. Statistics for the fourth quarter 1992", a copy of which is in the Library.

Mortgages

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what survey he has carried out of the extent to which mortgage lenders do not make loans available on property of a specific type or in a specified area; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: No such survey has been carried out by my Department.

Rents to Mortgages

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what measures he has taken to prevent properties which are the subject of rent-to-mortgage arrangements being used as collateral for loans.

Sir George Young: Purchasing under rents to mortgages will normally be financed by borrowing and an advance from an approved lending institution to fund the purchase price will take priority over the charge which secures the landlord's share. The purchaser will be free to borrow for other purposes on the security of the property, but such advances will take priority only if the landlord consents. It will be required to consent if the advance is for works to the property or another approved purpose.

Rough Sleepers

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish the responses he has received to the consultation paper on the future of the rough sleepers initiative.

Sir George Young: Recipients of this discussion paper were not advised that responses would be published and I have no plans to do so. We are considering carefully some 90 responses we have received, and I hope to announce a strategy for the rough sleepers initiative 1993-96 shortly.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many people were resident in the severe weather shelters at the point of closure; and how many have (a) returned to sleeping on the street as a result of the closures and (b) been offered accommodation on 31 March.

Sir George Young: Under the Government's £96 million rough sleepers initiative we have provided funding of £1·5 million for this year's winter shelter programme, which at its height provided 400 extra bedspaces in nine winter shelters in central London. The purpose of the winter shelter programme was specifically to provide shelter for people in central London who would otherwise sleep rough over the winter months. The shelters closed, as planned, at the end of March.

At 31 march some 145 of the 400 places were still in use. Around 100 people had other accommodation to move on to and at least 10 people had refused offers of further assistance.

My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Housing and Planning undertook to make these figures available in the Official Report during the debate on affordable housing on 1 April.

Housebuilding, London

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the number of (a) council houses and (b) private houses built in the Greater London area in each of the last three years.

Mr. Baldry: Estimates are shown of the total numbers of housebuilding completions by sector in Greater London for 1990 to 1992. Housing associations are now the main providers of new housing for the social sector.

Year	Private enterprise	Housing associations	Local authorities	Total
1990	13,100	2,100	1,900	17,000
1991	10,800	2,500	700	14,000
1992[1]	10,100	3,600	100	13,800

[1] Estimates for 1992 are provisional.

Regional Arts Boards

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will list by regional arts board areas the contributions made by each named local authority in England towards Arts Council spending in their areas.

Mr. Redwood: The information is not available centrally.

Council Rented Houses

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the present policy of the Government towards the building of local authority rented dwellings.

Mr. Baldry: The provision of new social housing is now mainly the responsibility of housing associations, with local authorities increasingly concentrating on the management of their existing stock and on their broad enabling role.

Sellafield

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many names were on petitions received from the United Kingdom during the public consultation period for the proposed new Sellafield discharge authorisation which were (a) in favour of the proposal and (b) opposed to the proposal;

(2) how many letters were received during the public consultation period for the proposed new Sellafield discharge authorisation which were (a) in favour of the proposal and (b) opposed to the proposal; and if he will detail in each case how many were from (i) the United Kingdom and (ii) overseas.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 1 April 1993]: My Department has received approximately 80,000 responses, including a number of petitions following the public consultation on the proposed new Sellafield discharge authorisation. Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food have not as yet finished their report on the consultation which provide the details the hon. Member requests. When the report is completed it will be made available to the public. I expect to receive the report by the end of April; this is later than I reported to the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent (Mr. Smith) on 15 February.

Devon Structure Plan

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many months' delay there was in preparing the Devon county structure plan, third alteration; how many months' delay there has been since the public consultation took place because of his Department's uncertainty; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 2 April 1993]: The consultation draft of the third alteration to the Devon county structure plan was published in October 1990 and the alteration was formally submitted to the Secretary of State in May 1991. An examination in public of selected matters arising on the alteration took place in March-April 1992. The panel which conducted the examination has since submitted its report and its recommendations are being considered. The report will be made public when the Secretary of State's proposed modifications are published.

Air Quality

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the number of times the hourly and daily averages of concentrations of sulphur dioxide, nitrogen dioxide and carbon monoxide and ozone in the atmosphere have exceeded the safety thresholds set by EC directives 92/72/EEC, 89/427/EEC, 88/76/EEC, 84/360/EEC and the Air Quality Standards Regulations 1989 in the cities of Belfast, Edinburgh, Cardiff, London, Birmingham, Bristol, Leeds, Liverpool, Newcastle upon Tyne, Leicester, Southampton and Kingston upon Hull since January 1991.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 2 April 1993]: Limits provided in EC air quality directives for smoke and sulphur dioxide and nitrogen dioxide have been breached in the United Kingdom since January 1991 only in the case of smoke and sulphur dioxide in Belfast, for which there was a temporary derogation until 31 March this year. Directive 92/72/EEC sets public information levels rather than limit values, for ozone. Monitoring for ozone in cities other than London is at an early stage, but preliminary tests suggest that the levels specified are not likely to be exceeded in urban centres. EC legislation does not prescribe any limit values or thresholds for ambient concentrations of carbon monoxide.

Environment Council

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Reading, West (Sir A. Durant) of 26 March, Official Report, columns 737-39, what votes were taken and what was the position of each country in the European Community's Environment Council on 22 and 23 March.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 2 April 1993]: No formal votes were taken.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

School Leavers

Mr. Pope: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps he has taken to promote the use of the records of achievement of school leavers in the recruitment policies (a) in his Department and (b) in other Government Departments.

Mr. Robert Jackson: The Cabinet Office in London, which includes the Office of Public Service and Science, is one of the employers involved in the Central London Education Business Partnership. Students of schools involved in the partnership are able to submit their London records of achievement when applying for jobs. The LRA, together with other information, is taken into account in the selection process.

My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer is responsible for recruitment policy, including educational qualifications, in other Government Departments.

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Janner: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps he has taken to recruit women, members of ethnic minorities and disabled people, respectively, in top grades of employment at the Duchy of Lancaster and at the Office of Public Service and Science.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Duchy of Lancaster is an equal opportunities employer. Appointments are made on grounds of merit and of suitability for the post, regardless of an individual's sex or race. There are currently no members of ethnic minorities or disabled people holding senior positions. The Duchy has employed a disabled senior grade in the past.

Recruits to the senior grades of the civil service, as to any grade in the civil service, are selected on merit on the basis of fair and open competition, unless one of the exceptions permitted under the Civil Service Order in Council 1991 applies. Various steps have been taken by the Civil Service Commissioners to aid recruitment from all sectors of the community, including:

extending links with institutions of higher education;
equal opportunities training for all those involved in selection;
using validated selection procedures.

The Office of Public Service and Science is part of the Cabinet Office, which has signed up domestically to Opportunity 2000, and is working towards achieving the civil servicewide benchmark of increasing the proportion of women in the top three grades to 15 per cent. or more by the year 2000. The Department continually seeks to encourage the employment of people from the ethnic minorities and those with disabilities.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when the Duchy of Lancaster and the Office of Public Service and Science last conducted surveys of (a) ethnic origins and (b) the number of women among their employees; when they next plan to do so; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Duchy of Lancaster employs only 37 people. Consequently, it is not necessary to ask employees to declare their ethnic origins, nor to conduct surveys of the number of women employees.

The Office of Public Service and Science is part of the Cabinet Office. A survey of the origins of all non-industrial civil servants was completed in 1988. The Cabinet Office introduced a computerised personnel database in 1991. All staff were given the opportunity to update their own entries, which include sections on ethnic origins. There are no firm plans to conduct further surveys. The sex of employees is identified in staff records.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many and what percentage of officers in each grade from 1 to 7 and overall in the Duchy of Lancaster and in the Office of Public Service and Science are (a) women, (b) from ethnic minorities and (c) disabled people.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Duchy employs a total of 37 people, of whom 15—41 per cent.—are women. Of the 37 employees one is registered as a disabled person.

The Office of Public Service and Science forms part of the Cabinet Office. The figures for women employed in the Cabinet Office, including its executive agencies, are as follows:

Grade (and) equivalents)	Women	Total	Per cent. Women
1	0	5	0
2	2	8	25
3	1	25	4
4	0	3	0
5	16	41	39
6	19	45	42
7	63	264	24
Overall	1,330	2,634	50

The ethnic monitoring programme was carried out on a voluntary basis and did not extend to the Cabinet Office's agencies. Of those who responded, 62 people—2·3 per cent. of the total—chose to register as non-white. One of these people is at grade 7 level.

The Cabinet Office's figures on staff with disabilities include only those who have chosen to register as disabled. Twenty-eight people—1 per cent. of the total—are so registered. None is at grade 7 level or above. The Cabinet Office employs other staff with disabilities who have chosen not to register.

Travellers

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement on the application of the information provisions in the citizens charter to consultation with gipsy communities.

Mr. Waldegrave: The citizens charter calls on all public services regularly and systematically to seek customers' views about the quality of service provided and priorities for improvements. Consultation should involve all client groups, including, where appropriate, gipsy communities.

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many of the appointments made by him as listed in "Public Bodies 1992" came within the categories set out in paragraphs 49 and 50 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers" and required a submission to the Prime Minister.

Mr. Robert Jackson: The Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster makes appointments to the following non-departmental public bodies included in "Public Bodies 1992": the Civil Service Appeal Board; Agricultural and Food Research Council; Economic and Social Research Council; Medical Research Council; Natural Environment Research Council; Science and Engineering Research Council; and the Advisory Board for the Research Councils.

In keeping with the provisions of paragraph 50 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers", the Prime Minister is consulted about the appointment of the chairman of the research councils, and about the appointment of the chairman and independent members of the Advisory Board for the Research Councils.

Appointments to the Civil Service Appeal Board do not come within the categories set out in paragraphs 49 and 50 and appointments are not required to be submitted to the Prime Minister.

EC Science Funding

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what has been the total amount of funding for science research coming to the United Kingdom from European Community sources in each of the last three years for which information is available; and how much of these funds has gone to the research councils.

Mr. Waldegrave: [redacted] information on total funding for science research coming to the United Kingdom from European Community sources is not available in the form requested. I refer the hon. Member to the data given in tables C and D of my answer of 18 February, Official Report, columns 300-04. This gives the total funds awarded to United Kingdom research organisations over the period 1987-91 under the EC framework programme. These funds, which exclude sums relating to fusion and JRC, amounted to £444·62 million—586·90 mecu translated at the rate £1 = 1·32 ecu.

The funding of research council institutes from EC sources in the financial years 1989-90 to 1992-93 is as follows:

	1989-90 £'000	1990-91 £'000	1991-92 £'000	1992-93[3] £'000

NATIONAL FINANCE

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many of the appointments made by him as listed in "Public Bodies 1992" came within the categories set out in paragraphs 49 and 50 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers" and required a submission to the Prime Minister.

Mr. Portillo: Of the bodies for which the Chancellor is responsible that are listed in "Public Bodies 1992" only appointments to the Top Salaries Review Body require a submission to the Prime Minister.

European Investment Fund

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 10 February, Official Report, columns 631-32, if he will list projects that are to be financed through the European investment fund and the total level of the loan facilities to be provided.

Mr. Nelson: The United Kingdom, together with other EC member states, is currently taking forward the administrative and legal procedures necessary to establish the European investment fund. Individual projects will not be put forward for financing until the fund is established. It is envisaged that the EIF will provide guarantees on loans to trans-European networks and to small and medium-sized enterprises within the Community. The total amount of lending which the fund may guarantee is under consideration.

European Monetary Institute

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether a decision has been taken on the location of the seat of the European Monetary Institute in accordance with article 13 of the protocol on the European Monetary Institute of the treaty on European union, p188, Cm. 1934; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nelson: No decision has yet been reached as to the location of the seat of the European Monetary Institute, but we continue to press the strong market case for locating both the EMI and the future European central bank in the United Kingdom.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Haselhurst: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer by what procedures contract award procedures applied by Government Departments already implementing Council directive 92/50/EEC may be reviewed and challenged.

Mr. Portillo: Government Departments and other public bodies have no obligation to comply with directive 92/50/EEC until it comes into force on 1 July 1993 and equally until then there will be no procedures under which their decisions can be challenged and reviewed.

Public Sector Borrowing Requirement

Mr. Jopling: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assumptions for economic growth, inflation and interest rates were built for each year until 1997-98 into his estimates for the public sector borrowing requirement and other economic trends, published at the time of his Budget.

Mr. Portillo: Table 2.2 of the 1993-94 "Financial Statement and Budget Report" provides illustrative assumptions for output, inflation and money GDP growth for each year until 1997-98. These assumptions are set out in the table. It is not our practice to publish assumptions for interest rates.

VAT

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make it his policy to charge a positive rate of VAT on a proportion only of each domestic electricity bill based on the proportion of the national electricity consumption generated from fossil fuels.

Sir John Cope: No.

Recruitment Policies

Mr. Pope: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he has taken to promote the use of school leavers' records of achievement in the recruitment policies of Government Departments.

Mr. Portillo: As from 4 May, Departments and agencies will be given delegated responsibility for setting recruitment criteria for entrants to all but their senior grades. When the delegation is made, guidance will be issued to encourage the use of individuals' records of achievement as a valuable source of information, both of their academic and vocational qualifications and their attainments in other areas.

Civil Service Relocation

Mr. Janner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many civil service relocations have been agreed (a) to Nottingham and (b) Leicester, in each of the last five years.

Mr. Portillo: Since March 1988 departmental Ministers have announced the following relocations or locations to Nottingham and Leicester:—

Year	Posts	Department	Designation
1988	180	Land Registry	Leicester
	8	OFFER	Nottingham
1989	120	Transport	Nottingham
	1,800	Inland Revenue	Nottingham
1990	125	Inland Revenue	Leicester

Mr. Janner: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what account is being taken on decisions on civil service relocations of the quality of Leicester's transport links and of its need for investment.

Mr. Portillo: The key factors in deciding whether and where to relocate civil service work are achieving best value for money and operational efficiency. Under the Treasury's guidance on relocation of work initiative, Departments considering relocating consult the Department of Trade and Industry about possible locations to ensure that the Government's regional and inner city policies are taken into account.

Business Rents

Mr. Battle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many tenancies established under business expansion scheme funding contain clauses stating that on the fifth anniversary of the contract of assured tenancy the rent will increase by more than 25 per cent.

Mr. Dorrell: This information is not available.

Finance (No. 2) Bill

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make available to hon. Members the customary notes on the Finance (No. 2) Bill's clauses.

Mr. Dorrell: Yes. Notes on clauses are today being placed in the Vote Office and in the Library of the House of Commons.

PRIME MINISTER

Green Minister

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Prime Minister how many times the green Ministers nominated from each Government Department have met as a group during the past year.

The Prime Minister: It is a fundamental principle of our approach to green issues that environmental considerations are taken into account in all policies and at every level. Green Ministers are charged with integrating environmental considerations into the strategy and policies of their own Departments. They have met once in the past year. Mechanisms for co-ordinating policies between Departments include the annual White Paper process and official networks. There is a separate Ministerial Committee on the Environment, EDE, to handle major cross-departmental issues.

Irish Republic

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Prime Minister what representations he plans to make to the Irish Government regarding the present policy in the Irish Republic of bail for terrorists, following the murder of Special Constable Glenn Goodman and the attempted murder of Police Constable Sandy Kelly.

The Prime Minister: We have made clear to the Irish Government the very serious implications of judicial decisions in extradition cases in which bail has been granted. The Irish Government have informed us that, while decisions on bail applications in individual cases are a matter for the courts, Irish law relating to bail is governed by the provisions of the constitution. We will continue to express our concerns on this subject, with a view to a wider area of discretionary judgment being afforded to the judiciary in such cases, for the greater protection of the public.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Prime Minister what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the level of security co-operation with the Irish Republic following the murder of Special Constable Glenn Goodman and the attempted murder of Police Constable Sandy Kelly; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: Security co-operation between the RUC and Garda Siochana is at a high level. British and Irish Ministers are determined to maximise the effectiveness of co-operation and will continue to seek ways to enhance it.

Nuclear Test Veterans

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make it his policy that all files relevant to the claim for compensation by United Kingdom nuclear test veterans will be released; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: Much information about the British nuclear test programme is already in the public domain and further files are being reviewed for possible release in due course. Dose records and medical data on each participant are available to the individual concerned. Successive Governments have confirmed that appropriate safety precautions were taken at the time of the tests to protect the participants from harm.

Service Pensions

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to amend levels of service pensions to take account of the effect of pay restrictions in force from 1976 to 1978.

The Prime Minister: The retired pay or pensions awarded to personnel of the armed forces whose service ended during the period of pay restraint from 1976 to 1978 were calculated in accordance with the rules of the armed forces pension scheme in force at the time. We have no plans to modify the awards that were made.

Market Testing

Mr. Michael: To ask the Prime Minister which businesses have been identified for market testing by more than four Government Departments since January 1992; and what percentage of the work force in each Department is (a) female, (b) part-time and (c) clerical or administrative grade.

The Prime Minister: Departments are responsible for their own market testing programmes and definitive information is not held in the form requested. However, the information available centrally indicates that the following broad areas are included in the programmes of more than four Departments.

Accountancy
Estate and Building Management
Information Technology
  Hardware Maintenance
  Software Design and Maintenance
Internal Audit
Legal Conveyancing
Library Services
Office Services
Payroll
Record Storage and Retrieval
Recruitment
Reprographic
Security Guarding
Statistical Surveys
Training
Typing

The information on staff numbers cannot be given except at disproportionate cost, but statistics on staff, including breakdowns by gender, grade and department, are contained in "Civil Service Statistics 1992 Edition", published by Her Majesty's Treasury.

Egypt

Mr. Alton: To ask the Prime Minister what steps he took during his recent discussions with President Mubarak, of Egypt to raise the issue of human rights abuses and curtailment of religious practices among Coptic Christians in Egypt.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 2 April 1993]: I discussed a wide range of subjects with President Mubarak, including the situtation in Egypt. He is determined to maintain law and order in Egypt in the interests of all Egyptians. The position of the Copts was discussed with the Egyptian Foreign Minister who accompanied President Mubarak.

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Prime Minister what representations he has made to President Mubarak about the Egyptian authorities' refusal to redress the grievances of the United Kingdom company WENA Hotels.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 2 April 1993]: The Foreign Secretary raised the question of WENA Hotels with the Egyptian Foreign Minister during President Mubarak's recent visit to London, urging the Egyptian authorities to encourage the Egyptian party to the dispute to go to arbitration as soon as possible. Our embassy in Cairo is following this up.

Bosnia-Herzegovina

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Prime Minister what recent communications he has received from Dr. Radovan Karadzic regarding the current situation in Bosnia-Herzegovina; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 2 April 1993]: Dr. Karadzic wrote to me on 31 March about the peace process under the international conference on the former Yugoslavia and about the ban on flights in the airspace of Bosnia-Herzegovina. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs is replying to Dr. Karadzic, stressing the urgent need for a peaceful settlement and the importance of the Bosnian Serbs signing the peace package. He is also emphasising the further pressure which will be put on the Serbs if they refuse to sign.

WALES

Environmental Digest for Wales

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he plans to take to improve the quality and currency of data in his Department's next Environmental Digest for Wales.

Mr. David Hunt: The digest is reviewed on an annual basis. The edition published last month contained 18 new tables and four new diagrams with an improved format being adopted for all tables. I shall certainly consider possible additions and improvements to the publication to be produced next year.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many copies of his Department's Environmental Digest for Wales 1992 have been published; at what cost; and what steps have been taken to distribute the digest to interested organisations.

Mr. David Hunt: A total of 430 copies of the latest "Environmental Digest for Wales" have been printed at a cost of £3,800. The cost to the Welsh Office and other organisations of preparing material for inclusion in this publication cannot be identified separately.

Publicity for the digest is arranged through advertisements, brochures, and the issue of a statistical press notice which coincides with the issue of the publication.

Mink Farms

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many mink farms are currently licensed in Wales; and in which counties they are located.

Mr. David Hunt: None.

EDUCATION

Further Education

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will give the cost of publishing and distributing his speech given on 9 December 1992 on further education in its printed form as a leaflet; and how many copies were printed.

Mr. Boswell: Five thousand copies of the leaflet were printed at a cost of £420. The cost of the initial distribution was £144.

Teachers' Pay

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will publish the data from the Secondary School Staffing Survey 1992 showing teachers' pay scales and allowances by length of teaching experience; what assessment his Department has made of the data in respect of updating the conclusions in paragraph 28 of the Statistical Bulletin No. 18/91, in respect of the difference in promotion rates of men and women; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Boswell: The table shows the distribution of full-time secondary school teachers by pay scale and allowance, length of teaching experience and sex. It is derived from the 1992 secondary school staffing survey which covered a representative sample of teachers in maintained secondary schools in England.

The proportion of male full-time secondary teachers paid as heads, deputies or higher allowance holders—D or E—is 37 per cent., compared with 16 per cent. of women. The proportion of men in these posts is therefore 2·3 times greater than the proportion of women; compared with a ratio of 2·6 in 1988. After standardising by length of teaching experience, the ratio becomes 1·9, compared with a standardised ratio of 2·0 in 1988. Excluding those teachers who have taken a career break, by restricting the analysis to those whose age minus their years of teaching experience comes to less than 25, the standardised ratio becomes 1·7, the same as in 1988.

Decisions on promotion to head, deputy head and higher allowance posts are taken by local education authorities and, under LMS, by the governing bodies of schools with delegated budgets. The Department's guides for school governors stress the importance of equal opportunities issues.

The most recent figures for new promotions to head and deputy head show that 35 per cent. of such promotees in the secondary sector were women; since women hold 28 per cent. of existing head and deputy head posts—reflecting previous promotions, going back over several years—the outlook for the future of women in the profession looks more encouraging.

National Curriculum

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans he has to implement a code of ethics in the national curriculum.

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend is consulting about his proposal to require schools to include within their prospectus a statement on schools' ethos and values, including details of the way in which they meet their duty to secure the moral, spiritual, social and cultural development of their pupils, through the national curriculum, through religious education, and more generally.

Local Management of Schools

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education whether consultation with a view to making new or revised local management of schools schemes for schools in local education authorities in England which are to undergo a structural reorganisation following the Local Government Commission recommendations will be undertaken before or after such a reorganisation; under which statutory provisions such consultations will take place; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Forth: It is too soon to assess the impact of local government reorganisation on LMS; it will differ from area to area, depending on the Local Government Commission's recommendations on structure.

Nursery Education

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what are the latest figures his Department has on the number of three and four-year-olds in each London borough; and how many of them are in nursery schools and classes.

Mr. Forth: The information requested is given in the following table.

Estimated 3 and 4 year old population and pupil numbers and participation rates in maintained nursery and primary schools in London at January 1992

National Curriculum English Order

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education when he will publish proposals for a new National Curriculum English Order; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Patten: With my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales, I am publishing tomorrow proposals for a revised English curriculum, as the basis for extensive consultation. They are based on the recommendations for attainment targets and programmes of study made in the report of the National Curriculum Council, which will be published with the proposals.

As required by the Education Reform Act, I am asking the National Curriculum Council to conduct the consultation exercise in England. The schools, education authorities, professional organisations and other bodies consulted will have until 30 July 1993 to submit their views and make representations to the NCC. A parallel consultation will take place in Wales. Subject to further advice from the NCC and the Curriculum Council for Wales, my right hon. Friend and I will then publish in November a draft order for further consultation.

Copies of the report, the proposals, and my letter to the chairman of the NCC will be placed in the Library of the House.

Education Staff

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list for each local education authority in England (a) the number of teachers employed and (b) the number of non-teaching staff employed; and if he will express each figure as a percentage of the total staff of each local education authority.

Mr. Boswell: The first column of the table shows the full-time equivalent number of teaching staff employed in the LEA-maintained nursery, primary and secondary schools sector in England at January 1992. The second column shows the number of full-time equivalent education support, administrative and clerical staff employed in LEA-maintained nursery, primary and secondary schools in England at January 1992. Information for other types of non-teaching staff, such as school meals or premises-related staff or LEA central administrative staff, is not centrally recorded. It is therefore not possible to express the figures in the table as a percentage of total staff in the schools sector.

Pupil Exclusions

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list the statutory provisions governing the position of parents whose children do not attend school because they are permanently excluded.

Mr. Forth: Under section 36 of the Education Act 1944, parents of children of compulsory school age are responsible for ensuring that they receive education, whether by attendance at school or otherwise. The fact that a pupil has been permanently excluded does not release parents from this obligation. Failure to comply can lead to prosecution under section 40 of the 1944 Act. Early application should therefore be made to a neighbouring school or, if necessary, arrangements made for the child to be educated otherwise than at school, for example, in a unit. The Government have announced their intention to place local education authorities under a duty to provide education otherwise than at school where necessary to meet a pupil's individual needs: amendments to the Education Bill will be tabled shortly.

Data Protection Act 1984

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many certificates have been signed under the terms of section 27 of the Data Protection Act 1984 for each year since 1987.

Mr. Boswell: There have been no certificates issued by this Department under section 27 of the Data Protection Act 1984 since 1987.

Medical Students

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will require medical schools to publish the number of applicants each year to medical school by ethnic origin and sex and the number who are eventually successful in their application.

Mr. Boswell: We have no plans to require medical schools to publish this information.

Education Expenditure

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if he will list for each local education authority, in the last year for which figures are available, (a) the budgeted expenditure and (b) the standard spending assessment for (i) under-fives, (ii) five to 11, (iii) 11 to 16 and (iv) post-16 education.

Mr. Forth: Reliable information on local education authorities' budgeted expenditure is available nationally only at the level of their overall education budgets and is taken from their own returns to the Department of the Environment. For the purpose of determining standard spending assessments, the education component of standard spending, net of specific grants, is divided into five sub-blocks—under fives, 5-10, 11-15, 16+, and other education. The figures for local authorities' education budgets for 1992-93, together with the figures for their overall education standard spending assessments, are set out in the table.

For several reasons, it is necessary to be cautious when drawing conclusions from the figures. First, the budget figures were provided at the beginning of the 1992-93 financial year. Outturn expenditure may well be different. Local education authorities may also not recognise the budget figures because their budget returns have been adjusted by the Department of the Environment to make them comparable with their education standard spending assessments. Secondly, the standard spending assessment system is a mechanism for distributing grant between authorities. Because authorities have discretion to decide their own spending priorities between and within services, the sub-blocks are in no sense spending targets. Thirdly, the sub-blocks notionally include provision for children in the relevant age groups in special schools, related central services and related functions such as home to school transport which do not have to be delegated to schools. Therefore, they are not comparable with the budgets of primary or secondary schools.

Notes:

1. Information on budgeted expenditure is taken from Local Authorities' returns to the Department of Environment on forms RA92/93 and RA(SG)92/93. Figures have been repriced to outturn.
2. The education budgets for Inner London authorities have been adjusted to take account of the education grant for Inner London authorities, and make them comparable with education SSAs. Inner London education grants are paid to provide, through the support of expenditure on education, transitional help to local tax-payers in Inner London boroughs and in the City of London where the authorities inherited responsibility for the education service from the Inner London Education Authority.
3. Figures have been rounded to two decimal places.

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many of the appointments made by him as listed in "Public Bodies 1992" came within the categories set out in paragraphs 49 and 50 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers" and required a submission to the Prime Minister.

Mr. Boswell: Five of the appointments listed in "Public Bodies 1992" required clearance with the Prime Minister.

Pupil-teacher Ratios

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is the average pupil-teacher ratio in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in England.

Mr. Forth: In January 1992 the pupil:teacher ratios in maintained primary and secondary schools in England were 22·2:1 and 15·8:1 respectively.

Truancy

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what are the latest figures for truancy; and if he will make a statement on measures to reduce its incidence.

Mr. Forth: Truancy data will be published in local school performance tables for the first time this autumn. We will then have a clearer understanding of the levels of truancy nationally. My right hon. Friend looks to schools to make maximising attendance one of their key tasks. Unauthorised absences should be pursued with vigour, bringing in LEA education welfare officers as appropriate. A major boost to the fight against truancy has been given by the Government's new reducing truancy initiative under the grants for education support and training scheme for 1993-94. Projects to a total value of some £9 million are being supported in over 70 LEAs.

Grant-maintained Schools

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many schools within Greater London have opted out of local authority control; and how many have applications being considered by his Department.

Mr. Forth: A total of 86 schools in Greater London are operating as self-governing (GM) state schools. My right hon. Friend has indicated that he is minded to approve a further two schools for GM status. Applications from 26 Greater London schools are under consideration in the Department.

Special Needs Education

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many students at teacher training colleges are on courses which include training for special needs education.

Mr. Boswell: My right hon. Friend's criteria for the approval of teacher training courses require that by the end of their courses all students should have developed the capacity to identify pupils with special educational needs or learning difficulties. They should also have an understanding of the ways in which such pupils' potential can be developed.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Regional Services

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the effectiveness of the regional services organised by his Department.

Mr. Leigh: One of the Department's objectives is to ensure that its policies respond to the needs of different regions and areas with special difficulties. It has, to this end, a network of eight regional offices which are responsible for delivering a wide range of business support schemes and other activities, including work in support of inward investment, the application of European structural funds, action for cities and liaison with business support organisations for small firms. The regional offices are also the Department's main channel of communication with business, monitoring business developments and helping to shape the Department's policies for business. Their work is subject to regular monitoring against targets, ensuring that they contribute effectively to the Department's objectives. Performance targets for the delivery of the main business support schemes are published in accordance with citizens charter principles.

Direct Selling

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade in how many instances trading standards officers took action through the Department of Trade and Industry to enforce the regulations regarding direct selling.

Mr. Leigh: Trading standards officers have no enforcement powers under part XI of the Fair Trading Act 1973. Nevertheless trading standards officers around the country regularly draw the Department's attention to schemes that may be in breach of the legislation.

European Community (Contracts)

Sir Michael Grylls: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the progress made in the enforcement of the opening up of public contracts in the EC.

Mr. Needham: Enforcement of the EC rules on procurement in the public and utilities sector is largely a matter for the EC suppliers and contractors who benefit from the directives. There are associated directives which require member states to establish review systems under which suppliers can seek legal remedies if harmed or at risk of harm by a breach of EC law. The associated directives also require member states to provide information in case of clear and manifest infringement of the EC rules so that the Commission can consider whether to bring proceedings against the member states under article 169/EEC. The implementation of the directives is monitored closely by the Commission. In the United Kingdom, the EC rules on the procurement of supplies and works and the associated provisions on remedies have been given effect in SI 91/2679, SI 91/2680 and SI 92/3279.

Employees (Religious Affiliation)

Mr. William Ross: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the annual cost of monitoring the religious affiliation of the employees of the Post Office.

Mr. Leigh: The Post Office is unable to disaggregate the costs of monitoring the religious affiliations of its employees in Northern Ireland from the overall costs of complying with the Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Act 1989.

Aerospace Industry

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has received from British companies involved in aerospace and aero engines concerning future Government support for the development of leading edge materials technologies.

Mr. Heseltine: My officials are constantly in touch with the aerospace and aeroengine companies in the United Kingdom, discussing a wide range of issues, including future Government support through the Department's civil aircraft research and demonstration programme. My Department is grant-funding essential pre-competitive work in advanced materials technology, both in metallics and non-metallics, for the aeroengine and airframe manufacturers.

Business Development, Greater London

Mr. Cox: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action he intends to take to support and encourage the small business sector in the Greater London area; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heseltine: My Department provides substantial help to small businesses in London through the overseas trade services, consultancy initiative and technology support available through the south-east regional office. The small firms loan guarantee scheme is available throughout London. In 1993-94 my Department will be providing financial support through the training and enterprise councils in London for a wide range of information, advice and other support to small firms.

Mr. Cox: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the value of inward investment for industrial development in the Greater London area in 1992; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heseltine: The information cannot be provided in the form requested by the hon. Gentleman. I will write to him.

Strategic Technology

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when his Department received the national strategic technology acquisition plan prepared by his Department's aviation committee; and if he will make a statment.

Mr. Sainsbury: The national strategic technology acquisition plan for aeronautics was formally presented to my Department on 4 November 1992.

Postal Services

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he proposes to ask the European Commission to consult the public and the European Parliament on any postal services directive under article 100(a) of the treaty of Rome.

Mr. Leigh [holding answer 2 April 1993]: Directives issued by the European Commission under article 100(a) of the treaty of Rome are subject to consultation with the European Parliament. There is also a consultation process with interested parties during the negotiation period of such directives and before their implementation.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the Government's policy on whether direct mail should be part of the European Community's postal service obligation.

Mr. Leigh [holding answer 2 April 1993]: The Government are of the view that direct mail should be encompassed within the definition of a universal service obligation.

TRANSPORT

Railway Investment

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will show for each year since 1963 the level of railway investment, excluding track renewals, expressed in 1991-92 prices.

Mr. Freeman: Figures for expenditure on railway investment excluding track renewals are shown in the following table.

Year	£ million 1991-92 prices
1963	745
1964	821
1965	863
1966	729

Search and Rescue

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport pursuant to his answer of 31 March, if he will list the areas within his responsibility not covered by the SAR coverage proposals in (a) day time and (b) night time; and if he will set out the steps he intends to take to improve cover.

Mr. Norris: The helicopter criteria for day time and night time coverage is set out in the defence open government document on the "Future Provision of Royal Air Force Search and Rescue Helicopters", annexes A to D, a copy of which is in the House of Commons Library. The Department of Transport has no plans to change its contribution to SAR helicopter coverage.

Road Traffic, London

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the level of road traffic flows in London in each year to 2010; what are the methods of calculation; and if he will separately identify the flows for private cars.

Mr. Norris: The Department has not made estimates of road traffic flows for each year for 2010. However, recent trends indicate that car traffic and hence all motor traffic could grow by less than 1 per cent. per annum in the central area and by between 1 and 2 per cent. per annum in other parts of London.

Travelcard

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many of all bus, rail and underground journeys within London are made using the travelcard; if he will list all three both in figures and as a percentage; how many of all bus, rail and underground journeys are made by concessionary fares in London and how many of all bus journeys are made using bus passes.

Mr. Norris: Estimates provided by London Transport and by British Rail for 1992-93 are:

Type of ticket	Bus		Underground		British Rail
	Journeys (millions)	Per cent.	Journeys (millions)	Per cent.	Journeys (millions)	Per cent.
Travelcard	334	30	533	72	245	55
Bus Pass	203	18	—	—	—	—
Concessionary Fares	252	22	28	4	2	0·5

Notes:

1. The British Rail figures cover 1 March 1992 to 27 February 1993: they include all journeys in the Network SouthEast area; separate figures for journeys within London are not available.
2. The figures for concessionary fares are for the local authorities' concessionary fares scheme.

Road Transport, London

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he is taking to speed up road transport in London; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: Government policies for road traffic in London are not designed to increase traffic speeds significantly but rather to ease congestion so that traffic moves freely and safely, with more reliable journey times. These policies include the development of priority, red, routes, improved traffic control systems, the use of cameras to monitor speed and red light offences, stricter parking enforcement, and road improvements to remove bottlenecks, facilitate orbital movement and provide access to docklands and east London.

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what road improvement and new road building schemes are currently being undertaken in Greater London; what is their cost; and if he will list them.

Mr. Norris: The following major road improvement schemes on trunk roads for which the Secretary of State is responsible are being undertaken currently in the Greater London area.

		£ million
A406	Hangar Lane to Harrow Road	116·60
A40	Long Lane Junction Improvement	43·75

A further £9·5 million has been spent during the financial year 1992-93 on a rolling programme of minor trunk roads scheme. Local authorities in London were provided with transport supplementary grant support of £51 million cash grant towards their schemes. Their programme for 1992-93 included the following major schemes. Each scheme has a total cost in excess of £1 million, and grant is 50 per cent. of accepted expenditure.

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what road improvement and new road building schemes are planned in London for the next financial year; what is their cost; and if he will list them.

Mr. Norris: The following major road improvement schemes on trunk roads for which the Secretary of State is responsible are due to start work in the 1993-94 financial year.

		£ million
A406	East of Falloden Way to Finchley High Road	42
A406	Dysons Road/Hall Lane	63
A406	M1 Junction 1 Improvement	5
A13	West of Heathway to Thames Avenue	54
A13	Thames Avenue to Wennington	58
A13	Blackwall Tunnel/Cotton Street	8
A13	Butcher Row Junction	1
A12	Hackney—M11 Contract 2	62
A12	Hackney—M11 Contract 4	60
A40	Long Lane to West End Road	4

There is further rolling programme of minor trunk road schemes costing about £12 million. In addition, there is a transport supplementary programme of about £150 million of local authority schemes.

In addition to continuing work on schemes started in earlier years, the following schemes are due to start in 1993-94.

New TSG Major Schemes Accepted for 1993-94

Authority	Scheme	Total Cost £000
Croydon	A232 Chepstow Road/Fairfield Road/ Barclay Road	6,100
Hillingdon	A437 Bournes Bridge Hayes	1,150
Hounslow	A315 Hounslow Town Centre Urban Relief Road	8,247
Merton	A219 Wimbledon Town Centre/ Alexandra Road Junction Improvement	5,775
Newham	A11 Stratford Gyratory Modifications	1,500
Waltham Forest	A503 Forest Road/Blackhorse Road Junction	1,100

Public Service Vehicle Test

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information his Department holds disaggregated by individual operator for the annual PSV test conducted at his Department's testing stations.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The testing of both heavy goods vehicles and public service vehicles is conducted by the vehicle inspectorate, on behalf of the Secretary of State. The inspectorate keeps a database on individual vehicle test histories. While the operator of each vehicle is normally included in each test history file, as the test applicant, this information is not, at present, cross-referenced to provide PSV test data for individual operators. Individual test results are released by VI only to other enforcement bodies or the owner of the vehicle.

Severn Bridge

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will relocate the sign board on the M4 on the eastern side of the Severn bridge welcoming motorists to England to its correct geographical position.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: I have no proposals to move the sign.

The sign is located immediately to the east of the toll plaza. This is the first place where it can be safely and practically sited on the English side of the border.

London Commuter Services

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what studies his Department has undertaken on the effect of international rail services on London's commuter services; and if he will publish them.

Mr. Freeman: No such studies have been undertaken by the Department of Transport as international rail services are a matter for British Rail. British Rail gave an assurance to Parliament during the passage of the Channel Tunnel Act that commuter services would not be adversely affected by the introduction of international trains. British Rail has every intention of standing by that assurance.

Nuclear Materials (Transport)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when his Department issued a licence for the use of truck cargo heavy duty II vehicles by the Ministry of Defence to transport nuclear materials under the International Atomic Energy Agency Safety Series No. 6 Regulations 1985, as amended in 1990.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: No such licence is required.

London Buses

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many passenger journeys were made on London Buses Ltd. for each year since 1979.

Mr. Norris: The available information is shown in the table. The figures for London Buses Ltd. exclude passengers carried on tendered services, as this information is not readily available. Figures for London Transport bus services comprise all services operated by London Buses Ltd., tendered and non-tendered, together with tendered routes operated by other companies.

Passenger journeys

Millions

	London Buses Ltd. (non-tendered services)	London Transport bus services
1979	1,234	1,234
1980	1,183	1,183
1981	1,079	1,079
1982	1,039	1,039
1983	1,089	1,089
1984-85[1]	1,153	1,153
1985-86	1,139	1,146
1986-87	1,094	1,158
1987-88	1,072	1,211
1988-89	985	1,206
1989-90	920	1,183
1990-91	846	1,180
1991-92	745	1,149

[1] Since 1985-86 London Transport have put an increasing number of routes in their bus network out to tender.

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of London buses are beyond their current design life; and how many will be beyond their design life by 1996.

Mr. Norris: Some 13 per cent. of London Buses Ltd.'s vehicles are currently beyond their original design life. The majority of these are the popular Routemaster vehicles, with an average age of 28 years. There is a refurbishment programme under way to extend the life of 500 Routemaster vehicles into the next century at a cost of £10 million. All vehicles are regularly maintained to ensure their reliability and continued safe operation. It is not possible to forecast the position for 1996.

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much bus mileage the managing directors of London Buses Ltd. subsidiaries expect to be lost as a result of his Department's proposals for deregulation; and what efforts he has made to maintain the current level of mileage.

Mr. Norris: It is not for me to comment on the views of the managing directors of the subsidiaries of London Buses Ltd.

Upon deregulation we shall establish a central bus authority to ensure that routes which are socially necessary but which are not operated commercially are provided on a subsidised basis. As a guide, deregulation outside London has led to an increase of 20 per cent. in bus mileage.

Thames (Transport Potential)

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the Government's planned working party to explore the Thames transport potential expects to hold its first meeting; if he will name its members; and when it expects to make its first report.

Mr. Norris: I am planning to hold the first meeting of the working group next month. In addition to officials from my Department and the Department of the Environment, the working group will comprise Mr. David Jeffrey, chief executive of the Port of London Authority, Mr. Dick Barker representing London First, Mr. Eric Sorensen, chief executive of the London Docklands development corporation, Mr. Robin Clement of the London Planning Advisory Committee and Mr. David Bayliss of London Transport. I hope to publish a report towards the end of 1993.

Vehicle Inspectorate

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement updating his proposals for the Vehicle Inspectorate.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Dundee, East (Mr. McAllion) on 10 February, Official Report, column 659.

Bus Engines

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what fiscal incentives are planned for the bus industry following deregulation to encourage investment in new, cleaner engines.

Mr. Norris: Fiscal incentives are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer to consider. Large diesel engines of the type fitted to London buses will have to conform with the requirements of EC directive 91/542/EEC in respect of emissions, the first stage of which came into force in July 1992.

Development Control Guidance

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place in the Library details of all transport considerations in development control guidance notes.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Development control guidance notes include in them relevant transport considerations. Copies of such notes are placed in the Library of the House.

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many of the appointments made by him as listed in "Public Bodies 1992" came within the categories set out in paragraphs 49 and 50 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers" and required a submission to the Prime Minister.

Mr. Norris: Appointments of chairmen of the three nationalised industries listed on page 70 of "Public Bodies 1992"—British Rail, the Civil Aviation Authority and London Transport—came within the category set out in paragraph 50(ii)(a) of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers" and required submissions to the Prime Minister. None of the other appointments listed came within categories requiring a submission to the Prime Minister.

Thames Crossing

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what considerations have been taken into account by his Department on the need for the east London river crossing, in the light of his Department's proposals for a further Thames crossing between Poplar and Greenwich;

(2) what bodies have already been consulted by his Department over proposals for the further Thames crossing between Poplar and Greenwich;

(3) when the consultants employed by his Department to look at the proposed Thames crossing between Poplar and Greenwich are expected to report; and when the proposals will go out to public consultation.

Mr. Norris: The Department's consultants have reported on their study into a third crossing of the River Thames at Blackwall. The Department has since consulted on an informal basis the London boroughs of Greenwich and of Tower Hamlets and the London Docklands development corporation about the study's findings. It has had similar informal consultation with British Gas because of its wide-ranging Port Greenwich development proposals on its lands at Blackwall peninsula. A public consultation exercise is planned for later next month, and detailed arrangements will be announced shortly.

The need for the east London river crossing, fully debated at public inquiries in 1985-86, is not diminished by the possibility of a third crossing at Blackwall. It is required to provide a missing strategic link in the trunk road system by completing the extension of the North Circular road from the A13 to the A2.

Heavy Goods Vehicles

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many heavy goods vehicle drivers have been killed in 1990-91, 1991-92 and 1992-93.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: There were 55 heavy goods vehicle drivers killed in personal injury road accidents in 1990 and 50 were killed in 1991. A figure for 1992 is not available yet.

MOT Diesel Smoke Test

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received concerning the introduction of the MOT diesel smoke test.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: There has been much support for emissions checking during roadworthiness tests, although there has been concern that the diesel smoke test can cause damage to engines which have not been properly maintained in accordance with the manufacturer's recommendations. That is why we have temporarily suspended the test.

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether all examiners and testers authorised for the purpose of carrying out MOT tests on diesel-powered cars will be required to have access to on-site diesel smoke meters.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Yes.

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which individuals and organisations he consulted when drawing up smoke meter specifications and test procedures for use in the MOT diesel smoke test; and what was their response.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The Department consulted representatives of the vehicle and equipment manufacturers about the smoke meter specification and a much wider group of organisations about the test procedure, including representatives of vehicle users and operators, local authority associations, the garage trade and environmental groups. The response to consultation on the smoke meter specification was of a technical nature. Respondents to the proposal to introduce the check, and the associated test procedure, supported this environmental initiative although some concern was expressed about a slight risk of engine damage, which was reflected by the Department in advice to MOT testing stations on how to minimise the risk.

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 16 February to the hon. Member for Stoke on Trent, North (Ms Walley), Official Report, column 151, when he hopes to reinstate MOT diesel smoke tests by meter.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The Department is currently investigating reports that the smoke test has caused damage to some engines and, although it would be premature to give a firm date, I hope that the test can be reinstated later in the year.

Passenger Rail Services (Finance)

Mr. Keith Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the franchise director will have responsibility from 1 April 1994 for making grants out of the public service obligation to all passenger rail services; and what assessment he has made out of the implications for British Rail of that transfer of responsibility.

Mr. Freeman: The Government intend that the franchising director should from 1 April 1994 assume responsibility for all subsidy to rail passenger services in Great Britain including those which continue to be provided by British Rail. We are discussing the details of implementation with the board and the franchising director-designate.

Air Transport Operators' Licences

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the travel companies which failed to renew their ATOL licence by 5 pm on 31 March; and what steps he has taken to protect holidaymakers from the consequences of this.

Mr. Norris: The Civil Aviation Authority, which administers the air travel organisers' licence, ATOL, system, carries out an annual review of all ATOL holders. Details of travel organisers which did not have their ATOL renewed by 31 March 1993 are given in the lists, which were published by the CAA on 1 April. The lists cover travel organisers which have applied for renewal but which had not then fulfilled the necessary conditions and those which have not applied for renewal.

Inclusion in the list of travel organisers which have applied for their licences to be renewed does not necessarily mean that the CAA has doubts about an organiser's financial resources. The authority has agreed arrangements where necessary for other ATOL holders to provide cover on a temporary basis until the organisers concerned are able to fulfil the conditions for renewal of their own licences.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Foie Gras

Mr. Burden: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he is taking to press for an EC ban on foie gras.

Mr. Soames: The Government are committed to seeking improvements in welfare standards and the use of humane production methods throughout the Community at every suitable opportunity. A European Parliament resolution is under consideration which would recommend a ban on force feeding of animals in the Community.

Set-aside Land

Mr. Onslow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to encourage farmers to apply for exemption from 1 July cutting requirements on rotational set-aside land; what assessment he has made of the environmental damage which this requirement will otherwise cause; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: It is open to any farmer to apply for an exemption from any of the set-aside management rules, including the cutting requirement, on environmental grounds. The arable area payments scheme explanatory booklet explains how to do this. The booklet also gives general advice on how to manage set-aside land to achieve environmental benefits.

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on restrictions on the spraying of chemicals to reduce noxious weeds on set-aside land in the United Kingdom; and in particular whether similar restrictions are imposed upon farmers in other EC countries.

Mr. Curry: The management rules for 1992-93 allow the application of non-residual herbicides by spot treatment or with a wick applicator on set-aside land. Any farmer can also seek permission to apply herbicides by other methods in order to control severe infestations of weeds. The management rules in other member states vary. Most include restrictions or a complete ban on the use of herbicides on set-aside land.

Dog Poisoning

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 2 March, Official Report, column 77, about the death of a pet dog through a suspected poisoned carcase, if he will inform the hon. Member for Taunton of the outcome of his inquiries into a second such suspected poisoning in the same area on or around 20 March.

Mr. Soames: Yes.

Mink Farms

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many mink farms are currently licensed, by county, in England.

Mr. Soames: The information requested is as follows:

	Number
Northumberland	1
Lancashire	9
West Yorkshire	2
Staffordshire	1
Suffolk	2
Hampshire	1
Isle of Wight	1
Cornwall	1

Comfrey

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what consultation period was permitted for consumers and users of comfrey tablets and capsules to assess the relevant toxicological reports, prior to the withdrawal of these products.

Mr. Soames: My hon. Friend the Minister for the Environment and Countryside, the hon. Member for Penrith and The Border (Mr. Maclean), announced in March 1991 that the Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment and the Food Advisory Committee would undertake a review of various herbal ingredients including comfrey. During the course of the COT's review of the toxicity of comfrey a number of organisations, including the National Institute of Medical Herbalists, made submissions to this Department and the Department of Health. The advice from both committees to me on the completion of their reviews was unequivocal. I could not, therefore, allow a further period for consultation before acting to secure the withdrawal of those comfrey products containing the highest concentrations of toxic alkaloids.

Potatoes

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for Workington of 23 March, Official Report, column 863, if he will place in the Library all information he has had made available to him or his officials concerning the payment of subsidies both direct and indirect paid by national Governments and the European Commission to potato processors and producers in the European Community in the last three years.

Mr. Curry: I am not aware that any information has been made available in the way the hon. Member suggests.

Under EC regulation 866/90 United Kingdom potato processors have been awarded £6 million in grants towards the capital cost of new investment over the three years 1991-93. Nationally financed grant of £1·2 million has also been made available in conjuction with the EC scheme. Similar information for other member states is not available.

Certain other assistance is also available to potato processors from Industry Departments in England, Scotland and Wales under a number of schemes.

United Kingdom potato producers may also benefit from the group marketing grant.

Since November 1991 the EC Commission has published in the C series of the Official Journal brief details of the state aids to which it has raised no objection. These include our own potato marketing scheme and are summarised as follows:

Aids to potato processors and producers in the EC

Denmark

1. 1988 Expenditure and 1990 Draft Budget for potato trade association funds.
   Adopted: 30 October 1991 Published: OJ C 18/8 of 24 January 1992
2. Aid for potato quality control.
   Adopted: 25 March 1992 Published: OJ C 155/7 of 20 June 1992

Italy

1. Aid to support the horticulture sector (potatoes).
   Adopted: 21 January 1992 Published: OJ C 185/6 of 22 July 1992
2. Special intervention by AIMA for new potatoes for consumption.

During the 1992 season, France, Italy and Spain have provided assistance to their potato growers but we do not know the sums involved. In Great Britain, the Potato Marketing Board has operated the statutory guarantee arrangements. The cost to the Government is expected to be in the region of £1·5 million.

Beef

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to introduce legislation ensuring all beef is marked or labelled at the point of sale showing its country of origin; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: I have no plans to do so.

European Community rules on labelling already require the place of origin to be given on food if its omission could mislead the consumer. The Government are keen that consumers should be given information about the origin of all food products so that they can make informed choices and have been encouraging retailers to provide this information where appropriate.

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many of the appointments made by him as listed in "Public Bodies 1992" came within the categories set out in paragraphs 49 and 50 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers" and required a submission to the Prime Minister.

Mr. Curry: The Prime Minister is consulted on appointments where necessary. Currently, three appointments made by my right hon. Friend and listed in "Public Bodies 1992" were referred to the Prime Minister.

Intervention Beef

Mr. Gill: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many tonnes of British beef were held in intervention stores at 31 March and at the equivalent date in each of the past four years.

Mr. Curry: The information requested is set out in the table:

Date	Tonnes (Product weight)
31 March 1989	27,044
31 March 1990	13,141
31 March 1991	95,007
31 March 1992	140,799
31 March 1993	[1]164,537

[1] Provisional

Common Agricultural Policy

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the total cost of the common agricultural policy for 1992-93; how much of this will be paid by the United Kingdom; and how much of its proceeds will be derived as income for British farmers.

Mr. Curry: Table 22 of the 1993 departmental report by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and Intervention Board provides the relevant information on the EC budget, the United Kingdom contribution, and United Kingdom receipts from it in relation to the CAP. Table 20 of the same publication provides information on expenditure within the United Kingdom. A copy of the departmental report has been lodged in the House of Commons Library.

Environmental and Conservation Programmes

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list all the major environmental and conservation programmes administered by his Department, giving the budget for each for 1992-93.

Mr. Curry: The Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food administers the following environmental and conservation schemes:

	Forecast payments to farmers in 1992-93 (£ million)
Environmentally sensitive areas	10·8
Farm and conservation grant scheme	28·9
Farm woodland schemes	1·5
Pilot nitrate sensitive areas	1·4

It also administers the following schemes which have environmental conditions and benefits:

	Forecast payments to farmers in 1992-93 (£ million)
Hill livestock compensatory allowances	34·0
Pilot extensification scheme	0·4
Set-Aside	25·8

Data Protection Act 1984

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many certificates have been signed under the terms of section 27 of the Data Protection Act 1984 for each year since 1987.

Mr. Curry: None.

Oil Dispersants

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food why oil dispersants are not tested on marine animal and plant life present in surface waters.

Mr. Curry: Oil dispersants are tested using the brown shrimp Crangon crangon, for the sea test, and the common limpet Patella vulgata, for the rocky shore test. These marine animal species are considered to be suitably representative of marine life for the tests, which are intended to assess the toxicity of a dispersant, or a dispersant mixed with oil, in comparison with the toxicity of oil alone. However, I would refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Taunton (Mr. Nicholson) on 1 April at column 329 which announced a review of the current arrangements for the testing and approval of oil dispersants.

Departmental Forms

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on his plans for reducing the number of forms which have to be filled in by farmers produced by his Department.

Mr. Curry: A baseline list of forms associated with Ministry regulations which impose a burden on industry has been established. Forms listed in the baseline are subject to review under Ministry deregulation plans. The aim is to identify those which might be simplified or abolished in order to reduce the burden that can be imposed on industry.

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many forms he produced to be filled in by farmers for any purpose including making claims for quotas and grants in (a) 1979, (b) 1985 and (c) 1993.

Mr. Curry: The number of forms filled in specifically by farmers in 1993 is not available. Nor is this information available on a historical basis. However, the total number of forms associated with Ministry regulations which impose a burden on industry which the agriculture and food sectors taken as a whole are currently asked to complete is just under 450.

DEFENCE

Atomic Weapons Establishments

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the report, "Brown and Root: The Track Record", a copy of which has been sent to him, in regard to the contractorisation of the atomic weapons establishments from 1 April.

Mr. Aitken: The report refers to Brown and Root Inc, which is a United States-managed and operated company. Its allegations do not relate to Brown and Root Ltd., which is a member of the Hunting-BRAE consortium selected to operate AWE. Brown and Root Ltd. is the lead partner in the consortium running Devonport dockyard, where their nuclear safety record has been first class. In selecting Hunting-BRAE Ltd. as the contractor to operate AWE, careful account was taken of the corporate experience of all members of the consortium including their commitment to safety.

Nuclear Tests

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Barrow and Furness (Mr. Hutton) of 19 March, Official Report, column 391, if he will make it his practice to itemise the costs levied on each nuclear test conducted by the United Kingdom in Nevada to cover the management and disposal of radioactive wastes associated with each respective test.

Mr. Aitken: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on the 29 March 1993, Official Report, column 16.

Nuclear Submarines

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what arrangements he has made for the establishment of Z-berths for nuclear-powered submarines operating in the Persian gulf.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: None. The term "Z-berth" applies only to locations within the United Kingdom or United Kingdom dependent territories.

Surplus Departmental Properties

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many properties are currently surplus to the long-term requirements of his Department; and if he will list the number of such properties at each of his Department's sites.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Defence will write to the hon. Member.

Departmental Properties

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of his Department's properties were purchased by (a) housing associations, (b) private developers, (c) under do-it-yourself shared ownership schemes, and (d) under shared-ownership schemes in each of the last three years.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The information requested is as follows:

	Number
(a) housing associations
1990-91	96
1991-92	221
1992-93	299
(b) private developers
1990-91	875
1991-92	392
1992-93	110

As far as my Department is aware no properties have been purchased directly from the MoD under the DIYSO or shared-ownership schemes. These schemes are run by the Housing Corporation and housing associations. Some of the properties purchased by housing associations or private developers may subsequently have been resold under such schemes.

Helicopter Carrier

Mr. Jopling: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what reasons a limit of three weeks has been set for the contenders to modify their bids for the helicopter carrier; whether he will allow extra time, if this proves to be insufficient time to make the necessary adjustments; and if he will make it his policy to assess the rival bids purely on merits and price.

Mr. Aitken: In response to requests from the tenderers, additional time has been allowed for them to respond to the invitation to clarify their bids. We will hold a full and fair competition for the contract using our normal technical and value for money criteria.

Journalists (Transport and Accommodation)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy relating to (a) the provision of funding for the transport of journalists, and (b) the provision of MoD accommodation for journalists; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I will write to the hon. Member.

MPs (Transport and Accommodation)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy relating to (a) the provision of funding for the transport of hon. Members and (b) the provision of MoD accommodation for hon. Members; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: I will write to the hon. Member.

Scott Inquiry

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 26 March, Official Report, column 759, what was the number of documents requested by the Scott inquiry and that he was unable to provide: if he will state their nature; if he will divide his answer into those documents that he was unable to provide because (a) they had been destroyed, (b) they had been lost and (c) for other reasons; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: Lord Justice Scott's inquiry has requested a wide range of documents from my Department and no document requested is being witheld. As Lord Justice Scott made clear at his press conference on 31 March 1993, these requests are continuing and a great deal of work is being done to meet them. It would be inappropriate for me to comment in detail on the number and nature of these requests, which are matters between my Department and Lord Justice Scott's inquiry.

Bosnia No-fly Zone

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what consideration has been given to the deployment of Tornado aircraft to enforce the no-fly zone in Bosnia; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what recent consideration has been given to the deployment of British military forces to enforce the no-fly zone in Bosnia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Up to 12 Tornado F3 fighter aircraft and their air-to-air refuelling support have been offered to NATO as part of operations to implement Security Council resolution 816 to enforce the no-fly zone over Bosnia. The force for the initial deployment is made up of French, Dutch and American aircraft. British and other allies' aircraft are on standby to augment the force if requested to do so.

Falkland Islands

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) journalists and (b) hon. Members have visited the Falklands since 1982; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: There is no MoD requirement for a permanent record of visits to the Falklands Islands by journalists and hon. Members. No detailed lists are therefore maintained.

Data Protection Act 1984

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many certificates have been signed under the terms of section 27 of the Data Protection Act 1984 for each year since 1987.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: None.

War Crimes

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what training is given to Her Majesty's forces about war crimes.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: The Army's common military syllabus, the basis of all initial training, contains a module on the law of armed conflict, part of which embodies the correct treatment of prisoners of war.

In addition, individual and collective training, prior to relevant operations, highlights instruction in the law of armed conflict, the Geneva convention and the rules of engagement specific to the operation in question.

Redundancies

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many service personnel will now be made redundant under "Options for Change"; how many of those being made redundant are from Scottish regiments or have been previously posted to Scotland; and of those, how many are currently in single accommodation within the services and how many are in family accommodation.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: To date, a total of 12,440 service personnel have been selected for redundancy. In addition, in my answer to the hon. Member for Erewash (Mrs. Knight) on 1 April, Official Report, column 323, I said that a maximum in the order of 2,300 redundancies would take place in the Royal Navy between April and November 1994. Further redundancies in each of the services beyond these will depend on the manning situation.

A total of 486 personnel from Scottish regiments have been selected for redundancy in phases 1 and 2 of the Army's redundancy programme. Information about the number of personnel selected for redundancy who have served in Scotland and about the type of accommodation occupied by personnel made redundant is not available centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Army Houses

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the number of unoccupied houses owned by the armed services in Scotland which are (a) uninhabitable and (b) inhabitable.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: As at 31 December 1992, the latest date for which figures are available, 270 unoccupied service married quarters in Scotland were uninhabitable and 547 inhabitable. The uninhabitable properties were either undergoing or awaiting major works services while many of the inhabitable ones were either allocated to service families who were due to move in shortly or under consideration for disposal. In addition, 171 surplus married quarters were in the process of being sold.

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many and what percentage of officers in each grade from 1 to 7 and overall in his Department are (a) women, (b) from ethnic minorities and (c) disabled people.

Mr. Aitken: The numbers of women, disabled and ethnic minority staff in grade levels 1 to 7 and overall are given in the table. These figures exclude our executive agencies, the Meteorological Office and the Defence Research Agency. I have asked the chief executives to write to the hon. and learned Member.

Grade	Registered disabled[1]	Percentage of staff in grade	Non-registered disabled[1]	Percentage of staff in grade	Ethnic minority[2]	Percentage of staff in grade	Women	Percentage of staff in grade

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Greville Janner, dated 14 April 1993:

In his written reply to your Parliamentary Question on the numbers of women, people from ethnic minorities and disabled people working in MOD, the Secretary of State for Defence informed you that I would be replying directly to you in respect of the Defence Research Agency. The information you request, a copy of which has been placed in the House of Commons Library, is as follows:

Grade	(1) Registered disabled	Percentage of staff in Grade	(1) Non-registered disabled	Percentage of staff in Grade	(2) Ethnic minority	Percentage of staff in Grade	Women	Percentage of staff in grade

(2) Figures based on responses to voluntary ethnic origin survey.
(3) Statistics on the 2,606 Industrial staff cannot be obtained without disproportionate cost and administrative effort.

Letter from J. C. R. Hunt to Mr. Greville Janner, dated 5 April 1993:

The figures below give the details for the Meteorological Office, as requested in your recent Parliamentary Question:

Grades 1–4 : 0 (out of 3)
Grade 5 : 1 disabled (12·5 per cent.)
Grade 6 : 2 women (6·5 per cent.)
Grade 7 : 2 disabled (1·3 per cent.), 1 from an ethnic minority (0·7 per cent.), 7 women (4·1 per cent.)
Overall : 10 disabled (0·9 per cent.), 23 from ethnic minorities (1·0 per cent.), 447 women (17·7 per cent.).

Note: Only those registered disabled are included in the 'disabled' figures.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Correspondence

Dr. Godman: To ask the Lord President of the Council when the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow can expect to receive a reply to his letter dated 27 January anent certain matters relating to ministerial statements.

Mr. Newton: I replied to the hon. Member today.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Middle East

18. Mr. Boyce: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what further steps he is taking in support of the middle east peace process.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Our priority is an early resumption of the middle east peace process. The United Kingdom was represented on a European Community troika mission to the middle east from 30 March to 2 April. The troika urged all parties to accept the co-sponsors' invitation to the next round of negotiations in Washington on 20 April.

Russia

23. Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to meet his Russian counterpart to discuss United Kingdom-Russian relations.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has no plans at present for a further meeting with Mr. Kozyrev, but we keep in regular contact. They discussed British-Russian relations when they met in Moscow earlier this month.

Maastricht Treaty

24. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many representations he has received to date about holding a referendum on the Maastricht treaty; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Garel-Jones: There have been several such calls. We do not believe that a referendum on the treaty is either necessary or appropriate.

Singapore

25. Mr. Milligan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the current status of Britain's relations with Singapore.

Mr. Goodlad: Our relations with Singapore are excellent, as I was able to confirm during my visit from 5 to 7 April.

While in Singapore, I had talks with the Prime Minister, Mr. Goh Chok Tong, the senior Minister, Mr. Lee Kuan Yew, and other Ministers on a range of issues. I also met leading figures in the economic and commercial sectors, and was able to reiterate the growing interest of British firms in doing business with Singapore, now the United Kingdom's 19th largest export market with two-way trade in 1992 totalling over £2 billion.

Relations are strong, too, in the fields of English language teaching and education, with some 3,000 Singaporean students attending tertiary courses in the United Kingdom. We continue to attach importance to defence co-operation, through the five power defence arrangements and the Royal Navy's use of two berths at Sembawang.

South Africa

26. Mr. Deva: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress is being made towards the holding of multiracial elections in South Africa.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: A multi-party planning conference was held on 5-6 March which agreed that multi-party talks will resume on 1 April. All major parties, except the Azanian People's organisation, are represented in the 26-member committee which is preparing for the talks. These talks are expected to lead to the establishment of a transitional executive structure later this year, followed by free non-racial elections.

32. Sir Michael Grylls: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the status of talks aimed at the establishment of an interim Government in South Africa.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Constitutional negotiations involving all significant political groupings in South Africa are due to begin on 1 or 2 April. These talks are expected to lead to the establishment of a transitional executive structure in June, followed by elections to a constitution-making body and the establishment of an interim government of national unity.

Iran

27. Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the links between Iran and international terrorism.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We and our European partners made clear at the Edinburgh summit in December our concern at Iranian behaviour in a number of areas, particularly the fatwa against Salman Rushdie and terrorism.

Bosnia

28. Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the situation in Bosnia.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We and our EC partners have welcomed the Bosnian Muslim and Croat agreement to the international conference's peace plan for Bosnia. The Bosnian Serbs must now sign. Urgent work is in hand in New York to apply pressure on the Serbs to secure their agreement.

Mr. Elletson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will detail the remit, which he and other EC Foreign Ministers gave at the Edinburgh summit, to the team charged with investigating allegations of rape in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The remit of the EC investigative mission into allegations of abuse of women in Bosnia-Herzegovina is set out in the declaration issued by the EC Foreign Ministers at the conclusion of the Edinburgh summit. The declaration was issued as a UN Security Council document. A copy is in the Library.

European Community (Responsibility)

29. Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will set out the principal areas of policy or administration for which the European Community has exclusive responsibility.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The European Community has exclusive competence where that is conferred upon it by treaty provision or measures taken under the treaty. It is not possible to draw up an exhaustive theoretical list. Current examples include the common agricultural policy, the common commercial policy and the external tariff.

Japan

30. Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on relations with Japan.

33. Mrs. Angela Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about United Kingdom relations with Japan.

Mr. Goodlad: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs visited Japan from 6 to 7 April. Following his discussions with the Japanese Government as well as with a wide range of people from different walks of life, we remain strongly of the view that our relations with Japan are excellent. We hold similar views on the major world issues. We shall be working hard to make the relationship yet closer and more productive.

Angola

31. Mr. Hoon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what initiatives he is planning through the United Nations to end the fighting in Angola.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: In accordance with the mandate conferred by United Nations Security Council resolution 811 of 12 March, the United Nations Secretary General is now consulting the Government of Angola and UNITA to establish the date, place and agenda for direct UNITA/Government of Angola talks under United Nations auspices. We are actively supporting his efforts.

Sudan

34. Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when his Department last made representations about human rights to the Government of Sudan.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I last raised Sudan's human rights performance with the Sudanese ambassador on 22 February. My right honourable and noble Friend Baroness Chalker of Wallasey also raised the issue with him on 1 April. We were in the lead in securing a resolution adopted by the United Nations Commission on Human Rights on 10 March providing for a public investigation of the human rights situation in Sudan.

United Nations (Reform)

35. Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what view Her Majesty's Government take of current proposals for reform of the structures and powers of the United Nations.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have long worked for and support steps to reform the workings of the United Nations which promote efficiency and streamline the organisation. We have backed the Secretary-General's reforms of the secretariat. With our European Community partners, we have been at the forefront of moves to restructure and revitalise the Economic and Social Council and to promote good management and administration in the United Nations specialised agencies.

Yugoslavia

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he last met his ministerial colleagues from other member states of the Security Council of the United Nations to discuss the enforcement of UN resolutions 713, 757 and 787 relating to trade and arms embargoes against the former Yugoslavia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs last discussed these issues with the US Secretary of State on 25 March. We are in regular contact with other member states represented at the Security Council.

Mr. Elletson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if Her Majesty's ambassador to the United Nations will propose enforcement of the no-fly zone over Bosnia-Herzegovina; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The United Kingdom co-sponsored UN Security Council resolution 816, which authorises enforcement of the no-fly zone established by Security Council resolutions 781 of 9 October 1992 and 786 of 11 November 1992.

Sir Russell Johnston: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer to the hon. and learned Member for Fife, North-East (Mr. Campbell) of 25 March, Official Report, column 653, if he has received a copy of the UNPROFOR report on the recent breach of the no-fly zone over Bosnia-Herzegovina; what was the origin, destination and type of the aircraft concerned; and on what basis it was identified as a Bosnian-Serb aircraft.

Mr. Garel-Jones: We have received a copy of Note Verbale S/24900/Add.27 of 16 March from the United Nations Secretary-General to the President of the Security Council, which gives details of the three aircraft observed bombing the village of Gladovici.

The report does not specify the origin of the aircraft. One aircraft was a single-engined propellor-driven biplane, the other two being single-engined propellor-driven monoplanes. It was not possible to determine the precise type of destination of the aircraft, but all three withdrew towards the Bosnian/Serbian border. The circumstantial evidence therefore suggests that the aircraft were operated by the Bosnian Serbs.

Sir Russell Johnston: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the United Nations monitors are in place at each Bosnian-Serb airfield in the republic of Bosnia-Herzegovina and each airfield in the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia; and how many combat missions have departed from any of these airfields since their installation.

Mr. Garel-Jones: UNPROFOR airfield monitors are stationed in the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia at Batajnica/Surcin, Ponikve, Kraljevo, Berane, Podgorica, Pristina and Nis and in Bosnia at Mahorljani, Zaluzahi, Cazin and Tuzla.

No sorties positively identified as for combat purposes have been recorded departing from any of the airfields at which UNPROFOR monitors are stationed.

Sir Russell Johnston: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement concerning the enforcement of the no-fly zone over Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Mr. Garel-Jones: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the oral answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Defence Procurement on 1 April 1993 to the hon. Member for South Shields (Dr. Clark), c. 499.

Sir Russell Johnston: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when was the last occasion on which fixed wing or propeller aircraft from the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia crossed into Bosnia-Herzegovina; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The last occasions on which aircraft unauthorised by UNPROFOR were observed crossing from Serbian airspace into Bosnia-Herzegovina were on 14 March, when violations by three separate aircraft—one helicopter, one biplane and one monoplane—were reported.

Sir Russell Johnston: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the total number of violations of the no-fly zone over Bosnia-Herzegovina by (a) Bosnian-Serb fixed wing aircraft, (b) Bosnian-Serb helicopters, (c) Bosnian-Muslim fixed wing aircraft, (d) Bosnian-Muslim helicopters, (e) Croatian fixed wing aircraft and (f) Croatian helicopters since its introduction.

Mr. Garel-Jones: UNPROFOR reports of violations of the no-fly zone do not normally attribute individual violations to parties. Nor is it in many cases possible to determine whether the violating aircraft is fixed or rotary wing.

Kenya

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make a statement on relations with Kenya following the policy decisions of the international financial institutions.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We are urging the Kenyan Government to reopen discussions with the IMF/World Bank with a view to reaching agreement at the earliest opportunity.

Know-how Funds

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the know-how funds for the Confederation of Independent States, central and eastern Europe.

Mr. Douglas-Hogg: The know-how fund is kept regularly under review. The fund is well regarded for its effective and flexible contributions to economic and political reform.

Israel

Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he has taken to assist the ending of the Arab trade boycott of Israel.

Mr. Douglas-Hogg: We consider the Arab boycott to be iniquitous and incompatible with the spirit of the peace process. Calls on the Arab League to lift the boycott were made at the 1991 London economic summit, at the Lisbon European Council of June 1992, and in a series of European Community demarches in September 1992. We shall continue to pursue this issue with Arab Governments.

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what communications he has had with the Israeli Government on whether Israeli settlements in the west bank, Gaza strip, Golan heights and East Jerusalem are continuing; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Garel-Jones: Ministers have regularly discussed the settlement issue with the Israelis; most recently with the Israeli Deputy Foreign Minister and the Israeli Minister of Housing who were both in London last month. The Israeli Government instituted some curbs on settlement activity in the west bank and Gaza shortly after its formation last year. This was a welcome move, but fell short of the total ban on settlements in the occupied territories which we, and other members of the international community, had called for. It remains our view that all settlements in the occupied territories, including East Jerusalem, are illegal and an obstacle to peace.

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what evidence he has recently received on changes in Israeli settlements in the west bank, Gaza strip, Golan heights and east Jerusalem; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The Israeli Government instituted some curbs on settlement activity in the west bank and Gaza shortly after its formation last year. This was a welcome move but fell short of the total ban on settlements in the occupied territories which we, and other members of the international community, had called for. Settlement activity continues in East Jerusalem. It remains our view that all settlements in the occupied territories, including east Jerusalem, are illegal and an obstacle to peace.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information Her Majesty's Government possess on the violation of the human rights of Palestinians in Israel in each month since January 1992.

Mr. Garel-Jones: We receive regular information from a variety of sources on the human rights of Palestinians in the occupied territories. The situation there remains a matter of great concern as my right hon. and learned Friend the Minister of State, the hon. Member for Grantham (Mr. Hogg), made clear in a speech to the UN Commission on Human Rights in Geneva on 9 February.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations have been made to the Government of Israel concerning the imprisonment of Mordechai Vanunu; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: We have raised with the Israelis concerns over humanitarian aspects of this case. They have assured us that the conditions under which Mr. Vanunu is detained have now improved. We have no formal locus to intervene.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action has been taken within the nuclear non-proliferation treaty concerning Israeli nuclear capability; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: As Israel is not a party to the non-proliferation treaty, it is not subject to its provisions. We are, however, concerned by reports that Israel has a nuclear weapons programme, although we have no direct evidence to confirm that this is the case, and would like Israel to accede to the treaty as a non-nuclear weapon state as soon as possible.

Nuclear Testing

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether his Department was represented at the meeting launching the appeal for a nuclear test ban held in Committee Room 6 on 30 March.

Mr. Garel-Jones: No.

Weapons Conventions

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what legislation is required before (a) the 1977 additional protocols to the Geneva convention and (b) the 1981 inhumane weapons convention can be ratified by Her Majesty's Government.

Mr. Garel-Jones: Should we decide to ratify the 1977 additional protocols to the Geneva conventions, legislation would be needed at least in the form of an amendment to the Geneva Conventions Act of 1957, to create criminal offences in respect of grave breaches of additional protocol I, as required by article 85 of that protocol. The need for legislation on any further points is under consideration.

It is not thought that legislation would be required to enable the United Kingdom to ratify the 1981 United Nations weaponry convention.

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many of the appointments made by him as listed in "Public Bodies 1992" came within the categories set out in paragraphs 49 and 50 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers" and required a submission to the Prime Minister.

Mr. Garel-Jones: One.

Norway

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Norway's application to join the European Community, in regard to environment and foreign and security policy.

Mr. Garel-Jones: We welcome Norway's application to join the Community and look forward to the swift conclusion of accession negotiations, which began on 5 April. Norway has said that she is ready to participate fully in the common foreign and security policy and has played a full role in international environment policy. The precise terms of accession in these and other areas will be the subject of negotiation.

St. Helena

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 22 March, Official Report, column 441, how many vehicles were imported free of tax into St. Helena owned by United Kingdom or St. Helena Government employees.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The available figures for private vehicles imported free of tax, on first arrival, by employees of the United Kingdom and St. Helena Governments are as follows:

Vehicles imported free of tax by employees of the United Kingdom and St. Helena Governments

Nuclear Non-proliferation

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what matters in regard to nuclear non-proliferation were discussed during his recent meetings in the United States of America.

Mr. Garel-Jones: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs discussed nuclear non-proliferation matters in the context of preparations for the 1995 nuclear non-proliferation treaty extension and review conference, notably current problems with North Korea and Ukraine.

Iraq

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Iraqi interests section of the Jordanian embassy about the release of funds for Iraqi students and their host academic institutions in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Garel-Jones: We have urged the Iraqi interests section of the Royal Jordanian embassy on many occasions to settle outstanding bills in respect of students sponsored by the Iraqi Government. We have recently assisted them to set up a mechanism which facilitates the settlement of these bills. This mechanism conforms to the provisions of the United Nations sanctions regime.

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will state the latest position over the UN-supervised programme of weapons of mass destruction in Iraq; and if he will itemise what has so far been destroyed and the likely number yet to be dealt with.

Mr. Garel-Jones: UN inspectors continue to carry out inspections and monitoring in Iraq in accordance with Security Council resolution 687.

Destruction on prohibited items, facilities and components is under way. The UN estimates that destruction of chemical agents will continue for a further nine to 10 months; the extent of other destruction activity has yet to be determined.

Inspectors have so far supervised the destruction of:

Ballistic Missiles and Supergun
62 ballistic missiles
10 ballistic missile launchers
18 fixed sound launch pads

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government and the UN towards the sale of oil by the Iraqi regime; what response there has been so far from the regime; and what steps have been taken to publicise the reasons for the present UN policy among the populations of UN member states.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The sale of oil by the Iraqi regime is forbidden under the terms of United Nations Security Council resolution 687 until the Government of Iraq comply with the provisions of that resolution which laid out the terms of the ceasefire. But under the provisions of two subsequent UN Security Council resolutions, 706 and 712, Iraq is able to export up to $1·6 billion worth of oil in exchange for the financing of humanitarian imports. The Iraqi Government have chosen not to implement these resolutions. We have consistently called on Iraq to implement all relevant UN Security Council resolutions. We also hope that Iraq will take advantage of the opportunity to export oil. We have made our position clear on frequent occasions, notably with other members so the Security Council at the regular reviews of UN sanctions against Iraq.

Korea

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the report made by the Director-General of the International Atomic Energy Agency to the IAEA's board of governors on 31 March on the nuclear status of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea.

Mr. Garel-Jones: In accordance with the IAEA board of governors' resolutions of 25 February and 18 March, the Director-General of the IAEA made a statement to the board of governors on 31 March on safeguards in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea. Dr. Blix reported that the IAEA was unable to verify that there has been no diversion by the DPRK of nuclear material to nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices, and that the DPRK was in non-compliance with its safeguards agreement with the agency.

Hong Kong

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will give an estimate of the number of retired pensioners of the Hong Kong Government there will be at the date when control of the colony passes to China.

Mr. Garel-Jones: Based on present retirement patterns, the estimated number of Hong Kong Government pensioners at the end of June 1997 should stand at some 51,000.

Correspondence

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects to reply to the letter from the hon. Member for Bradford, West about the murder of Mrs. Hamida Mattoo by security forces in Indian-occupied Kashmir; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: I shall be writing to the hon. Gentleman shortly about the death of Mrs. Hamida Mattoo.

Cyprus

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the United Nations talks on Cyprus.

Mr. Garel-Jones: The United Nations Secretary-General held a formal meeting with the leaders of the two Cypriot communities in New York on 30 March. The two leaders expressed their willingness to resume talks in New York on 24 May and to use the "Set of Ideas" for the purpose of reaching a mutually acceptable overall framework agreement. We continue actively to support the UN initiative.

Somalia

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many Somali asylum seekers have been interviewed at the British embassy in Cairo for each of the past 12 months.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: No Somali asylum-seekers have been interviewed at the British embassy in Cairo in the last 12 months. However, the number of Somali nationals interviewed in the British embassy, Cairo in connection with their applications to join sponsors who have claimed asylum in the United Kingdom is as follows:

	Numbers interviewed	Dependents of applicants

SCOTLAND

Local Government Reform

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what effect he expects the transfer of undertakings (protection of employees) legislation to have on the proposed local government reforms; what cost implications there will be and on which bodies they will fall; and what account was taken of the calculations prepared for his Department by Touche Ross.

Mr. Stewart: The question of whether the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations will apply can be determined only in the light of individual circumstances and following careful legal consideration. We envisage that most local authority staff who are currently employed by local authorities will in any case, by one means or another, become the employees of the new authorities. In preparing its report on costs, Touche Ross assumed that all staff would transfer to the new authorities and that any surplus staff would be made redundant by those authorities.

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimates he has made of the implications for public sector expenditure over the next five years of the proposed reform of local government in Scotland.

Mr. Stewart: The Scottish Office engaged consultants last year to estimate the costs and savings likely to arise from a move to a single-tier structure of local government in Scotland. The consultants' findings are at present being refined in the light of comments on their report. The available evidence suggests that our reform proposals will give rise to transitional costs which will be quickly recovered by savings arising from the new structure. An indication of the likely financial consequences of reform will be included in due course in a White Paper setting out our proposals.

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what provision he will make for accountability when transferring existing local authority powers from directly elected Scottish local councils to the Scottish Office and to non-elected bodies.

Mr. Stewart: Local authority functions are regularly reviewed. New duties are placed on local government in appropriate circumstances and some functions are assumed at other times by other bodies or agencies. Questions of accountability, service delivery and a range of other issues are given full consideration in each case.

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will specify the reasons which underlay the Government's decision to establish a local government commission to inquire into local government reform in England but not in Scotland.

Mr. Stewart: The fact that a commission has been appointed in England to consider local government restructuring is not itself a necessary reason for adopting a similar procedure in Scotland. It is appropriate to adopt Scottish solutions to Scottish problems. Similarly, no such commission has been appointed in Wales. The present structure of local government in Scotland and the evidence available from previous reviews mean that the current reform exercise is of a smaller scale and less complex than that in England. The Government have recently completed a very full consultation exercise about the shape of the new single-tier structure to which over 3,300 responses were submitted. These are now being carefully analysed.

Transplants

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many patients are on waiting lists for bone marrow transplants, and for transplants for cases of genetic and metabolic disorders;

(2) what provision is made for patients who require a bone marrow transplant; and what provision is made for funding transplants for genetic and metabolic disorders.

Mr. Stewart: It is for health boards to negotiate contracts for the provision of bone marrow transplant services. As at 31 March 1993 there were four adult patients waiting for bone marrow transplants in Scotland. There is no waiting list for bone marrow transplants for genetic or metabolic disorders.

Agency Nurses

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he has taken to ensure that agency nurses employed in NHS hospitals are always suitably qualified and experienced for the wards to which they are allocated.

Mr. Stewart: In Scotland agencies for the supply of nurses are licensed under part III of the Nurses (Scotland) Act 1951. The licensing authority for nurses agencies in Scotland is the health board for the area in which the agency's premises are situated.

Conditions attached to the granting of a licence are stringent and include a requirement that agencies supply only nurses on the register of the United Kingdom Central Council for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting. These, and other conditions, are enforced by the licensing authority. In addition, my noble Friend the Minister of State announced on 15 June 1992 the intention that all patients would have a named nurse to ensure that in all circumstances suitably qualified and experienced nurses are available to patients.

European Community

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 25 March, Official Report, column 687, what is the total number of persons, and of what grade or level, seconded to (a) the European Commission and (b) the UKREP to the EC since 1973; and how many of those who have completed their secondment are still employed by his Department.

Mr. Stewart: Between 1981 and 1993 13 Scottish Office staff between higher executive officer and unified grade 7 level or professional equivalent have been seconded to the European Commission, of whom 11 are still employed by the Department. Figures for the period 1973-81 are not available in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate expense.

Since 1973, seven Scottish Office staff have been seconded to UKREP, of whom six are still employed by the Department. Two were at higher executive officer level, two at unified grade 7 and three at unified grade 5 level.

Forestry Commission

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are Her Majesty's Government's current intentions in relation to (a) the future of the Forest Enterprise wing of the Forestry Commission and (b) the future of the regulatory functions of the Forestry Commission in England, Wales and Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Hector Monro: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland to my hon. Friend the Member for Staffordshire, Moorlands, (Mr. Knox) on 30 March 1993, Official Report, column 150. We have no plans at present to change the regulatory functions of the Forestry Commission.

Pupil-teacher Ratio

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the average pupil-teacher ratio in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in Scotland.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The average pupil-teacher ratio at September 1991 in education authority schools in Scotland was 19·5 in primary and 12·4 in secondary.

This information was published in the Scottish Office Education Department statistical bulletin, "Schools, Pupils and Teachers in Scotland" (Edn/A1/1993/1), tables 4 and 6. A copy of the bulletin is in the House of Commons Library.

Countryside (Access)

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what plans he has to charge for access to parts of the countryside in public ownership; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what discussion he has had with land owners concerning access to the countryside; and if he will make a statement;.

(3) what representations he has received concerning access to the countryside.

Sir Hector Monro: All aspects of access to the countryside, whether in public or private ownership, are currently under active review by Scottish Natural Heritage. SNH issued a public consultation paper in January 1993. The consultation period ends on 16 April 1993, following which it will be developing policy proposals for the consideration of Government and other interests. I cannot anticipate at this stage what these might be.

Fishing Exclusion Zone

Mr. Norman Hogg: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he intends to extend the fishing exclusion zone to encompass areas where high levels of oil contamination have been found associated with sediment south of the current exclusion zone.

Sir Hector Monro: Detailed monitoring has been carried out by Government scientists since oil-contaminated sediments were first found to the south-east of Fair Isle. Results have shown that while sediments have been contaminated by Braer oil, hydrocarbon concentrations in the water column and in samples of fish from the vicinity have been within background levels. In these circumstances I see no need to extend the existing exclusion zone.

A1 (Upgrading)

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on his plans for upgrading the A1 road in Scotland, giving the timetable for construction and completion of each section and the estimated costs.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Government consider that it would be desirable for the A1 to be dualled over its full length in Scotland. Work is currently under way on the £1·6 million dualling scheme at Marshall Meadows which will tie into a Department of Transport improvement at the national border. This scheme will be completed during the summer. The major route priority is the construction of a dual carriageway from Tranent to Haddington. Draft orders for this scheme were published on 30 March and, subject to the satisfactory completion of statutory procedures, construction of this £33 million scheme will commence in 1994-95. The preparation of the Haddington-Dunbar scheme, which is also estimated to cost in excess of £30 million, is following the earlier scheme at an interval of about 12 months.

Between Dunbar and the Border, some six further dualling schemes are being prepared along the route for early construction. Subject to satisfactory completion of the necessary procedures, up to three of these should start this financial year with the remainder planned to follow in the current public expenditure period. The schemes are:

	£ million
Cement Works-Innerwick	2·6
Tower-Penmanshiel	1·5
Howburn-Lemington	2·1
Thistly Cross-Broxburn	4·4
Broxburn-Cement Works	1·75
Houndwood-Howburn	1·75

In addition to the above, local schemes to provide early safety and operational improvements on the route will continue to be brought forward.

The timing of all the above schemes will be dependent on the completion of the necessary preparatory work and statutory procedures and, for the later schemes, the availability of finance.

Further schemes will be identified and constructed as they compete for, and find, places in future programmes.

Child Care

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much money has been given to Scottish Enterprise in 1993-94 for the new after-school child care initiative.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 2 April 1993]: Resources for a new programme for the provision of out-of-school child care have been included in the overall budget for Scottish Enterprise for 1993-94. The relevant resources have not been separately identified, in accordance with normal budgeting arrangements for these bodies. The detailed allocation of resources to specific activities is an operational matter for Scottish Enterprise and for the local enterprise companies.

Health Board Staff

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will publish a list of companies employing staff transferred from employment with health boards; and what information he has on the wage rates they are offering new employees;

(2) how many health boards have been advised by the Central Legal Office to provide private contractors with details of length of service of their employees.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 2 April 1993]: Information about companies employing transferred staff is not collected. Under the terms of the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981, existing rates and conditions of service would apply in the case of any staff affected by such a relevant transfer.

No advice has been given by the central legal office of the NHS to health boards to provide contractors with details of service of employees.

Forestry

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what input has been received from non-governmental organisations in relation to the development of the national plan to implement the non-binding statement of forest principles agreed at the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development;

(2) what progress has been made with regard to the development of the national plan to implement the non-binding statement of forest principles agreed at the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 2 April 1993]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 1 February 1993, Official Report, column 18. The national plan is still in course of preparation. We have not yet sought the views of non-governmental organisations, but will do so later this year before the plan is completed.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what incentives exist for the production of hardwoods from broadleaved woodlands in the United Kingdom.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 2 April 1993]: The Government provide grants, through the woodland grant scheme, to encourage the establishment of new broadleaved woodlands and the better management of existing broadleaved woodlands to meet a range of objectives, including the production of quality hardwood timber. The grants are supported by advice, which is summarised in Forestry Commission Handbook No. 9, "Growing Broadleaves for Timber", a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Untreated Cream

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will take steps to allow low capacity establishments with a proven hygiene record to sell untreated cream in Scotland.

Sir Hector Monro: Scottish milk hygiene legislation is being reviewed in the context of implementation of EC directive 92/46 which lays down health rules for the production and marketing of raw milk, heat-treated milk and milk-based products. The Government will invite views on all aspects of the present legislation in the course of consultation on new draft regulations later this year.

Hunting

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the cost of a permit or licence to hunt on Forestry Commission land.

Sir Hector Monro: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 19 January 1993, Official Report, column 247.

Historic Scotland

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish the key performance targets he has set for Historic Scotland for 1993-94.

Mr. Lang: I have set Historic Scotland the following key performance targets for 1993-94:

Protecting the built heritage	Target
i. Number of ancient monuments of national importance to be scheduled	340
ii. Number of listed buildings resurvey units to be completed	150
iii. Number of historic building repair grants accepted	135
iv. Conservation of monuments in care	reduce maintenance backlog
Promoting and presenting the built heritage
i. Number of visitors to monuments in care	2·4 million
ii. Total income	£7·5 million
Management
i. Value for money savings on maintenance of monuments in care (per cent.)	3·5

Mink

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many mink farms are currently licensed in each region of Scotland.

Sir Hector Monro: There is one licensed mink farm operating in Scotland, in Grampian region.

Offshore Oil and Gas

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will detail the time it took between reports of incidents involving breaches of health and safety laws in the offshore oil and gas industries and referrals made to the procurator fiscal in each of the past seven years; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding Answer 24 March 1993]: Problems have been experienced in recovering data stored on computer and many records formerly held by the procurator fiscal's office at Aberdeen were destroyed by fire in April 1989. Information for each of the past seven years is therefore not fully available.

In such highly technical cases it can also be difficult to select a single point as marking the date of the start of the procurator fiscal's investigations, but in a survey of 10 cases the time taken between the receipt of cases by the procurator fiscal and the start of court proceedings varied as shown in the table. Much depended on the complexity of the technical evidence and on the scale of the specialised investigation required.

In addition there are two substantial investigations which have been in progress since 1990, and two dating from 1991, in which decisions on prosecution will shortly be taken.

Care in the Community

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much of the additional funds for the care in the community programme, announced on 23 March, relates to (a) 1993-94, (b) 1994-95 and (c) 1995-96.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 2 April 1993]: The additional £28 million for the care in the community programme will be used for bridging finance and distributed as follows: (a) £4 million 1993-94, (b) £9 million 1994-95 and (c) £15 million 1995-96.

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland whether the additional allocation to the care in the community programme over the period 1993-94 to 1995-96, announced on 23 March (a) is bridging finance to health boards and (b) is in addition to bridging finance for the period 1992-93 to 1994-95 announced on 23 January 1992.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 2 April 1993]: The £28 million which I announced on 23 March for the care in the community programme is for bridging finance to health boards and is additional to that announced on 23 January 1992.

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much of the bridging finance for the care in the community programme, announced on 23 January 1992, relates to (a) 1992-93, (b) 1993-94 and (c) 1994-95.

Mr. Lang: In addition to an original £15 million bridging finance provision, apportioned equally over the three each financial years 1992-92 to 1993-94, the 23 January 1992 announcement confirmed an additional £18 million of bridging finance to be allocated on the basis of £6 million for each financial year, 1992-93, 1993-94 and 1994-95.

Mr. Tom Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how much of the bridging finance for the care in the community programme, announced on 23 January 1992, relates to (a) care of the mentally ill, (b) care of the mentally handicapped and (c) care of the elderly;

(2) how much of the additional funds for the care in the community programme announced on 23 March relates to (a) care of the mentally ill, (b) care of the mentally handicapped and (c) care of the elderly.

Mr. Lang [holding answer 2 April 1993]: The amounts of bridging finance announced are available for distribution to all three client groups. Allocations to individual health boards reflect differing demands at their local level and so may be directed to any one or more of the client groups.

River Clyde (Dredging)

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the overall cost of the dredging of the channel of the River Clyde in each of the past eight years; which organisation is responsible for the maintenance of the channel; which organisations make an annual financial contribution to the dredging operations; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 1 April 1993]: The gross costs incurred by the Clyde Port Authority in dredging the River Clyde in each of the past eight years were as follows:

	£ million
1984	918,000
1985	931,000
1986	884,000
1987	1,012,000
1988	1,043,000
1989	1,068,000
1990	1,209,000
1991	1,112,000

Clydeport Ltd., as successor to the former Clyde Port Authority, has a permissive power to dredge the river channel to the extent that it is considered necessary for the maintenance and improvement of the port, but has no statutory duty to dredge.

Strathclyde regional council, Glasgow district council, Yarrow Shipbuilders and Kvaerner Govan have all made contributions towards the cost of dredging in recent years. It remains the Government's policy that port authorities, including Clydeport Ltd. should manage their businesses on a commercial basis and that the costs of dredging should be met by charges to the users of ports, or by other parties who benefit from the dredging.

Young People

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to publish statistics and other information about the number of persons aged 16 to 17 years in each local enterprise company area who are (a) without a job, (b) not on an approved training course and (c) not undertaking a full-time education course.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 1 April 1993]: None. This information is not available in the form requested.

Employment Protection

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received from the Cleaning and Support Services Association in relation to the implementation of the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981 and compulsory competitive tendering by regional, island and district councils and health boards; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stewart [holding answer 1 April 1993]: I received a number of representations from the Cleaning and Support Services Association about the implementation of the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981. My right hon. Friend made his position clear in his answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Kincardine and Deeside (Mr. Kynoch) on 11 March 1993, c. 716-17.

Edinburgh Dental School

Mr. Alistair Darling: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if his Department will meet the cost incurred by the University of Edinburgh in making redundant the staff employed at the Edinburgh dental school following the decision that the school will close in 1994; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I shall write to the hon. Member.

EMPLOYMENT

Unemployed Young People

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment whether children between the age of 16 and 18 years who are estranged from their parents and receiving income support while unemployed are excluded from the total unemployment monthly figures.

Mr. McLoughlin: Those aged 16 to 17 who receive unemployment-related benefits as special hardship cases are included in the headline total of the monthly claimant unemployment count, but not in the corresponding consistent, seasonally adjusted series. In order to maintain consistency, over time the latter is restricted to those aged 18 and over.

Job Schemes

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if she will list the age requirements that govern eligibility for each job scheme; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: For each of the job programmes run by the Employment Service, the lower age limit is the 18th birthday and there is no upper age limit.

Unemployment, Llanfair Caereinion

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proposals she has for reducing unemployment in Llanfair Caereinion; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Employment Service and training and enterprise councils deliver a wide range of employment, enterprise and training programmes to help the employment prospects of unemployed people. These are available to people living in Llanfair Caereinion, as elsewhere, to help them find the quickest and best route back to employment.

Lost Working Days

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many days were lost per 1,000 workers in the United Kingdom during each of the last two years.

Mr. McLoughlin: There were 24 working days lost per 1,000 workers in labour disputes in 1992, compared with 34 working days lost per 1,000 workers in 1991.

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many of the appointments made by her as listed in "Public Bodies 1992" came within the categories set out in paragraphs 49 and 50 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers" and required a submission to the Prime Minister.

Mr. McLoughlin: Within the non-departmental public bodies covered by the Employment Department group, seven appointments came within the categories referred to in paragraphs 49 and 50 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers". These seven were given approval by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister, although actually appointed by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Employment.

Gas Boilers

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans she has to review safety standards for domestic gas boilers and flues; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: I am advised by the Department of Trade and Industry that the safety requirements for all non-industrial gas applicances were reviewed recently during the development of the EC Gas Appliance Directive, adopted on 29 June 1990 and due to come fully into effect on 1 January 1996. In accordance with the requirement of this directive, European harmonised product safety standards for all gas appliances within the scope of the directive are currently under consideration by the European standardisation body, CEN.

Vocational Training

Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if she will respond to the recommendations of the Equal Opportunity Commission's formal investigation into the publicly funded vocational training system in England and Wales; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: We welcome the Equal Opportunities Commission's report as a positive contribution to promoting equality of opportunity for women. We are pleased to see that the report contains many examples of effective and innovative training practice introduced by the training and enterprise councils. We look forward to continued partnership with the commission in considering its recommendations.

Data Protection Act 1984

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many certificates have been signed under the terms of section 27 of the Data Protection Act 1984 for each year since 1987.

Mr. McLoughlin: I am aware of two such certificates so far as the Employment Department group is concerned.

Family Size

Mr. Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment, pursuant to her answer of 17 March, Official Report, column 267, on families with four or more children, if she will indicate what is meant by a one plus child family.

Mr. McLoughlin: This phrase was used to describe families with one or more children in order to provide a concise answer to my hon. Friend's original question; I regret any misunderstanding that this may have caused.

Training Programmes

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people participated in (a) employment training, (b) youth training and (c) employment action in Great Britain in 1989-90, 1990-91 and 1991-92; and at what average cost per trainee in (i) cash terms and (ii) 1992-93 prices.

Mr. McLoughlin: The information requested is given in the following tables:

Employment action did not start until 1 October 1991, therefore no figures are available for 1989-90 and 1990-91.
The EA unit cost figure for 1991-92 is an accruals unit cost, which takes the expenditure back to the year in which the participant weeks are delivered.
Unit cost figures for Employment Training and Employment Action differ slightly from the figures published in the 1993 departmental report as the departmental report figures covered England only.
All figures at 1992-93 prices were calculated using the latest published version (17/3/93) of HM Treasury's GDP deflators.
Youth training includes youth credits.

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if she will list every training programme and employment initiative by her Department with the month and year of its inception and demise and the number of participants since 1979.

Mr. McLoughlin: The information requested is not kept centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment further to the answer of 3 March, Official Report, column 209, about amounts spent on training programmes, what are the equivalent figures for 1992-93.

Mr. McLoughlin: This information is not yet available. I shall write to the hon. Member giving the figures requested, when the information for 1992-93 is complete.

Part-time Employment

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if she will estimate the percentage of part-time (a) male and (b) female employees in (i) Scotland, (ii) Wales, (iii) England, (iv) Northern Ireland and (v) Great Britain who earned less than (1) £3·80 an hour, (2) £4.00 an hour, (3) £5.20 an hour and (4) £5.40 an hour in 1992.

Mr. McLoughlin: The available information for part-time women closest to that requested is given in the following table. Information for part-time men is not available.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if she will estimate the number of (a) male and (b) female employees in (i) Scotland, (ii) Wales, (iii) England, (iv) Northern Ireland and (v) Great Britain who work part-time.

Mr. McLoughlin: The latest information is as follows:

Part-time employees in employment: December 1992

Job Search

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people in Great Britain took part in (a) job clubs, (b) job interview guarantee and (c) job search seminars in 1990-91; and at what average cost per participant in (i) cash terms and (ii) 1992-93 prices.

Mr. McLoughlin: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mr. M. Fogden to Mr. Tony Lloyd, dated 14 April 1993:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State has asked me to write to you direct to respond to your Parliamentary Question to her about Jobclubs, Job Interview Guarantee and job search seminars. This is something which falls within the responsibilities she has delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

1,140,774 people joined Jobclubs in 1990-91. The average cost per participant in cash terms, excluding fares to attend Jobclub and VAT, was £141. The cost in 1992-93 prices is £158.

The Job Interview Guarantee (JIG) initiative was not generally available until April 1991 but was piloted in 20 inner city areas from September 1989 to March 1991. During this time 16,661 people were assisted through JIG. The average cost per participant is not available because the pilot phase was not costed separately.

Job search seminars were not introduced until July 1991, therefore the data you request does not exist.

I hope this is helpful.

As decided by the Administration Committee of the House of Commons, Chief Executive replies to written Parliamentary Questions will now be published in the Official Report. I will also place a copy of this letter in the Library of the House.

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are the maximum daily travelling expenses that can be claimed by unemployed people who participate in job search seminars or in job review workshops when they travel by (a) public or (b) private transport; whether participants in both schemes are entitled to travel expenses to enable them to attend the follow-up support sessions provided by the seminars and workshops; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. McLoughlin: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mr. M. Fodgen to Ms Clare Short, dated 14 April 1993:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State has asked me to write to you direct to respond to your Parliamentary Question to her about travel expenses for participants who attend job search seminars and Job Review Workshops.

Both programmes are of short duration, normally lasting two full days with some additional follow up. They are designed to help short term unemployed people find work more quickly. The seminars and workshops are run by organisations from the public, private and voluntary sectors, under contract to the Employment Service. People who attend are paid their travelling expenses to the main sessions and to the follow up events. This is done by the programme providers who re-imburse participants the cost of travelling from their homes to the seminar or Workshop. The providers then recover this money from the Employment Service.

Participants are expected to travel by the most cost effective mode of transport, normally standard class public transport. If participants prefer to use their own car or motorcycle they are paid a mileage allowance of 16p per mile provided this is cost effective, for example, where public transport is poor or there is good reason to use a vehicle. Otherwise if they choose to use their own transport they will receive the equivalent public transport cost.

People with a disability problem which affects their mobility may claim travelling expenses at the mileage rate if they wish to use their own private vehicle. They may also be re-imbursed parking fees. Taxi fares will also be paid where a person's disability prevents them using either public transport or private vehicle.

There is no upper limit laid down which states the maximum daily travelling allowance that can be claimed by participants. There is however a network of job search seminar and Job Review Workshop provision throughout the country and we would expect people to be offered places at a convenient location.

As decided by the Administration Committee of the House of Commons, Chief Executive replies to written Parliamentary Questions will now be published in the Official Report. I will also place a copy of this letter in the library of the House.

Career Development Loans

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people took up career development loans in 1989-90, 1990-91 and 1991-92.

Mr. McLoughlin: Information on the number of people taking out a career development loan in 1989-90, 1990-91 and 1991-92 is as follows:

	Number
1989-90	5,805
1990-91	8,116
1991-92	10,432

Workplace Nurseries

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what plans her Department has to encourage employers in the London area to adopt or maintain workplace nurseries.

Mr. McLoughlin: The Department encourages employers throughout the country to consider family-friendly employment policies including flexible working and help with child care, through publications such as "The Best of Both Worlds". The new out-of-school child care grant delivered by training and enterprise councils will create some 50,000 new child care places for school aged children over the next three years, which may include workplace facilities.

Employment Schemes

Mr. Dobson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the average amount spent per person on (a) ET, (b) YT, (c) the job interview guarantee scheme and (d) job clubs for each year for which figures are available.

Mr. McLoughlin [pursuant to his reply, 3 March 1993, c. 209-10]: I regret that my original reply contained an error. The figures given for the average amount spent per participant on YT for Great Britain given in my reply of 3 March 1993, Official Report, col. 209-10; were incorrect, due to a clerical error. The correct information for the average amount spent per person on employment training (ET), youth training (YT), the job interview guarantee scheme (JIG) and job clubs, in Great Britain, for each year for which figures are available is as follows:

HEALTH

GP Prescribing

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment she has made of the annual saving achieved in the NHS hospital sector by general practitioners' prescribing of oral contraceptives in respect of prevention of unwanted pregnancies and of abortions;

(2) what assessment she has made of the annual savings achieved in the NHS hospital sector by general practitioners' prescribing of (a) anti-hypertensive medicines, (b) medicines for treatment of late onset diabetes, (c) medicines for treatment of psoriasis and eczema and (d) medicines for the treatment of peptic ulcers.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Department has made no such specific assessment. General practitioners are aware that the cost-effective use of drugs can lead both to better patient care and to financial savings elsewhere in the national health service and in the public sector generally.

Policies on prescribing are designed to encourage such cost-effective prescribing while maintaining the pressure to cut out wasteful expenditure on drugs.

Health Checks

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if it remains her policy for automatic health checks to be given to people who reach the age of 75 years; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: It remains policy that family doctors should offer all their patients aged 75 and over an annual health check.

Medicines

Mr. Radice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in how many cases in 1991-92 the licensing authority determined an application for the grant of a licence under the Medicines Act in a way which differed from the advice of the Medicines Commission; and if she will identify each of those cases.

Dr. Mawhinney: None.

Mr. Radice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will place in the Library a copy of the Committee on Safety of Medicines' policy on the disclosure of information about adverse drug reactions;

(2) if she will place in the Library a copy of the Medicines Control Agency's policy on disclosure of information.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Medicines Control Agency has access to company data about medicinal products to carry out its functions under the provisions of the Medicines Act 1968. The Act places a responsibility on Ministers to protect the confidentiality of that information and makes it an offence for anyone to disclose it except in the performance of their duty.

It is the policy of the Medicines Control Agency to maintain the commercial confidentiality of information provided by the pharmaceutical industry and to protect the anonymity of individuals identified in information to which it has access; this applies to information made available to the Committee on Safety of Medicines. Information on adverse drug reactions is disclosed by the agency to doctors, pharmacists and related groups when relevant to specific safety concerns.

Pharmacies

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received regarding the effect on small pharmacies of the limit on the rise for 1993-94 in the global amount paid by her Department for pharmaceutical services.

Dr. Mawhinney: We have offered to increase the global sum out of which pharmacists' fees are paid by 1·5 per cent. in 1993-94. This accords with the Government's wider policy on public sector pay. How this money is allocated is a matter for discussion with the pharmacists' representatives. Those discussions are continuing.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what survey her Department has undertaken on the number of pharmacies closing in the Merton, Sutton and Wandsworth areas; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: Three pharmacies have closed between 1 October 1990 and 30 September 1992.

London Ambulance Service

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, further to her statement of 25 February, Official Report, column 1005, when she expects the South West Thames regional health authority to report on its proposals for strengthening accountability of the London ambulance service.

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave my hon. Friend the Member for Surbiton (Mr. Tracey) on 31 March at cols. 241-42.

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many outpatients' appointments have been cancelled by the London ambulance service for each month since October 1992.

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact Mr. Martin Gorham, chief executive of the London Ambulance Service, for details.

Drugs

Mr. Radice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the 10 established drug substances and six drug classes investigated in 1991-92 because of potential safety hazards not previously recognised; and what are the findings of each of the investigations.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information requested on the potential drug safety hazards investigated by the Medicines Control Agency is as follows:

The six drug classes

Non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs (NSAIDs). These drugs, used to treat arthritis, can cause rare cases of meningitis of a non-infective origin, and in some patients, kidney damage. The findings of investigations into these issues were published in Current Problems No. 32, issued in October 1991.

Angiotensin Converting Enzyme (ACE) inhibitors. Anaphylactoid reactions can occur when patients on ACE inhibitors, undergo renal dialysis with a particular type of dialysis membrane. The findings of an investigation into this issue were published in Current Problems No. 33, issued in February 1992.

Beta-agonists. Following concerns regarding a possible association between the use of beta-agonists in the treatment of patients with asthma and an increase in asthma mortality and morbidity, a Working Party was set up by the Committee on Safety of Medicines to review information on the safety of beta-agonists in asthma patients. They concluded that available evidence did not support a causal link between beta-agonist use and death from asthma. The findings of the Working Party were published in a report published in early 1992, and summarised in Current Problems No. 33, issued in February 1992.

Radiographic contrast media. Concerns have been expressed in Europe regarding the comparative safety of intravascular use of high- and low-osmolar contrast media. After review of the data it was concluded that there was no convincing evidence to suggest a difference between these types of media with respect to life-threatening or fatal reactions. The review has been published in Pharmaceutical Medicine 1993, 7; 47-55.

Quinolones. These antibiotics can cause convulsions in patients with or without a history of epilepsy; this reaction can also be induced by an interaction between these antibiotics and non-steroidal anti-inflammatory drugs. The findings of an investigation into this issue have been published in Current Problems No. 32, issued in October 1991.

Cephalosporins. These antibiotics can cause rare cases of pseudomembraneous colitis, a severe inflammatory condition of the colon. The findings of an investigation into this issue have been published in Current Problems No. 32, issued in October 1991.

The 10 drug substances

Gadolinium. Concern was raised from in vitro studies that gadolinium (Magnevist), a radiographic contrast medium, could affect viral infectivity. After review of the data it was concluded that the findings were unlikely to have relevance to the in vivo use of the agent.

Vitamin K. Concern arose from epidemiological studies reporting an association between intramuscular administration of vitamin K to newborn babies and the subsequent development of childhood cancer. After review of the studies the Committee on Safety of Medicines concluded that there was insufficient evidence to support the conclusions reached in the study. A letter was sent to all doctors by the Chief Medical Officer and the Chief Nursing Officer in December 1992 informing them about this matter. This issue is being kept under review.

Terodiline. This drug, used in the treatment of urinary incontinence, can cause rare but serious disturbances of cardiac rhythm. As a result of an investigation into this issue, the Chairman of the Committee on Safety of Medicines wrote to all doctors, dentists and pharmacists in July 1991, informing them of their findings. Following further reports of such reactions, the drug was withdrawn voluntarily by the pharmaceutical company. The findings of the review of the data were published in Current Problems Number 32, issued in October 1991.

Triazolam (Halcion). This drug is used in the short-term treatment of severe insomnia. Following a review of the data by the Committee on Safety of Medicines (CSM) this drug was withdrawn from the market in the United Kingdom in October 1991 and all doctors, dentists and pharmacists were informed by a letter from the Chairman of the CSM. The manufacturer of Halcion has appealed against the proposed action to revoke the product licences for Halcion, this matter is still under appeal.

Atenolol. Concern was raised by an epidemiological study which revealed that men receiving antenolo, had a higher death rate from cancer than those receiving diuretic or placebo. On review of the data it was concluded that it was unlikely that atenolol treatment was causally associated with increased cancer mortality in men and no action was considered necessary. This issue has been kept under review and the decision has been lent further support by two further studies which failed to find an association between atenolol treatment and increased cancer mortality.

Fenfluramine and dexfenfluramine. These drugs can cause the rare but serious adverse effect of pulmonary hypertension. The findings of an investigation into this issue were published in Current Problems Number 34, issued in June 1992. An epidemiological study is underway to investigate this matter further.

Carbimazole. This drug, used in the treatment of hyperthyroidism, can cause rare cases of serious white blood cell disorders. The findings of an investigation into this issue were published in Current Problems No. 32, issued in October 1991.

Flecainide. This drug, used in the treatment of cardiac rhythm disorders, can cause rare long-term adverse effects on the eyes, lungs or nervous system. The findings of an investigation into this issue were published in Current Problems No. 31, issued in June 1991.

Omeprazole. This drug, used in the treatment of peptic ulcers, can cause skin rashes, diarrhoea and headache, which can be severe. The findings of an investigation into these side effects were published in Current Problems No. 31, issued in June 1991.

Flucloxacillin. This antibiotic can cause jaundice. The findings of an investigation into this issue were published in Current Problems No. 35, issued in November 1992.

Copies of all the publications referred to will be placed in the Library.

Child Health Services

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) to what extent hospitals are meeting the guidelines suggested in "Welfare of Children and Young People in Hospital" regarding (a) the provision of a named nurse for each child admitted, (b) the provision of accommodation for parents of children admitted to hospital, (c) education and play facilities for children, (d) separate facilities for adolescents and (e) the provision of separate facilities for children in (i) accident and emergency departments and (ii) out-patients departments;

(2) what plans she has for monitoring child health services; and if she will make a statement;

(3) what progress is being made towards ensuring that all children admitted to hospital are accommodated in separate wards.

Mr. Yeo: This information is not available centrally. A recent study by the Audit Commission, "Children First" (HMSO 1993), concluded that the standards set in our good practice guide, "Welfare of Children and Young People in Hospital" have not been fully implemented. We intend to address this through the review procedure whereby the national health service management executive holds health authorities to account for specified aspects of their performance.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to reduce inequalities in child health.

Mr. Yeo: The Government's approach to variations in the health of children and other groups was set out in "The Health of the Nation" Green and White Papers (Cm. 1523 and 1986), copies of which are available in the Library. The five key areas include accidents as the most common cause of death in children over the age of one year, but the White Paper recognises that in other fields too success with children will be crucial to the long-term success of the strategy.

Our aim is to reduce variations by tackling specific issues and needs which can be targeted for effective action. Examples of such action within the field of child health include national and local initiatives to reduce perinatal death, including cot deaths, which area is already showing significant results; improved immunisation, already at record levels, to ensure protection against death and disability from preventable disease; and increased participation by general practitioners in child health surveillance, thereby providing screening and health promotion for children individually as part of integrated family health care.

In making such changes, the Government will continue to make the best use of improved arrangements for the delivery of health care. We have provided guidance and are undertaking monitoring to support health authorities in assessing children's health care needs locally, and in integrating family, community and hospital services.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to ensure that children engaged in sufficient levels of physical activity to establish good health in later life.

Mr. Sackville: We have recently announced the setting up of a "Health of the Nation" task force on physical activity which will consider how to encourage people to obtain lifelong benefits from such activity. The task force will be able to build on the Government's recent initiative whereby physical education is a compulsory subject for all pupils in maintained schools between the ages of five to 16. It serves to give young people a knowledge of the long-term benefits of a healthy lifestyle and encourages the practice of health-related exercise.

NHS Pay

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what representations she has made to managers of trust hospitals in Leeds concerning pay awards for (a) professional and technical staff and (b) nursing staff;

(2) what guidelines have been provided to trust hospitals concerning pay awards for ancillary workers.

Dr. Mawhinney: A copy of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State's letter of 12 November 1992 to chairmen of all health service-employing bodies which set out arrangements for implementing the policy of public sector pay restraint throughout the national health service, is available in the Library. We have made no specific representations to Leeds NHS trusts. Management guidance has been issued by the chief executive of the national health service management executive relating to all staff in health authorities and trusts.

Child Psychologists

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many child psychologists were working in the NHS in each of the last five years, by region.

Dr. Mawhinney: This information is not available centrally.

Drugs (Side-effects)

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to establish a national computer record of the side-effects of drugs.

Dr. Mawhinney: Such a computer record already exists. Under the yellow card scheme introduced in 1964, doctors are requested to report suspected adverse drug reactions, and pharmaceutical companies have a statutory requirement to report these reactions to the licensing authority. Such reports are entered on to a computer database operated by the Medicines Control Agency. In 1991, a new computer system, adverse drug reactions on-line information tracking—ADROIT—was introduced to improve the speed and effectiveness of monitoring adverse drug reactions.

Female Circumcision

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for Redcar, Ms Mowlam of 18 February, Official Report, column 322, what further guidance she plans to issue to GPs on female circumcision.

Mr. Sackville: None.

Special Health Authorities

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the budget of each special health authority for (a) 1992-93 and (b) 1993-94; and what is the projected distribution of funds for these authorities for 1994-95.

Mr. Sackville: The budget allocations for 1992-93 and 1993-94 for special health authorities are given in the table. The figures include both capital and revenue.

The figures for UKTSSA do not include money allocated to the SHA for reimbursement of donor hospitals as the money does not contribute to the running costs of the organisation. The HA in effect manages the funds used to reimburse donor hospitals for maintaining cadavers prior to transplantation, for the Department.
The figures for 1992-93 are subject to validation by audit. The figures for 1993-94 are initial allocations, which will be added to by in-year adjustment, as appropriate.
Figures for 1994-95 cannot be projected at this early stage.
The CBLA became the NBA with effect from 1 April 1993.

Hepatitis B

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her Department's estimate of the number of hepatitis B carriers in each of the last five years for which figures are available.

Mr. Sackville: It is estimated that about one person per 1,000 of the population in the United Kingdom is a carrier of hepatitis B. This proportion is unlikely to have changed significantly over the past five years. The number of cases of hepatitis B has been falling over the same period and was at the lowest level recorded in 1991, the latest year for which figures are available, at 517 cases.

NHS Information

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 26 March, Official Report, column 751, how information is classified as validated; and what other kinds of information are held by the NHS management executive but not regarded as information held centrally.

Dr. Mawhinney: Validated information is that which has been checked by the Department for accuracy, consistency and statistical reliability. The national health service management executive also holds a disparate range of administrative and management data obtained from a number of sources which may not be compiled on a comparable basis or use common definitions, or which may contain subjective judgments.

NHS Pay Award

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment she has made of the effects upon recruitment to the national health service of the 1·5 per cent. pay award.

Dr. Mawhinney: We do not expect recruitment or retention of national health service staff to be adversely affected.

Child Protection Teams

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many child protection teams were working in the NHS in each of the last five years, by region.

Mr. Yeo: This information is not available centrally. The organisation of child protection teams and the planning of the investigations is a matter for local authority social services departments and police, with other agencies which have specialist knowledge such as medical services with the national health service.

Drug Licences

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average test period for new drugs granted a licence in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) other EC states.

Dr. Mawhinney: For the period January 1992 to December 1992, the average gross time taken to grant a product licence for new drugs was 17 months.

Comparable statistics for other EC states are not available.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to conduct an inquiry into the numbers and causes of deaths among patients on waiting lists for national health service treatment.

Mr. Sackville: None. Patients may die from a wide range of causes, in common with the rest of the population, while waiting for non-urgent treatment. Emergencies are always treated immediately and patients who need urgent treatment are given priority.

Data Protection Act 1984

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many certificates have been signed under the terms of section 27 of the Data Protection Act 1984 for each year since 1987.

Mr. Sackville: There have been none so far as the Department of Health is concerned.

Paediatric Waiting Lists

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will provide details of paediatric waiting lists for each of the last five years by region.

Mr. Sackville: Waiting time information by speciality is given in "Hospital Waiting Lists, In-patients and Day Cases", published twice a year, copies of which are available in the Library.

Child Accident Prevention

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much is being spent by her Department on child accident prevention in the current financial year.

Mr. Yeo: The cost of the accident prevention work carried out within the national health service cannot be precisely calculated. In 1992-93 we awarded a grant of £103,000 per year for three years to the Child Accident Prevention Trust towards its central administrative costs. In 1993-94 we have awarded the trust a project grant of £10,000 per year for three years towards the cost of a project to promote the adoption of accident prevention measures by health and local authorities.

GP Fund Holders

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish the up-to-date guidance given to GP fund holders about how they construct their budget.

Dr. Mawhinney: Budget setting guidance was issued in November 1992 under cover of EL (92)83. A copy is available in the Library.

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the guidelines for the financial arrangements governing GP fund holders were last updated.

Dr. Mawhinney: The updated general practitioner fund holder manual of accounts was issued in March 1993.

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make it her policy to ensure that GP fund holders' budgets and accounts are kept in a common form.

Dr. Mawhinney: The general practitioner fund holder manual of accounts sets out the accounting rules to be followed by all fund holders. It includes common formats for monthly budget monitoring reports and annual accounts.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance has been issued by her Department to general practitioners wishing to become fund holders with regard to prior consultation with the patients of the practice concerned.

Dr. Mawhinney: None.

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what audit her Department has carried out to assess the quality of patient care administered by general practitioner fund-holding practices and non-fund holding practices.

Dr. Mawhinney: Every family health services authority was required to establish a medical audit advisory group by 1 April 1991 to direct, co-ordinate and monitor medical audit activities within all general medical practices in its area. In exercising their purchasing role, general practitioner fund holders are also subject to monitoring and scrutiny by regional health authorities, which are responsible for the management of the fund-holding scheme.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information her Department has received from the Audit Commission in relation to its study of GP fund-holding in 1991-92.

Dr. Mawhinney: Apart from discharging its statutory audit responsibility, the Audit Commission did not undertake a study of general practitioner fund-holding in 1991-92.

Hip Replacement

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans she has to issue advice to patients regarding the most reliable hip replacement implants;

(2) which hip replacement implants which have been used in the NHS in the last 14 years have the highest (a) failure rate and (b) success rate.

Mr. Sackville: Information on the outcome of hip replacement operations is not available centrally. It is the responsibility of clinicians to give advice to patients on the various types of hip implants available, based upon the individual needs of the patient.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what tests are carried out on hip replacement implants before they can be marketed.

Mr. Sackville: There are no statutory requirements for the marketing of hip replacements implants.

Since 1986, hip implants have been controlled by the voluntary Department of Health manufacturer registration scheme, which requires that new designs should undergo appropriate testing prior to their release for general sale. There are currently 27 registered manufacturers of hip implants and the vast majority of these products implanted in the United Kingdom are from registered sources.

From 1 January 1995, the European directive on medical devices will place the control of hip implants on a formal statutory basis, and manufacturers will be required to submit details of manufacturing and design to third party assessment.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to introduce a national register of hip replacements and revisions to provide an accurate measure of revision rate.

Mr. Sackville: We have no such plans. The national reporting and investigation centre, part of the Department, investigates problems with medical devices notified to them by clinicians.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of hip replacement operations carried out in the last 14 years have required revision.

Mr. Sackville: It is not possible to identify precisely what proportion of operations required revision, but in 1989-90 and 1990-91 respectively, an estimated 9·6 per cent. and 9·5 per cent. of hip joint replacements were revisions.

Disabled People

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what study she has made of the legal settlement reached by Theresa Aspinall and Wigan council in regard to the council's statutory duties under section 2 of the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Act 1970; what steps she is taking to draw the implications of this case and the settlement for other disabled people to the attention of other local authorities with legal duties under the Act; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: We have seen a report of this case, indicating that the difficulties have now been resolved. Local authorities are fully aware of their duties under the 1970 Act.

Wessex RHA (Computers)

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on Government policy on the development of the RISP project by Wessex regional health authority.

Mr. Sackville: As the district auditor made clear in his report published in July 1992, the RISP project was characterised by a lack of project and management control. The Government accept this judgment, as does Wessex regional health authority, which has taken extensive remedial action.

The Department launched a national information management and technology strategy in December 1992. A key component is the need for health authorities to assess all proposed IT investment against an approved criteria to ensure that future IM and T investment obtains value for money.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will make a statement on the state of discussions between her Department and the Wessex regional health authority on the RISP project.

Mr. Sackville: Officials from the Department continue to have discussions with Wessex regional health authority on a range of matters including RISP, which was abandoned in April 1990.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will place in the Library all correspondence from Ministers to the Wessex regional health authority on the subject of RISP from 1 January 1989 to the present; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: A copy of the correspondence has been placed in the Library.

Advisory Committee on NHS Drugs

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will publish a list of the membership of the Advisory Committee on NHS Drugs indicating the area of medical expertise of each member.

Dr. Mawhinney: The names of the members and their areas of medical expertise are:

Advisory Committee on National Health Service Drugs Membership

Regional Health Authorities

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the chairs, executive and non-executive members of English regional health authorities, indicating (a) the gender of each member and (b) which members are direct appointments by the Secretary of State.

Dr. Mawhinney: All chairmen and non-executive members of the 14 English regional health authorities are appointed by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and are as follows. The appointment of executive members is a matter for regional health authorities.

Drug and Alcohol Rehabilitation

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will conduct an urgent review of the funding arrangements of drug and alcohol rehabilitation services.

Mr. Yeo: We have no plans at present to conduct such a review.

Schizophrenia

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 17 February, to the hon. Member for Sutton and Cheam Lady Olga Maitland, Official Report, column 202, if she will make it a requirement to register patients suffering from schizophrenia.

Mr. Yeo: We have no plans for this type of registration. District health authorities, in collaboration with local social services departments, are required to initiate individually tailored care programmes for all in-patients about to be discharged from mental illness hospitals and all new patients accepted by the specialist psychiatric services.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what communications she has had with the World Health Organisation on schizophrenia.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Department has regular contact with the World Health Organisation to discuss issues of common concern and exchange information on mental health issues including schizophrenia.

Care Providers

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to establish minimum national standards of care for care providers.

Mr. Yeo: Standards in social care are set in legislation, in codes of practice and formal guidance, and increasingly through contract specification. There are no plans to replace this wide range of controls with a single set of national minimum standards.

Community Care

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans she has to monitor the way community care is being implemented in practice;

(2) if she has any plans to review the amount of money that has been allocated to local authorities to provide community care.

Mr. Yeo: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Wakefield (Mr. Hinchliffe) on 10 November 1992, column 772.

Health Visitors

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what security measures will be adopted to protect health visitors who visit drug or alcohol users in their homes as part of the community care programme; and if she will make a statement.

Dr. Mawhinney: The security measures provided to support health visitors in the course of their employment are a matter for their employing authorities. We would expect procedures to be agreed locally to take account of all potentially dangerous situations.

Hospital Services

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research is being undertaken or commissioned by her Department or the NHS management executive on the possibility of charging for any hospital services.

Mr. Sackville: None.

Drug and Alcohol Rehabilitation

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to monitor the availability of drug and alcohol rehabilitation services following the full implementation of community care.

Mr. Yeo: Goldsmiths' college has been commissioned to undertake a special exercise to monitor the impact of community care on independent sector providers of services to alcohol and drugs misusers. Monthly progress reports will ensure that the Government have information on how these service providers will be affected by the implementation of community care.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what measures she is taking to ensure that guidance issued by her Department to local authorities regarding assessment, admission and fast track procedures for people with drug and alcohol problems is being adhered to.

Mr. Yeo: Two guidance circulars have been issued to local authorities which address the needs of this client group: LAC(93)2, which encourages local authorities to pay particular attention to the needs of alcohol and drug misusers within community care, and LAC(93)7, which addresses the question of local authority responsibility for clients whose "ordinary residence" is in their area.

In addition we have asked the local authority associations to collaborate with independent sector providers in the development of good practice advice on fast track assessment and out-of-area referrals. This was circulated to local authorities on 26 March 1993.

The performance of local authorities in implementing community care is being monitored by the social services inspectorate.

Needs Assessment

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to rescind guidelines that were issued to local authorities that the extent of a person's needs should not be assessed unless those needs could be met.

Mr. Yeo: No such guidelines have been issued.

Miss Gibelli

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what inquiries she has made into the circumstances under which Miss Gibelli (a) was taken into a public house and (b) escaped whilst on a visit to the ideal home exhibition while under the secure custody of her Department.

Mr. Yeo: As soon as officials from the national health service management executive were made aware of these events they contacted clinicians and managers and obtained full details of the circumstances of the two incidents referred to. Ministers have been kept informed.

AIDS

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much each London borough bid for AIDS support grant for 1993-94; and how much they were awarded.

Mr. Sackville: The information is shown in the table. For comparison purposes, details of 1992-93 allocations are also provided.

Administrative Costs

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the administrative costs in each of the national health service regions in each year since 1987-88 (a) in cash prices, (b) in 1987-88 prices and (c) as a percentage of total expenditure.

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 17 March 1993]: Figures for headquarters administration for hospital and community health services in England have been placed in the Library.

The figures for 1991-92 are provisional and are not comparable with those for earlier years. They include health authorities' expenditure on the purchaser function and, for some regions, other significant costs.

Wolds Prison

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which prison service practice or procedures are not required to be followed by the contractor under the terms of the contract of HM prison Wolds.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the prison service. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 14 April 1993.

PRISON SERVICE PRACTICES AND PROCEDURES AT HM PRISON WOLDS

The Secretary of State has asked me to write to you directly in reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking which Prison Service practices or procedures do not have to be followed by the contractor at HM Prison Wolds.

2. In response to an earlier Question answered on 23 March, the Minister of State supplied you with a list of Prison Service practices and procedures which Wolds management must follow under the contract. The contractor is bound by the Prison Act 1952, the Criminal Justice Act 1991, the Prison Rules 1964 as amended and the contract. But beyond those items listed in the earlier reply, which are mandatory under the contract, he does not have to follow any other Prison Service practices or procedures. These are numerous and are contained in standing orders, circular instructions, various manuals and other forms of advice to governors. I am afraid that we do not have a consolidated compilation of all this material and it would not be practicable to list it all out. It is up to contractors to draw up their own such instructions.

Foreign Nationals

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign nationals were held (a) on remand and (b) sentenced in each prison in March; what proportion of these were men; and how many came from (i) Nigeria, (ii) Ghana, (iii) other African countries, (iv) Columbia, (v) other South and Central American countries, (vi) India, (vii) Pakistan, (viii) Bangladesh, (ix) the Irish Republic, (x) the United States of America, (xi) the Netherlands, (xii) other European countries, (xiii) the middle east and (xiv) Jamaica.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the prison service. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 14 April 1993.

I have been asked to reply to your question about the numbers of unconvicted and sentenced men and women in our prisons broken down by nationality.

The latest available provisional figures are for 28 February and are given in the table, which has been placed in the Library.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many foreign nationals were in British prisons for drug-related offences in March; and what proportion this represents of all those in prison for drugs-related offences.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the prison service. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 14 April 1993.

I have been asked to reply to your question about foreign nationals in British prisons for drugs-related offences.

The latest available provisional figures are for 28 February and cover just over 90 per cent. of the prison population. On that date about 680 foreign nationals were recorded centrally as being under sentence for drugs offences in England and Wales, excluding any where drugs offences were not the principal offence. They accounted for 27 per cent. of the total population under sentence for drugs offences. The nationality of some further 70 prisoners under sentence for drugs offences was not recorded.

Prisoners

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken to implement the recommendation in the Woolf report that there should be a new prison rule that no establishment should hold prisoners in excess of its certified normal accommodation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the prison service. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 14 April 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to write to you in response to your Parliamentary Question, for priority written answer on 14 April, on the implementation of the Woolf report recommendation on overcrowding.

The recommendation was for there to be a Prison Rule that no establishment should hold more prisoners than is provided for in its certified normal level of accommodation, with provision for Parliament to be informed if exceptionally there is to be a material departure from that rule. It was decided however that it would not be practicable to operate such a system at this stage. Instead the Prison Service has improved the overcrowding information provided for Parliament (see annexes 4 and 5 of the Report of the Work of the Prison Service April 1991-March 1992, cm 2087).

As the white paper on Custody, Care and Justice (cm 1647) explained, the Prison Service plans to provide an estate able to operate in equilibrium without particular prisons or areas suffering from overcrowding. A significant improvement in the situation has already taken place. There are at present nearly 3,000 vacancies in the estate as a whole. Overcrowding is now largely confined to the older local prisons and remand centres and further expansion of this part of the estate is planned. In addition the actual level of overcrowding being experienced has been greatly reduced in recent years. The Prison Service's business plan also includes a commitment to end trebling in cells by the end of March 1994.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) Indian, (b) Pakistani, (c) Bangladeshi, (d) Afro-Caribbean and (e) other ethnic minority people were (i) on remand and (ii) sentenced in each prison in March; and how many in each case were (x) men and (y) women.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the prison service. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 14 April 1993.

I have been asked to reply to your question about numbers of unconvicted and convicted men and women in our prisons broken down by nationality.

The latest available provisional figures are for 28 February and are given in the table which has been placed in the Library.

Woolf Report

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he has taken to date to implement the recommendations of the Woolf report; and what steps he intends to take to implement its outstanding recommendations.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the prison service. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 14 April 1993.

Implementation of the Woolf Report

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your Question about the steps taken to implement the recommendations of the Woolf Report.

The Government's response to the Woolf Report is set out in its White Paper "Custody, Care and Justice" (Cm 1647), published in September 1991. This described an ambitious programme of reforms. Our progress in implementing these is set out in the Home Secretary's letter of 8 February responding to Mr. Amess' Question on 14 January, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House.

Our plans for the future are set out in the Prison Service's Corporate Plan, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House. This makes it clear that one of the Service's key themes for the next three years will be the implementation of futher reforms flowing from the White Paper.

Re-offenders

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has about re-offending rates for (a) men and (b) women who have served a prison sentence; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: Information on reconviction rates of those who have served a prison sentence is published regularly. The latest figures can be found in chapter 9 of "Prison Statistics England and Wales 1989", Cm 1221. Of those discharged in 1986, 63 per cent. of male young offenders. 42 per cent. of adult males and 34 per cent. of adult females were convicted of a further standard list offence within two years of release.

Prison Accommodation

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the certified normal level of accommodation for each prison in England and Wales; and what was the actual population for each prison in March.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the prison service. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 14 April:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question, for priority written answer on 14 April, on CNA and population.

The attached table shows certified normal accommodation (CNA) and population for all Prison Service establishments in England and Wales on 31 March 1993.

Squatting

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he proposes to announce changes to the legislation on squatting; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to his question of 3 February at column 203. My right hon. and learned Friend hopes that he will be in a position to announce his proposals on squatting shortly.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the responses to the consultation paper on squatting.

Mr. Jack: I have already given a general account of the response made to the consultation paper in my reply of 17 June 1992 to a question from the hon. Member for Greenwich (Mr. Raynsford) at column 522. Respondents were not asked to agree to publication when their comments were invited. It would not therefore be appropriate to publish the 216 replies which we received.

Police Training College

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what would be the security implications of contracting out the police training college; and what safeguards would be introduced.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Careful consideration will be given to any security implications before a decision is made to contract out any of the services which are currently provided by the police staff college.

Market Testing

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff who have in the past been employed in the market testing unit at the Home Office and who were involved in the commissioning of the Coopers and Lybrand study of 1992 into businesses suitable for market testing now work for Coopers and Lybrand; and when those appointments were referred to the Permanent Secretary.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: We are aware of only one, whose appointment was referred under the normal procedures to my right hon. and learned Friend in October 1992. The civil service cannot apply blanket bans of the subsequent employment of people who leave the civil service but if the hon. Member is seeking to imply that there was anything irregular or unusual in this case I strongly refute that implication.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consideration he has given since 3 February to whether the 1993-94 market testing programme should continue in its originally planned form.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: A provisional Home Office market testing programme for 1993-94 has been drawn up. Once the details have been finalised, we will make an announcement in the summer.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the provisional market testing list for the period September 1993 to March 1995; and what is the current annual cost of each function.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: No. I intend to announce in the summer the Home Office programme for the period October 1993 to September 1994.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps will be taken to ensure that operation and financial matters of any function will remain accountable to Parliament in the event of the contracting out of any Home Office function during the market testing period September 1993 to March 1995.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Subject to respect for commercial confidentiality, contracting out does not affect accountability to Parliament for services provided by the Home Office.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consultation there has been with Home Office unions since the market testing initiative of January 1992; whether the Home Office has published a code of practice on market testing consultation; and whether the first draft of any such document has been issued to the staff associations.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: There have been consultations with Home Office unions, including a meeting of the market testing sub-committee of the Home Office departmental Whitley Council. A draft code of practice has been produced and consultation with the unions continues.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effect of the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981 on the Home Office functions that are to be market tested during 1993-94.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: We consult Home Office legal advisers as necessary about the application of the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish a comprehensive list of all Home Office functions which will be market tested during 1993 and 1994; and if he will give details of the savings he expects to make or has set as a target.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: We have drawn up a provisional Home Office market testing programme for 1993-94, but I propose to consider it further before finalising it. The functions being market tested to 30 September 1993 were published on 25 November 1992 in the "Citizen's Charter First Report: 1992".

Contracting Out

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the estimated cost to the Home Office of defending the judicial review in respect of the contracting out of prison education.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The application by Kent county council for judicial review of decisions taken by the Department on competitive tendering for the future provision of education services in prison establishments in England and Wales has yet to be heard. To date, additional legal costs of just over £8,000 have been incurred by the prison service in connection with the action.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff are employed in the market testing unit at the Home Office for the latest date available; and how may of them are legally trained.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: On Tuesday 6 April 1993 the equivalent of 41·7 full-time staff were employed in the Home Office market testing unit. None has any legal training but they consult Home Office legal staff as necessary on legal problems.

Police National Computer

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what would be the security implications of contracting out the police national computer organisation; and what safeguards would be introduced.

Mr. Charles Wardle: If, as a result of the market testing programme, the operation of the Hendon data centre, which is responsible for maintaining the police national computer service, is contracted out, the contract will be placed only with an organisation which is able to maintain at least the present levels of security. The security requirements will be specified in detail if and when bids for the contract are invited.

Emergency Planning Strategy

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to amend London's emergency planning strategy; and what plans he has to give the LFCDA extra emergency planning powers.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Draft new civil defence regulations were published last December and comments received are being considered. We have no plans to give the LFCDA extra emergency planning powers.

Emergency plans are drawn up locally by the emergency services, local authorities and other agencies where necessary. The authorities in London have recently agreed, and published, a major disaster plan.

Somali Asylum Seekers

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the total numbers of Somali asylum seekers for each of the past three years who have (a) been granted refugee status, (b) been given exceptional leave and (c) leave pending his consideration.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Information for 1990-92 (excluding dependants) on applications for asylum by Somali nationals, and on decisions, is given in the table. No applicant is required to leave the United Kingdom until his case has been decided.

[5] Figures from 1 December 1991 only. Prior to this, these refusals are included in the column "Refused asylum and exceptional leave after determination".
[6] At end 1992, 2,755 applications were outstanding.

Figures rounded to the nearest 5 with * = 1 or 2, and . . = not separately identifiable.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many dependants of Somali asylum seekers have been granted residence in the United Kingdom (a) within the rules and (b) exceptionally for each of the past three years.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Information on acceptances for settlement of dependants of persons who had applied for asylum is not identified separatley in the statistics.

Data Protection Act 1984

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many certificates have been signed under the terms of section 27 of the Data Protection Act 1984 for each year since 1987.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I am aware of none so far as the Home Office is concerned.

Burglaries

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his oral answer of 11 February, Official Report, column 1101, if he will give details of the 90 per cent. reduction in burglary in the Sparkbrook area that he quoted.

Mr. Jack: The reduction in question occurred on the Primrose estate in the hon. member's constituency. I regret that I mistakenly referred to Sparkbrook in my previous answer.

Child Abuse

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has to amend the provisions in the Criminal Justice Acts concerning video-taped evidence in child abuse cases;

(2) how many representations he has received concerning the use of video-taped evidence in child abuse hearings.

Mr. Jack: Since October 1992, section 54 of the Criminal Justice Act 1991 has allowed for video recordings of interviews with children to be admitted as evidence-in-chief in certain criminal proceedings. My Department regularly receives requests for advice both orally and in writing about the operation of this provision. The general impression which they give is that the changes introduced by the Act command widespread support. We have also recently received representations from the NSPCC generally about the needs of abused children in the legal process.

Although we have no present plans to amend the Act, we have commissioned independent research into the use of video recorded evidence from children in criminal proceedings. We will review the current law in the light of the results of that research and of any representations made to us.

Safer Cities

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if local authorities are being encouraged to apply for safer city project funding.

Mr. Jack: In areas which have safer cities projects, local authorities may apply for grant support to assist with the implementation of local crime prevention initiatives. The safer cities progress report for 1991-92 shows that, since grant funding began in April 1989, £5·3 million out of a total of £16 million has been paid to local authorities for this purpose.

It is the Government's intention to expand the safer cities programme in line with my statement of 7 January. I am not yet in a position to provide further details of the arrangements for the next phase. However, I would expect local authorities to continue to benefit from safer cities grant funding.

Domestic Fires

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many incidents of fires have occurred in (a) furnished rented accommodation in a single family dwelling and (b) furnished accommodation in houses in multiple occupation since March 1988.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Information is not collected in the form requested. The table gives the available information on dwelling fires attended by local authority fire brigades in the United Kingdom from April 1988 to the end of 1991.

Body Searches

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of methods for the detection of weapons, metal implements, drugs or explosives concealed within a person's clothing or body as an alternative to strip searching.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The police scientific development branch, on behalf of the Home Office, has carried out extensive research into the effectiveness of metal detectors. A hand-held search tool exists which will locate metal objects which are concealed under clothing when run over the body of a fully clothed person. However, trials have shown that this machine is unable to detect syringe needles and the police scientific development branch has been commissioned to consider a design for a hand-held device which will be capable of detecting them.

There are methods to detect whether people have been in contact with explosives or drugs, but these do not establish whether an individual is still in possession of them.

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of the appointments made by him as listed in "Public Bodies 1992" came within the categories set out in paragraphs 49 and 50 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers" and required a submission to the Prime Minister.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Eight.

American Visitors (Ethical Beliefs)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to question passengers on arrival from the USA on their ethical beliefs, and to deny entry to any person who sanctions the use of violence in pursuit of their anti-abortion beliefs.

Mr. Charles Wardle: It is not generally the practice of the immigration service to question passengers about their ethical beliefs and it would be both oppressive and impractical to require them routinely to do so. The immigration rules provide that a passenger requiring leave to enter, except the wife or child under 18 of a person settled in the United Kingdom, may be refused entry on the ground that his exclusion is conducive to the public good. This may arise either because my right hon. and learned Friend has personally so directed or where, from information available to the immigration officer, it seems right to refuse leave to enter on that ground. These powers will continue to be exercised in appropriate cases.

Entry Decisions

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will now make it his practice to disclose the reasons why individual passengers have been admitted, or refused entry, to the United Kingdom.

Mr. Charles Wardle: My right hon. and learned Friend has no plans to change existing practice. Reasons for the grant or refusal of leave to enter are normally only given to the individual concerned or his nominated representative. We do however reserve the right to comment on the reasons for any decision where the person affected by it has sought to publicise the matter, or where it appears to be in the public interest to do so.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Fair Employment Tribunal

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will estimate the total cost to 31 December 1992 of cases brought (a) against local authorities, (b) other public bodies and (c) private businesses, alleging religious and political discrimination, since the establishment of the Fair Employment Tribunal.

Mr. Atkins: Estimates cannot be provided as no information is available on the total costs to parties involved in such cases.

Labour Statistics

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people are employed by (a) the Industrial Development Board and (b) the Local Enterprise Development Unit.

Mr. Atkins: At 31 March 1993 the Industrial Development Board for Northern Ireland employed directly 387 people, including 10 on a part-time basis, and the Local Enterprise Development Unit 232 people, including three on a part-time basis.

Infant Mortality Rates

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what were the perinatal and infant mortality rates for Northern Ireland within the last year up to the present date.

Mr. Hanley: Mortality rates are determined and recorded by calender year. For 1992, the perinatal mortality rate was 8·2 per 1,000 total births. This rate includes still-births of 24 to 27 completed weeks' gestation registered from 1 October 1992, when the gestation period was reduced to 24 weeks. For 1992, the infant mortality rate was 6·0 per 1,000 live births.

General Consumer Council

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people are employed by the General Consumer Council for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Atkins: Eight full-time and two part-time staff.

Road Gritting

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much has been spent by the Northern Ireland Department of the Environment on road gritting in the province during each of the last five years.

Mr. Atkins: The information is as follows:

Financial Year	Amount (£ million)
1988-89	[2]2·2
1989-90	[2]2·7
1990-91	[3]4·0
1991-92	[3]2·8
[1]1992-93	[3]3·3

[1]Provisional.
[2]Including VAT.
[3]Excluding VAT.

EC Secondments

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his answer of 23 March, Official Report, column 559, how many of those who have completed their secondment to the European Commission or UKREP are still employed by his Department.

Mr. Mates: All the officers who have completed their period of secondment to the EC Commission or UKREP are still employed by the Northern Ireland civil service.

One officer, having completed the maximum three years period allowed for detached national experts, was given special leave from the NICS to enable him to continue working for the Commission for a further period of five years. The officer is expected to return to the NICS on completion of his current contract with the Commission.

Another officer was also given special leave to enable him to undertake a period contract with the Northern Ireland centre in Europe, which is located in Brussels.

Deaths on Duty

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many (a) soldiers, (b) policemen and (c) civil servants have been killed on duty in Northern Ireland during the last 10 years.

Mr. Mates: A total of 76 police officers and 71 soldiers have been killed on duty in Northern Ireland in terrorist-related incidents in the period from 1 January 1983 to 31 December 1992. Information on civil servants killed is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Investment

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many international firms are employed by the department of commerce, directly or indirectly through Government Departments, to promote investment in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Atkins: The Industrial Development Board for Northern Ireland, acting through the Department of Economic Development, has responsibility for attracting inward investment to Northern Ireland. Across its global target markets, the IDB currently employs the services of:

(a) three international public relation firms to promote Northern Ireland as an inward investment location. These are, Kommunikation and Burson-Marsteller in Germany; Burson-Marsteller in Korea; and K-Concepts in Taiwan. In both the United States and Japan the selection of a PR agency is underway at present and appointments are expected to be made shortly; and

(b) two promotional support agencies who represent IDB in Asia Pacific and Brussels. These are Torne Investments Ltd. in Japan and Brussels and Jadehouse Investment Ltd. in Taiwan.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what efforts have been made to attract industrial development to Northern Ireland from the United States of America within the past four years; and what have been the results of such efforts.

Mr. Atkins: The search for new investment is spearheaded by IDB staff located in the USA. Until March 1990 the small team in New York was complemented by other Northern Ireland staff assigned to the British consulate general network throughout the USA.

With effect from April 1990 Northern Ireland established its own network of offices in New York, Los Angeles and a headquarters in Chicago reflecting the main centres of manufacture within the USA.

The core work of identifying and meeting potential investors is supported by a continuing promotional programme of cultivation of media, trade organisations and other key business contacts aimed at raising the profile of IDB activities within the USA.

In the past four years IDB representatives have visited 1,019 companies and encouraged 248 potential investors to visit Northern Ireland. Five major projects entailing an investment to £189 million and promoting 1,600 new jobs have been announced in the last four years.

In addition to the search for new investors close contact is maintained with the parent companies of the 34 United States-owned operations in Northern Ireland with a view to encouraging further investment. In the past four years 14 of these companies committed to investment programmes totalling £250 million which will provide 1,200 new jobs and safeguard a further 1,850 jobs.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what arrangements are made by his Department for publishing information about financial assistance to industry within Northern Ireland.

Mr. Mates: The Department of Economic Development has available a wide range of publications on financial assistance which is available to industry. These are obtainable from the DED businesses—the Industrial Development Board, the Local Enterprise Development Unit, the Training and Employment Agency, the Northern Ireland tourist board, the Industrial Research and Technology Unit and the Energy Efficiency Service.

The Department of Agriculture produces a wide range of information on the financial assistance available to the agricultural industry in Northern Ireland. This can be obtained from the Department's headquarters or from local county agricultural development offices. The Department also issues press releases on schemes of financial assistance when these are introduced or modified. In addition, the Department is currently updating its "At Your Service" booklet, a guide to the Department's services including financial assistance available and points of contact for further information.

Belfast Harbour

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the size of the Belfast harbour estate; and how many persons are employed therein.

Mr. Atkins: The Belfast harbour estate comprises 765 hectares of land and 440 hectares of water. Approximately 17,000 people are employed therein.

Prison Visits

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the total sum of public money paid in social benefits to dependent relatives resident in Northern Ireland for the purpose of prison visits in Great Britain.

Mr. Hanley: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Social Security Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Alec Wylie, who wrote to the hon. Gentleman on 6 April.

Letter from Alec Wylie to Mr. Peter Robinson dated 6 April 1993:

As I am responsible for Social Security operational matters your recent Parliamentary Question on the amount of benefit paid to dependent relatives resident in Northern Ireland for the purpose of prison visits in Great Britain has been passed to me for reply.

During the twelve months ended 31 December 1992 there was a total sum of £30,730 paid under the Prison Visits scheme to people visiting relatives in prisons in Great Britain.

I hope you find this information helpful. A copy of this reply will appear in the official report and copies will be placed in the Library.

Housing

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the present number of first and second preference applicants on the waiting list for each Northern Ireland Housing Executive estate in the borough of Castlereagh.

Mr. Atkins: I am advised by the chief executive of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive that at 1 March 1993 the information was as follows:

Number of first and second preference applicants

Estate	1st preference applicants	2nd preference applicants

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate has been made of the number of squatters in each of the Cregagh, Ballybeen, Belvoir, Tullycarnet, Downshire, Braniel, Carryduff and Twinbrook estates; and what percentage these squats represent of the total housing stock in each estate.

Mr. Atkins: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive and I am advised by its chief executive that at 1 March 1993 there were no squatters in Cregagh, Ballybeen, Belvoir, Tullycarnet, Downshire, Braniel or Carryduff estates. There were 44 squatters in the Twinbrook estate which represents 3·2 per cent. of the total housing stock in that estate.

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons are employed in the special debt recovery unit of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive; and how many staff go out to tenants to collect rent arrears.

Mr. Atkins: I am advised by the chief executive of the Northern Ireland Housing Executive that the executive does not maintain a special debt recovery unit.

The executive employs 486 housing officers in its offices throughout the Province to deal with estate management issues, including arrears recovery.

Transport

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people are employed by (a) Ulsterbus, (b) Citybus, (c) Flexibus and (d) Northern Ireland Railways.

Mr. Atkins: I am advised by the companies that the number of people employed by them at 31 March 1993 were:

	Number
Ulsterbus	2,107
Citybus	751
Flexibus	34
Northern Ireland Railways	805

Assistance to Industry

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many Government or Government agency loans to industry have been written off and what was the total amount involved, in each of the last six years; and how many firms were involved.

Mr. Atkins: The numbers and amounts of loans to industry written off in each of the last six years were as follows:

Financial year	Number of loans written off	Total amount £	Number of firms involved
1987-88	30	928,534	30
1988-89	10	77,020	10
1989-90	10	[1]391,212,635	10
1990-91	38	2,101,612	38
1991-92	38	399,722	38
1992-93	57	[2]432,744,752	57

Notes:

[1] Includes £390 million written off in respect of Short Bros Plc.

[2] Includes £414,895,848 written off in respect of Harland and Wolff Plc and £17,370,632 in respect of Lear Fan Ltd.

The amounts given for each year are for principal only and do not include interest which in some cases was also written off.

Young Offenders

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the daily or weekly cost of maintaining a person in (a) a young offenders centre, (b) borstal or (c) prison.

Mr. Mates: The average weekly costs in 1991-92, the last year for which confirmed figures are available, and excluding headquarters and other central costs which cannot be readily attributed to individual prison establishments, were as follows:

	Per week
(i) Young Offenders Centre	£880
(ii) Prison	£1,279

The cost for the young offenders centre relates specifically to the male young offenders centre at Hydebank Wood; female young offenders are located in Maghaberry prison and separate figures could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

There is no borstal in Northern Ireland.

Roads

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much has been spent on (a) road construction and (b) road maintenance in Northern Ireland each year since 1988; and how much is budgeted for 1993.

Mr. Atkins: The information is as follows:

Financial Year	(a) Road Construction Expenditure £ million	(b) Road Maintenance Expenditure £ million
1988-89	[3]19·5	[3]54·3
1989-90	[3]25·2	[3]63·1

Invalidity Benefit

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons in Northern Ireland receive more than £100 per week in respect of invalidity benefit.

Mr. Hanley: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Social Security Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Alec Wylie, who wrote to the hon. Gentleman on 6 April.

Letter from Alec Wylie to Mr. Peter Robinson, dated 6 April 1993:

As I am responsible for Social Security operational matters your recent Parliamentary Question on the number of persons receiving more than £100.00 per week in respect of Invalidity Benefit has been passed to me for reply.

At 1 April 1993 the number of people in Northern Ireland receiving more than £100.00 per week Invalidity Benefit was 8,559.

I hope you find this helpful. A copy of this reply will appear in the official report and copies will be placed in the Library.

Sports Council

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the future role of the Sports Council for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Hanley: The Sports Council for Northern Ireland is a statutory body which operates under the provisions of the Recreation and Youth Service (NI) Order 1986. Under the order, it has duties related to the promotion of sport and physical recreation in Northern Ireland. In addition, it has executive and advisory functions, providing financial and other assistance to a wide range of bodies in connection with sport and physical education.

A new council has recently been appointed, but its role and responsibilities will remain the same, with the exception that, in due course, it will have the additional responsibility of distributing the funds from the national lottery allocated to sport in Northern Ireland.

District Councils

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people are employed by each district council in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Atkins: The number of employees of each district council as at September 1992 is as set out in the table:

Equal Opportunities

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the annual cost of monitoring the religious affiliation of the employees of (a) Enterprise Ulster, (b) the Fishery Conservancy Board for Northern Ireland and (c) the Milk Marketing Board for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Hanley: The annual cost of monitoring in each instance is negligible.

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people are employed by (a) the Fair Employment Commission, (b) the Northern Ireland tourist board and (c) the Equal Opportunities Commission.

Mr. Atkins: At 30 March 1993 the Fair Employment Commission had 66 employees; the Northern Ireland Tourist Board 121; and the Equal Opportunities Commission 32.

Civil Service

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons now in the civil service in Northern Ireland became civil servants as a result of the reorganisation of local government.

Mr. Mates: Approximately 1,280.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the expenditure on arms and ammunition by the Royal Ulster Constabulary over the past year.

Mr. Mates: Expenditure by the Police Authority for Northern Ireland on the purchase of arms and ammunition for the Royal Ulster Constabulary in the financial year ended 31 March 1993, amounted to £1,273,975.

Tourism

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much money has been spent on the promotion of tourism in Northern Ireland in each of the past six years.

Mr. Atkins: Government expenditure on the promotion of tourism in Northern Ireland has increased significantly over the six years as is evidenced by the table:

Year	£'000s
1987-88	4,960
1988-89	5,387
1989-90	5,695
1990-91	7,357
1991-92	7,094
1992-93	11,662

Bankruptcies

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many firms have gone bankrupt in Northern Ireland each year since January 1991; how many firms went bankrupt in the previous two years; and how many firms have (a) gone into receivership and (b) been wound up in each quarter of the past two years.

Mr. Atkins: The numbers of bankruptcies and companies wound up in the calendar years 1989-1992 are as follows:

	1989	1990	1991	1992
Bankruptcies	238	286	366	404
Companies wound up	176	180	239	208

The quarterly statistics on receiverships and companies wound up for the past two years are shown as follows:

	1991 Quarter					1992 Quarter
	1	2	3	4	Total	1	2	3	4	Total

Terrorism

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people have been killed by terrorists in Northern Ireland since the beginning of the year; and what were the dates and locations of these murders.

Mr. Mates: The police are currently investigating 21 incidents in which terrorist organisations are believed to have killed 25 people in Northern Ireland in the period 1 January 1993 to 31 March 1993. Details of the date and location of these incidents are given in the table below.

	Date	Location	Number of Deaths
1.	3 January	Lisnagleer	2
2.	11 January	Dungannon	1
3.	14 January	Belfast	1
4.	17 January	Belfast	1

Old People's Homes

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the daily or weekly cost to his Department of maintaining a person in an old people's home.

Mr. Hanley: For the year ended 31 March 1992 the average cost of maintaining a resident in a home for the elderly administered by the Northern Ireland health and social services boards was £227 per week. This figure excludes capital and central administration costs.

Unemployment

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons are registered as unemployed in Belfast East and West and of these how many are (a) males over 18 years, (b) males under 18 years, (c) females over 18 years and (d) females under 18 years; and what is the total number of people under 18 years unemployed in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Atkins: The number of unemployed claimants disaggregated by age and sex for the parliamentary constituencies of Belfast East and Belfast West is set out in the table. The figures given relate to those unemployed on 11 February 1993, the latest date for which information is available.

Unemployed claimants	Belfast East	Belfast West
Males over 18 years	3,024	7,726
Males 18 years and under	62	156
Females over 18 years	949	1,397
Females 18 years and under	49	98
TOTAL	4,084	9,377

The total number of unemployed aged 18 years and under in Northern Ireland is 3,043.

Student Grants

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many students from Northern Ireland received grants towards their studies in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Hanley: The total number of students from Northern Ireland in receipt of awards in the 1991-92 academic year was 35,777.

Manufacturing Plants

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information he has on the number of (a) mainland British and (b) United States firms which have set up manufacturing plants in Northern Ireland since 1963; and, in each case, what information he has on the sum total of grants paid out and the number which are still in the Province, listing the names and the products produced by each.

Mr. Atkins: Information is available only from September 1982 when the Industrial Development Board was established. Sixteen mainland British and eight USA firms have set up manufacturing plants in Northern Ireland since that date with selective financial assistance from the Industrial Development Board. Grants totalling £5·3 million have been paid to the mainland British firms and £15·8 million to the USA firms. Nine mainland British and four USA firms still operate in Northern Ireland. Details of these are as follows:

Company name	Product
Mainland British
Lynjoy Ltd.	Telecommunications components
Forte Airport Services	In flight meals
Rumenco Ltd.	Animal feed stuff additives
Bowater (NI) Ltd.	Printing
D. Evans Assemblies	Telecommunications components
ISA Poultry Services Ltd.	Poultry breeding
Tensator (NI) Ltd.	Backwound springs
Avery Label (NI) Ltd.	Self adhesive labels
Audio Processing Technology Ltd.	Music coding systems
USA
Irlandus Circuits	Printed circuit boards
Sentronics	Digital tyre pressure gauges
DDL Electronics Ltd.	Circuit boards
Fruit of the Loom Manufacturing	Textile products

Inward Investing Firms

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what information he has on the number of inward investing firms which have pulled out of Northern Ireland during each of the past four years and on the number of jobs affected.

Mr. Atkins: Information on inward investng firms which had accepted offers of selective financial assistance form the Industrial Development Board and subsequently closed is as follows:

Closures of Inward Investing Firms

	Number of closures	Employment at date of closure
1989-90	4	257
1990-91	9	352
1991-92	13	552
1992-93	12	1,065

Gaelic Athletic Association

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made in persuading the Gaelic Athletic Association to end its ban on membership of those who have served in the Royal Navy, the Army or the police.

Mr. Hanley: As a voluntary sports organisation which receives grant aid, Government officials meet representatives of the GAA from time to time. The Government's regret for GAA membership restrictions is already in the public record but changes on GAA membership rules are a matter for that organisation.

Belfast International Airport

Mr. Stott: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much (a) public money and (b) money originating from European funding programmes has been invested in Belfast international airport over the last three years; what proportion of the total sum invested has been spent on improving the infrastructure of the airport; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: Direct Government financial assistance to Belfast international airport ceased in 1989. Over the last three years over £7·5 million of grant aid from the European regional development fund transportation programme has been received, all of which has been spent on improving the airport infrastructure.

Mr. Stott: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he expects to announce the sale of Belfast international airport; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: The Government's decision to privatise the airport was announced by my predecessor in November 1991.

Mr. Stott: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many airport police operate at Belfast international airport; under whose control they currently operate; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: A total of 59 airport police are employed at Belfast international airport. They are all employees of Northern Ireland Airports Ltd. and operate fully under their control.

Mr. Stott: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list (a) the numbers of flights and (b) the numbers of passengers passing through Belfast international airport over the last three years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: There were 96,510 aircraft movements at Belfast international airport in 1990; 97,213 in 1991; and 96,991 in 1992. Passenger movements in the same three years were 2,293,749; 2,168,226; and 2,245,618 respectively.

Mr. Stott: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people were employed at Belfast international airport on 1 January; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: The figure is 363.

Port of Belfast

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what representations he has received regarding the privatisation of the port of Belfast; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: As part of the consultation process on the draft Ports (NI) Order 1993 I have received 38 responses. These included 10 which expressed reservations about the possibility of privatising the port of Belfast. I will be considering each of these responses in detail.

Sex Offenders

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his policy on placing sex offenders selected for community service on schemes in the community.

Mr. Mates: Sentencing decisions in individual cases are matters for the courts. Where the courts impose a community service order for a sexual offence, or on an offender who has previously been convicted for sexual offences, the Probation Board for Northern Ireland places the offender on a scheme in which the risk to others and to the offender is minimised, and in which the offender can be closely supervised.

Ports (Northern Ireland) Order 1993

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will amend the draft Ports (Northern Ireland) Order 1993 in order to subject it to the affirmative resolution procedure.

Mr. Atkins: The draft Ports (Northern Ireland) Order 1993 is already subject to the affirmative resolution procedure.

School Budgets

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the average cost per pupil of (a) centrally provided services, (b) such centrally provided services as form part of the potential schools budget and (c) central administration, in each local education authority in the last year for which information is available.

Mr. Hanley: There is no Northern Ireland equivalent to the potential schools budget used by local education authorities in England and Wales. The remaining information, obtained from the Northern Ireland education and library boards' 1991-92 local management of schools outturn statements, is as follows:

Cost per pupil

	Belfast	North eastern	South eastern	Southern	Western
	£	£	£	£	£
i. Centrally provided services	307	321	317	368	389
ii. Central administration	61	42	47	62	60

Trust Ports

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement concerning the procedure for privatising trust ports in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Atkins: The Government propose to make an Order in Council to enable the privatisation of trust ports in Northern Ireland. As the proposed order has just concluded its consultation stage I have not yet considered the responses made and accordingly a statement on procedures would be premature.

Days Lost

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the total number of days lost per 1,000 workers in Northern Ireland during each of the last two years.

Mr. Atkins: A total of 32 in 1991 and 15 in 1992.

Pupil-teacher Ratios

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the average pupil-teacher ratio in (a) primary and (b) secondary schools in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Hanley: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Ealing, North (Mr. Greenway) on 18 March 1993, Official Report, columns 397-98.

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many of the appointments made by him as listed in "Public Bodies 1992" came within the categories set out in paragraphs 49 and 50 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers" and required a submission to the Prime Minister.

Mr. Mates: The appointments made by my right hon. and learned Friend which require a submission to the Prime Minister are as follows:

Chairman	— Industrial Development Board
Chairman	— Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights
Deputy Chairman and two members	— Parliamentary Boundary Commission for Northern Ireland

Myalgic Encephalomyelitis

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what research has been conducted in hospitals in the Province on myalgic encephalomyelitis.

Mr. Hanley: Over the last five years research has been carried out at the Royal Victoria hospital, Belfast, into the physical causes of myalgic encephalomyelitis and the possibility of devising an objective diagnostic test for the condition.

Students

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether he will give further consideration to student financial hardship associated with summer rent demands and the absence of housing benefit entitlement; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hanley: In general it is the student support system which is designed to provide financial help for full-time students. Housing benefit, which helps with both rent and rates, is available to vulnerable group students throughout their courses, including the summer vacation.

There are no plans to change this policy.

Industrial Development

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish a table to show for each council area the number of visits sponsored by the Industrial Development Board by prospective investors, together with the sums invested in (a) manufacturing industry, (b) service industry and (c) banking, in each such area in each of the last three years for which figures are available, by (i) overseas investors, (ii) United Kingdom investors, (iii) Northern Ireland investors and (iv) investors from the Republic of Ireland or as much of such information as is available.

Mr. Atkins: Details of visits by prospective investors and planned investments in manufacturing industry and tradeable services are set out in the tables. There have been no investments by the banking sector.

Job Creation

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish a table to show what sums of public money have been (a) paid or (b) committed in each of the last five years per job (i) created and (ii) sustained in each parliamentary constituency in Belfast and in each of the other 25 local council areas; and from which Government agency the money was provided, or as much of such information as is readily available.

Mr. Atkins: The following tables show the assistance offered in recent years by the Industrial Development Board and the Local Enterprise Development Unit to promote and sustain employment.

Totals	3,222	13,403	199	701

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many jobs will be created by the Seagate investment in Londonderry; what he expects the catchment area for employees to be; how many (a) Roman Catholic and (b) Protestant employees, will represent the balance in the work force consistent with fair employment practices; and what are the proportions of Roman Catholics and Protestants in the expected catchment area of employment.

Mr. Atkins: Over the next four years, employment at the Seagate investment in Londonderry is expected to reach 506. Responsibility for recruitment rests with the employer. Under the Fair Employment (Northern Ireland) Act 1989, all employers are required to afford fair participation in employment to members of both communities. The Fair Employment Commission will provide information and advice on any aspect of fair employment practices, including catchment areas, to any employer.

Potato Crop

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his estimate of the acreage of the 1992 potato crop which was not harvested at (a) 1 December 1992, (b) 1 January 1993, (c) 1 February 1993, (d) 1 March 1993 and (e) 1 April 1993; and what percentage of the total acreage this represented at each date of (i) the seed and (ii) the ware crop acreage.

Mr. Hanley: Estimates of unharvested potatoes are as follows:

Week ended	Area not harvested (acres)	Unharvested seed as a percentage of total seed area	Unharvested ware as a percentage of total ware area
5 December 1992	6,250	17·4	24·3
2 January 1993	4,670	12·6	18·3
6 February 1993	3,909	9·9	15·7
6 March 1993	2,676	6·6	10·8
27 March 1993[1]	1,575	4·5	6·1

[1] Latest available date.

Correspondence

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what reply he has sent to Mr. Jim McCormick of the East Belfast Conservative Association to a letter that was sent to him on 19 March.

Sir Patrick Mayhew: I wrote to Mr. McCormick on 31 March confirming that the Government remained committed to the objective of finding an effective and permanent solution to the problem about which he had written to me.

University Funding

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what funding has been made available for (a) teaching, (b) research and (c) other activities in Queen's university, Belfast and the New University of Ulster in the years 1988, 1989, 1990, 1991 and 1992, respectively;

(2) what is the total quantity of Government funding made available for Queen's university, Belfast and the New University of Ulster in 1988, 1989, 1990, 1991 and 1992.

Mr. Hanley: The amounts made available by Northern Ireland Departments to each university are as follows:

	Financial year
	1987-88	1988-89	1989-90	1990-91	1991-92	1992-93
Queen's University
Teaching	31,272	31,993	32,181	32,125	31,225	17,207
Research						14,837
Other activities	10,122	12,592	14,305	13,442	14,871	14,754
Total funding	41,394	44,585	46,486	45,567	46,096	46,798
University of Ulster
Teaching	29,091	32,118	34,626	34,347	31,646	18,136
Research						13,775
Other activities	8,490	10,708	13,308	14,800	15,227	16,037
Total funding	37,581	42,826	47,934	49,147	46,873	47,948

Notes:

1. Departmental funding is not held on calendar year basis and tables give amounts in financial years.
2. Prior to the 1992-93 financial year, Departmental records do not identify funding for teaching and research separately.
3. Amounts exclude tuition fees paid under the Northern Ireland Students' Awards Regulations.
4. The reduction in teaching and research funding between 1990-91 and 1991-92 is accounted for by the shift in funding from these areas to cover increases in tuition fees.

"Growing a Green Economy"

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many copies of his Department's publication "Growing a Green Economy" have been published; to which organisations and individuals it has been distributed; and what is the cost of the first print run.

Mr. Atkins: Ten thousand copies of "Growing a Green Economy" have been printed at a cost of £25,500. The document is being distributed widely within Northern Ireland to industry and commerce, business representative bodies, environmental interest groups and local councils. It is also available on demand at HMSO and a copy has been sent to each Member of Parliament for information.

Mink Farms

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many mink farms are currently licensed in each county in Northern Ireland.

Mr. Hanley: There are no mink farms in Northern Ireland.

Scale Maps

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will arrange with the Ordnance Survey for the publication of a version or versions of the 1-50,000 scale maps of Northern Ireland showing (a) the townland boundaries, (b) local Government boundaries and (c) parliamentary boundaries.

Mr. Hanley: The decision whether to publish a particular type of map is a matter for the director and chief executive of Ordnance Survey of Northern Ireland. I understand that some of the maps to which the hon. Gentleman refers are already available.

Fair Employment Tribunal

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cases have been brought against private companies alleging religious and political discrimination, since the establishment of the Fair Employment tribunal until 31 December 1992, indicating the nature of each allegation and the tribunal's decision.

Mr. Atkins [holding answer 1 April 1993]: It is not possible, until cases are heard, to distinguish between private companies, public limited companies, individuals and partnerships. However, in the period to 31 December 1992, 404 complaints were brought against private employers as distinct from public bodies. The nature of the allegations in such cases and the decisions of the tribunal, where available, are set out in the table.

	Number
Nature of allegation
Alleged discriminatory dismissals	204
Alleged discriminatory non-appointments	133
Alleged discriminatory non-promotions	14
Alleged discriminatory harassments	24
Alleged discriminatory victimisations	29

SOCIAL SECURITY

Maintenance Payments

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the average loss of benefit per claimant if maintenance could no longer be offset against income from 1 April.

Mr. Burt: The information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claims are currently made for housing and community charge benefit where maintenance payments are offset against income for benefit calculation.

Mr. Burt: In May 1991, there were an estimated 3,000 housing benefit cases and 4,000 community charge benefit cases.

Note: Figures apply to Great Britain and were derived from a small number of sample cases supplied by local authorities for the housing benefit and community charge benefit information system annual 1 per cent. sample of cases without income support.

Some cases received both housing benefit and community charge benefit.

Child Support Act

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the number of claims which will be made for housing and council tax benefit where maintenance payments will be offset against income in the first year of operation of the Child Support Act 1991.

Mr. Burt: There is no such provision in housing benefit or council tax benefit.

Boarder Premium

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the cost of a boarder premium of £10 for each member of a homeless family living in (a) bed-and-breakfast accommodation and (b) hostel accommodation, including women's refuges; and if he will give a breakdown of the costs involved.

Mr. Burt: The information requested is not available.

Industrial Disablement

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of claimants seeking disability compensation for pneumoconiosis has been successful in each year since 1979; and what has been the annual disability benefit paid in each year.

Mr. Scott: The information requested is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, the numbers of industrial injuries disablement pensions for pneumoconiosis in payment at the end of the statistical period since 1979 are in the table.

Period	Pensions current at end of period
1 October 1978 to 30 September 1979	28,610
1 October 1979 to 30 September 1980	27,580
1 October 1980 to 30 September 1981	26,040
1 October 1981 to 30 September 1982	24,800
1 October 1982 to 30 September 1983	23,770
1 October 1983 to 30 September 1984	22,810
1 October 1984 to 30 September 1985	22,140
1 October 1985 to 30 September 1986	20,740
1 October 1986 to 4 April 1987[1]	19,620
6 April 1987 to 2 April 1988	18,820
4 April 1988 to 1 April 1989	17,830
3 April 1989 to 31 March 1990	16,680
2 April 1990 to 31 March 1991	15,990
1 April 1991 to 4 April 1992	[2]14,610

Note: These figures are rated up from a 10 per cent. sample.
[1] Period covers six months only.
[2] Provisional figures only.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Brentwood and Ongar (Mr. Pickles), of 29 March, Official Report, column 77, what consideration he gave to adopting a period of less than the 20 years aggregate of working underground to establish eligibility for industrial injury disablement.

Mr. Scott: In its report (Cm 2091) the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council, which advises the Secretary of State on the prescription of occupational diseases for industrial injuries disablement benefit purposes, recommended extending the list of prescribed diseases to include chronic bronchitis and emphysema in coal miners who meet specified criteria. The Government have accepted the council's recommendation in full.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Brentford and Ongar (Mr. Pickles) of 29 March, Official Report, column 77, on industrial injuries disablement benefit for coal miners with bronchitis and emphysema, what decisions underlay the choice of 13 September 1993 as the date from which the regulations will take effect.

Mr. Scott: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State, in his reply to the hon. Member for Brentwood and Ongar (Mr. Pickles) mentioned the very large number of claims expected from miners and ex-miners when chronic bronchitis and emphysema are added to the list of prescribed industrial diseases; 13 September is the earliest date that the necessary medical and administrative arrangements can be put in place to deal with these claims.

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will take steps to include ceramic workers in the list of workers who may claim compensation for chronic bronchitis and emphysema under the arrangements for payment of industrial injury disablement benefit.

Mr. Scott: The Industrial Injuries Advisory Council advises the Secretary of State on the prescription of diseases for industrial injuries disablement benefit purposes. I understand that the council has not received any scientific evidence to suggest that bronchitis and emphysema should be recommended for prescription in relation to ceramic workers.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the number of underground coal miners with emphysema and chronic bronchitis who would have qualified for benefit from the recommendation in the report sent to him by the Industrial Injuries Advisory Council in August 1992 but have died since he received the report.

Mr. Scott: No such estimate has been made.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the estimated cost of his decision on the recommendation of the Industrial Injuries Advisory Committee in regard to underground miners with emphysema and chronic bronchitis; and how the cost has been computed.

Mr. Scott: The current estimate of the net additional full-year benefit cost of implementing the council's recommendation to prescribe chronic bronchitis and emphysema in underground coal miners is in the region of £6 million. This estimate is based on the assumption that around 9,000 awards will be made. Some 4,000 of these will be to miners and ex-miners currently receiving industrial injuries disablement benefit for pneumoconiosis but who, following the prescription of chronic bronchitis and emphysema, will qualify for extra benefit. The remainder will be to those miners and ex-miners who newly qualify for benefit.

These estimates have drawn upon departmental records concerning pneumonoconiosis cases and upon the assistance of British Coal.

EC Social Affairs Council

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proposals he intends to put to the European Social Affairs Council on 5 April.

Mr. Scott: None.

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many of the appointments made by him as listed in "Public Bodies 1992" came within the categories set out in paragraphs 49 and 50 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers" and required a submission to the Prime Minister.

Miss Widdecombe: Two—the chairman of the Occupational Pensions Board, Sir Jeremy Rowe, and the chairman of the Social Security Advisory Committee, Sir Peter Barclay.

Social Security Research Yearbook

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what arrangements he has made to distribute to interested non-governmental organisations copies of his Department's social security research yearbook 1991-92.

Mr. Scott: Copies of the yearbook have been sent to the main research organisations and others who have expressed an interest in the Department's research programme.

Retirement Pensions

Mr. Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 18 March, Official Report, column 376, if he will publish an updated version of the table attached to the letter from the Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Maidstone (Miss Widdecombe), dated 26 September 1992, showing the percentages of men aged 65 and women aged 60 years who were in receipt of a full category A retirement pension in 1980 and 1991 as a percentage of (a) the relevant population in those years, and (b) category A pensioners; and if he will also publish the explanatory notes in the letter.

Miss Widdecombe: The information requested is in the table.

Entitlement to full category A pension	Column 1 as percentage of population	Column 2 as percentage of category A pensioners
At 28 November 1980
Men aged 65	79·47	96·86
Women aged 60	20·01	53·35
At 30 September 1992
Men aged 65	68·1	91·8
Women aged 60	16·3	37·1

Notes:
1. Great Britain residents only.
2. Population estimates from mid-1991 based on population projection.
3. Equivalent figures for invalidity benefit are not currently available.

Mrs. Angela Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the impact on the support ratio in 2030 of (a) maintaining the current state pension ages and (b) equalising state pension age at (i) 60, (ii) 65 and (iii) 67 years.

Miss Widdecombe: On the same basis as the estimates set out in the discussion document, "Options for Equality in State Pension Age", but incorporating the latest Office of Population Census and Surveys population projections, the effects on the support ratio in 2030 are in the table:

	Ratio
Current state pension ages	2·2
Age 60	1·8
Age 65	3·0
Age 67	3·2

Note:
The support ratio is defined as the number of people of working age per pensioner.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of pensioner tax units had incomes less than £5,000 per annum in the age bands (a) 60 to 64 years, (b) 65 to 69 years, (c) 70 to 74 years, (d) 75 to 79 years, (e) 80 years and over and (f) all ages, in the latest year for which figures are available.

Miss Widdecombe: The information is in the table:

Percentage of Pensioner Unit Age Groups with Gross Income of Less than £5000 per annum in 1989

Age	60-64 Per cent.	65-69 Per cent.	70-74 Per cent.	75-79 Per cent.	80+ Per cent.	All Per cent.
Single pensioners	68	67	71	82	87	77
Pensioner couples	[1]—	13	18	23	27	18
All pensioner units	68	38	48	62	76	55

Notes:
1. A pensioner unit is defined as a single person aged at or above state pensionable age (SPA) or a couple where the husband is aged at or above SPA.
2. The age of the pensioner couple is taken to be the age of the husband.
[1]— Under the above definitions there are no pensioner couples in the 60-64 age band.

Mrs. Angela Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the additional cost or saving to the Exchequer of equalising the state pension age at (a) 60, (b) 65 or (c) 67 years compared with the current arrangements.

Miss Widdecombe: On the same basis as the estimates set out in the discussion document "Options for Equality in State Pension Age," the effects on the Exchequer are in the table:

1992-93 prices £ billion
Cost +ve, savings −ve

	2025	2035
Age 60	4·6	3·6
Age 65	−3·7	−3·1
Age 67	−6·4	−5·7

Mrs. Angela Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the state pension age in (a) Sweden and (b) the United States of America.

Miss Widdecombe: State pension age in Sweden is currently 65 for both men and women. In 1992 the Government passed legislation to raise the state pension age to 66. The new pension age will be phased in gradually over a four-year period ending in 1998.

State pension age in the United States of America is currently 65 for both men and women. In 1983 the Government passed a law to raise the age at which full benefits are payable from 65 to 67. The new age will be phased in very gradually during the first quarter of the next century.

Mrs. Angela Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the impact on the economically active ratio in 2030 of (a) maintaining the current state pension ages and (b) equalising the state pension age at (i) 60, (ii) 65 and (iii) 67 years.

Miss Widdecombe: On the same basis as the estimates set out in the discussion document, "Options for Equality in State Pension Age," the effects on the economically active ratio in 2030 are in the table.

	Ratio
Current state pension ages	1·4
Age 60	1·4
Age 65	1·5
Age 67	1·6

Note: The economically active ratio is defined as the number of active adults per inactive adult.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the number of recipients of (a) full state retirement pension and (b) reduced state retirement pension for each year since 1979-80.

Miss Widdecombe: The number of retirement pension recipients resident in Great Britain receiving 100 per cent. of the basic pension (full) or less than 100 per cent. (reduced rate) is as follows:

Thousands

	Category A [1]		Category B [2]
	Full	Reduced rate	Full	Reduced rate
November 1979	4,301·5	344·3	3,761·0	116·7

September 1991	4,773·2	780·7	3,749·7	93·2
September 1992	4,803·9	816·4	3,720·3	99·7

[1] Men and women on own insurance.
[2] Wives and widows on husband's insurance.

Note:
Further details can be found in the six-monthly "Retirement Pension: All Cases Tables" available in the Library.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the total weekly cost of the state retirement pension for 1992-93 and 1993-94.

Miss Widdecombe: The information is in the table.

Year	Basic RP (estimated)	SERPS (estimated)	Total weekly cost (estimated)
1992-93	£488 million	£26 million	£514 million
1993-94	£504 million	£30 million	£534 million

Notes:
1. Source—Departmental Report 1993.
2. Excludes the cost of the non-contributory over-80 pension.
3. Weekly cost is based on the number of pension paydays in the year 1 April-31 March.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the operative date for the uprating of the state retirement pension in each year from 1980 to 1993.

Miss Widdecombe: The operative dates for uprating —that is, since 1987, the first Monday in the tax year—are as follows:

Year	Uprating date
1980	24 November 1980
1981	23 November 1981
1982	22 Novemberr 1982
1983	21 November 1983
1984	26 November 1984
1985	25 November 1985
1986	28 July 1986
1987	6 April 1987
1988	11 April 1988
1989	10 April 1989
1990	9 April 1990
1991	8 April 1991
1992	6 April 1992
1993	12 April 1993

Myalgic Encephalomyelitis

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what evaluation has been made by his Department of the physical and organic nature of myalgic encephalomyelitis, and of differences from other chronic fatigue syndromes, in his setting of guidelines for benefit support;

(2) what disability benefits are available for sufferers of myalgic encephalomyelitis who are required to take off extensive periods from work as part of a recovery programme.

Mr. Scott: The Department accepts that there may be a physical and organic basis for the condition known as myalgic encephalomyelitis (ME). It may well be that only a small proportion of people with chronic fatigue syndromes meet criteria which have been used to describe ME as a distinct entity. Although there may be aetiological differences between ME and other chronic fatigue syndromes, their disabling effects and the needs arising from them are often similar.

Eligibility for receipt of disability or incapacity benefits does not depend upon the person being affected by a particular disease or diagnosis, but on the disabling effects of the clinical condition and the care and mobility needs which arise from them; or the effect of the disablement or illness on the capacity for work.

A wide range of benefits is available to sick and disabled people, including sufferers of myalgic encephalomyelitis, provided they meet the conditions of entitlement.

Data Protection Act 1984

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many certificates have been signed under the terms of section 27 of the Data Protection Act 1984 for each year since 1987.

Miss Widdecombe: None.

Fuel Bills

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what analysis his Department has made of the fuel bills of disabled people and carers, and the effects of a value added tax charge on those bills, in his consideration of the uprating of (a) income-related benefits and (b) other benefits for disabled people and carers.

Mr. Burt: Our conclusions in regard to the impact of VAT on people on low incomes, including those who are disabled or carers, will be made public in the normal way in the autumn statement on benefit uprating. My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer has made it clear that extra help will be given to poorer pensioners and others on low incomes.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what measures his Department will take to ensure that disabled people and carers on income-related benefits who have higher than average fuel bills are fully compensated for the introduction of a value added tax charge on domestic fuel.

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps are being taken to assist single mothers to afford the new tax provision on heating; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: In his budget statement the Chancellor said that there would be extra help for poorer pensioners and those on low incomes. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will be announcing the details of this extra help in the autumn.

Schizophrenia

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what benefits are available to schizophrenics; what plans he has to extend these; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott: A wide range of benefits is available to sick and disabled people, including people with schizophrenia, provided they meet the conditions of entitlement. Many such people will have already benefited from the introduction of disability living allowance in April 1992. We have no plans to further extend benefit provision for schizophrenics.

Social Fund

Mr. Bowis: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many applications have been made in the past year for judicial review on social fund decisions; and what percentage were successful.

Mr. Scott: In 1992-93, five judicial review applications were made. So far, two of these have been heard; neither was successful.

There have been 12·5 million applications for discretionary social fund payments since they became available in 1988; of these, only 25 have resulted in judicial review applications. Of the 20 applications that have been heard, only three have been successful.

Domestic Fuel Expenditure

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish figures for estimated domestic fuel expenditure by households on income support giving figures separately for expenditure on (a) oil, (b) piped gas, (c) bottled gas, (d) electricity and (e) coal.

Mr. Burt [holding answer 26 March 1993]: Estimates of average reported fuel expenditure by households headed by an income support (IS) recipient are given in the table. The estimates will include cases where the household fuel expenditure is partly incurred on behalf of other family units not in receipt of IS within the same household. IS recipients who are not heads of households are not included. The estimates are based on the combined 1990 and 1991 Family Expenditure Surveys and so reflect average levels of expenditure for that two-year period.

Average weekly expenditure on fuel by households headed by a recipient of IS, from the 1990 and 1991 Family Expenditure Surveys

All domestic fuel	11·00
Of which:
(b) piped gas	3·70
(d) electricity	6·00
(e) coal, coke	0·80

The number of IS households reporting expenditure on oil is too small for a reliable estimate to be given. A separate estimate of expenditure on bottled gas is not available from the Family Expenditure Survey data. Both these items, together with other minor fuels, are included in the estimate of total fuel expenditure.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the average level of housing benefit per recipient, in English and Welsh local authorities payable to (a) local authority tenants, (b) local housing association tenants and (c) private sector tenants for 1990, 1991, 1992 and 1992-93.

Miss Widdecombe: The available information is in the table.

	England		Wales
Year	Local authority tenants £	Private tenants[1] £	Local authority tenants £	Private tenants[1] £
[2]1990	20·18	25·86	20·37	22·24
[2]1991	23·35	32·96	22·57	29·44
[3]1992	27·72	39·02	27·03	34·31

[1] Separate information on the average amount of housing benefit received by housing association tenants is not collected separately. It is therefore included with that of private tenants.
[2] The data source is the housing benefit and community charge benefit annual 1 per cent. sample for May.
[3] The data source is the quarterly caseload count for May 1992.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the administrative cost of housing benefit for each English local authority for 1991-92 and 1992-93.

Miss Widdecombe: A copy of a table showing local authorities' estimates of their housing benefit administration costs for 1991-92 and 1992-93 will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received concerning the method of payment of housing benefit to local authorities and their administrative costs.

Miss Widdecombe: Both the Department of the Environment and this Department receive representations about housing benefit payments and Government subsidy on these payments, which are most frequently made by tenants, local authorities and local authority associations.

HEALTH

Myalgic Encephalomyelitis

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what research is currently funded by her Department into myalgic encephalomyelitis; and what research has been completed by her Department into myalgic encephalomyelitis since 1979;

(2) what attempts she has made to ensure that all GPs are aware of the research and diagnostic criteria developed to ensure the proper health care for sufferers of myalgic encephalomyelitis;

(3) what representations she has received from the Myalgic Encephalomyelitis Association in regard to counselling and support offered by the national health service to myalgic encephalomyelitis sufferers;

(4) what information she has on the occurrence of myalgic encephalomyelitis in teenagers.

Mr. Sackville: Information on the occurrence of myalgic encephalomyelitis in teenagers is not available centrally.

The Department has received correspondence on various aspects of ME from the Myalgic Encephalomyelitis Association, its members and supporters. Ministers and officials have had meetings with representatives of the association and other ME voluntary bodies.

The main agency through which the Government support biomedical and clinical research in the United Kingdom is the Medical Research Council, which receives its grant-in-aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster. The MRC is currently funding a study at the Institute of Psychiatry. The MRC is always willing to receive and consider soundly based research proposals in competition with other applications. The Department also keeps in touch with research being funded by bodies such as the Linbury Trust.

Medical practitioners keep in touch with developments in diagnosis, health care and treatment through professional journals, post graduate education, attending scientific seminars and the activities and publications of the medical royal colleges. The Department is supporting a task force, including representatives from the ME voluntary bodies, the Royal College of General Practitioners and experts involved in research and patient management. The task force will be considering matters such as the publication of guidance on ME which will be of help to medical practitioners.

General Practitioner Fund Holders

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the oral statement by the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Bolton, West (Mr. Sackville), on 24 March, Official Report, column 1208, if she will indicate the evidence underlying the statement that in April 1991 the baseline cost of general practitioner fund holders' prescribing of medicines was 10 per cent. less than that of non-fund holders' prescribing.

Dr. Mawhinney: The Prescription Pricing Authority data show that in April 1991 the cost of non-fund holders' prescribing was £3·88 per person and that of fund holders was £3·49 per person.

Schizophrenia

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what international co-operative projects exist in the field of schizophrenia research;

(2) what research is being undertaken by or being financed by her Department into the causes of and possible cures for schizophrenia; what projects exist for rehabilitation and training of people suffering from schizophrenia; what crisis centres with 24-hour support her Department finances; what planned allowances of beds in hospitals is made for those with recurring mental illness; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Yeo: The Department is not involved in international projects or financing research. The main agency through which the Government support biomedical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council, which receives its grant-in-aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

Health authorities, working with local authorities and the independent sector, should provide a comprehensive range of local services for mentally ill people, including in-patient beds and crisis intervention accommodation. The provision of rehabilitation and training for the long-term mentally ill is also part of the comprehensive district service. The level of provision is a matter for local management to determine, taking into account local priorities and available resources.

Telecommunications Equipment

Mr. Purchase: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what studies the National Radiological Protection Board is undertaking of the effects of telecommunications equipment.

Mr. Sackville: The National Radiological Protection Board advises Government on risks to human health from non-ionising electromagnetic radiation, including emissions from telecommunications equipment. The board's advice is that the radio frequency energy emitted by telecommunications equipment does not constitute a cancer hazard on the basis of available research evidence. The research work of the NRPB's non-ionising department encompasses biological research, programmes of physical measurements and theoretical dosimetry and health hazard assessment. The Department of Trade and Industry, together with the Science and Engineering Research Council and a number of industrial participants, are funding a research study of the physical interaction of electromagnetic fields and the human head. The results from this and other studies will enable a better assessment of the extent to which emissions comply with recommended restrictions on human exposures.

Doctors' Hours

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many doctors by hospital district health authority and region were working more than an average of 83 hours per week at 1 April.

Dr. Mawhinney: We expect to receive reports from regional task forces shortly showing the number of junior hospital doctors and dentists in England who were contracted for more than a maximum average of 83 hours per week at 1 April.

Cot Deaths

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the latest annual number of recorded cot deaths; what the figure was in 1988; and what further research is planned into cot deaths.

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 2 April 1993]: The latest annual numbers of recorded cot deaths for 1988 and for 1991 are shown in the table.

Research into cot deaths is commissioned through the national health service research and development programme. The Department, together with the Anne Diamond Cot Death Appeal, is currently funding research into cot deaths in Avon. Funding for another proposal is under consideration. Work in this area commissioned by the Department of Health complements research by other agencies, including the Foundation for the Study of Infant Deaths and the Medical Research Council, which receives its grant-in-aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster. Since 1979 the MRC has spent just over £4·2 million on research into sudden infant death, respiratory distress syndrome and related projects.

The confidential inquiry into stillbirths and deaths in infancy, which is a long-term strategic initiative, also includes in-depth inquiries into cot death, in selected regions, in its current programme.

Cot deaths[1] in England and Wales, 1988 and 1991

	1988	1991
Under one year of age	1,467	935
One year and over	32	39

[1] In this table cot deaths refer to sudden infant death syndrome (SIDS, ICD 9th revision 798·0) where the death certificate identified SIDS as either being (i) a main cause of death (deaths under 28 days of age) or (ii) the underlying cause of death (28 days and over).

NORTHERN IRELAND

Religious Affiliations

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the annual cost of monitoring the religious affiliation of the employees of the General Consumer Council for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Atkins: The annual cost is negligible.

Social Fund

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what the Northern Ireland social fund discretionary budget will be for 1993-94.

Mr. Hanley: I am glad to be able to announce that the social fund discretionary budget for 1993-94 will be £28·5 million. This is an increase of £3·5 million over the original amount allocated to districts for 1992-93. Details of the allocations are being placed in the Library of both Houses together with a note explaining their basis.

Child Support Agency

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made in establishing the child support agency for Northern Ireland.

Mr. Hanley: I am pleased to announce that the Child Support Agency for Northern Ireland was established as an executive agency of the Department of Health and Social Services on 5 April 1993. The Child Support (NI) Order 1991 gives effect in Northern Ireland to a new system for the provision of child support. Under this system, the agency will have responsibility for the assessment, collection and enforcement of child support maintenance payment in Northern Ireland.

I am certain that the new arrangements will be a significant improvement on the present system, which is fragmented, discretionary and, consequently, inconsistent in setting levels of maintenance. The agency has a crucial part to play in the efficient implementation and effective functioning of these new arrangements. I have delegated full managerial authority for the agency's day-to-day operations to its chief executive. The policy and resources framework of the agency is set out in the framework document, copies of which have been placed in the Library of the House.

In addition, I have set challenging targets for the agency in its first year of operation. These are to achieve the following:

- 60 per cent. of people with the care of children making eligible applications to the CSA to have maintenance arranged;
- annual benefit savings of £12·8 million;
- to manage the agency's resources so as to deliver its business plan within a total budget of £5·1 million;
- 65 per cent. of clients to regard the service as satisfactory;
- to meet a set of milestone targets set by the Minister, which relate to major initiatives.

ENVIRONMENT

Broadmoor Hospital (Noise and Nuisance)

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what legislative protection there is for residents of Broadmoor hospital who are disturbed by intrusive noise and nuisance; and what plans he has to enforce the protection contained in section 68 of the Control of Pollution Act 1974 in respect of Broadmoor hospital.

Mr. Maclean: Local authorities may take action requiring the abatement of noise emitted from premises, including land, under part III of the Environmental Protection Act 1990. Any complaints about noise at Broadmoor hospital should therefore be addressed to the local authority in the first instance. Section 68 of the Control of Pollution Act 1974 enables my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment to make regulations to control noise from plant or machinery. My right hon. and learned Friend has not made any regulations under the provisions of section 68 of the Control of Pollution Act.

Reservoirs (Grazing)

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he is taking to ensure that water companies follow the recommendations of his Department's letter of advice dated 5 October 1990, concerning action to be taken to prevent the grazing of grass-covered surface reservoirs by livestock.

Mr. Maclean: The drinking water inspectorate has made detailed checks on the progress that water companies have made in preventing livestock from grazing on grass-covered service reservoirs. Most service reservoirs with previously unrestricted access to livestock have now been fenced. A few companies have encountered difficulties in obtaining permission to fence reservoirs located in national parks and other areas where restrictions apply. In these cases the inspectorate is encouraging companies to investigate less obtrusive fencing and other means that might be acceptable to the relevant authorities.

Housing Investment Programme

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much housing investment programme grant each London borough applied for; and how much they were awarded for the financial year 1993-94 and for each year since 1980-81.

Mr. Baldry: Information on housing investment programme bids, HIP allocations and housing capital expenditure since 1980-81 for each of the London borough councils and the City of London has been prepared and the tables deposited in the House of Commons Library.

Urban Air Quality

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to reduce the level of pollutants in London's air listed in his Department's report "Urban Air Quality in the United Kingdom."

Mr. Maclean: The Government have taken action to reduce urban air pollution on a number of fronts. The implementation of European Community directives on vehicle emissions will substantially reduce the level of pollution from road transport. The national plan for implementation of the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe protocol on volatile organic compounds is designed to ensure that the levels of pollution from solvents in paints, ink and glues and from evaporation of liquid fuels will fall. Other measures which will act to reduce urban air pollution include the implementation of European legislation on emissions from large boilers and on fuel composition.

Road Building

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects his Department to publish research it has undertaken on the effect of road building on the inner-city economy.

Mr. Redwood: My Department commissioned a literature review on the impact of transport investment upon the inner city from Dr. Margaret Grieco of the transport studies unit, Oxford university. The review offered mixed views on the effects of roadbuilding in inner cities. The contractor has been invited to publish the work under licence from HMSO.

First-time House Buyers

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the number of first-time buyers who have entered the housing market as a result of the measures announced in the autumn statement.

Sir George Young: The housing market package, announced in the autumn statement, included £50 million for additional grants under the cash incentive scheme and tenants incentive scheme. These have enabled 3,300 tenants of local authorities and housing associations to buy homes of their own on the private market, freeing their previous homes for families in housing need.

Toxic Waste

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the incinerators of which he is aware in Germany that are suitable to dispose of the toxic waste which he has requested his German counterpart not to allow to be exported to the United Kingdom for incineration by ReChem.

Mr. Maclean: This information is not available. I am aware that Germany does have high temperature incinerators which are capable of disposing of this toxic waste.

Housing Associations

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many homes have been provided each year under the housing associations managing agents scheme; and how much central Government grant has been involved.

Sir George Young: The housing associations as managing agents scheme was set up to encourage private owners to rent out their property. HAMA has been running with five pilot housing associations operating in Oxford and the south-east since 1992.

During the first year of the scheme, up to 31 March 1993, 308 homes were brought into management. An additional 515 homes have been provided by one of the pilot housing associations which found leasing arrangements, as opposed to management agreements, more attractive to private landlords operating in their area. During 1992-93 a total of £300,000 was made available to run the HAMA pilot scheme.

On 6 January, I was pleased to announce that HAMA will be extended to provide national coverage with another 22 housing associations managing schemes. These housing associations will be working with 140 local authorities throughout England. A further £1·25 million has been allocated to these associations which will allow for two staff plus running costs during 1993-94.

I now hope to see 5,000 private sector homes brought into management and used to house families in need within the next year or so; this will take us a long way towards the target of 10,000 homes under HAMA by 1996.

There are housing associations not in receipt of grant aid under HAMA which have set up their own projects based on the principles of HAMA. We do not, however, hold information on these projects.

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will issue guidance clarifying the extent to which housing associations assisted with public funds apply the provisions of the public procurement directive.

Mr. Baldry: The relevant provisions apply to contracting authorities carrying out civil engineering works or building works for hospitals, facilities intended for sports, recreation and ledisure, school and university buildings or buildings for administrative purposes. I would therefore not expect housing activities which housing associations carry out with public subsidy to be affected.

Empty Properties

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many times the task force on Government Departments' empty houses has met; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: The task force on Government Departments' empty houses has met twice since it was established on 8 December 1992. It has made good progress on the work necessary to deliver its remit of helping to bring empty Government residential properties back into housing use. The third meeting of the task force is due to take place on 28 April.

Charity Homes (Tax Exemption)

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the impact of ending the local tax exemption of residential homes run by charities.

Mr. Redwood: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Local Government and Inner Cities to the right hon. Member for Manchester, Wythenshawe (Mr. Morris) on 31 March, Official Report, columns 290-91.

Housing Co-operatives

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many consents have been given to housing authorities under section 27 of the Housing Act 1985.

Sir George Young: Since the provisions of section 27 of the Housing Act 1985, as amended by section 10 of the Housing and Planning Act 1986, came into force, the Secretary of State has given 116 consents to management agreements entered into under these powers.

Water Meters

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information is held by OFWAT as to the percentage of domestic houses that have a water meter installed, region by region, at the most recent date for which information is available and the same date 12 months perviously.

Mr. Maclean: The information is not available by region. Information for each water company for 1991-92 is shown in the table. For similar information for 1992-93, I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Northfield (Mr. Burden) on 2 April, Official Report, column 521.

Advisory Council for Business and the Environment

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has for the future of the Advisory Council for Business and the Environment.

Mr. Maclean: The Advisory Committee on Business and the Environment was established in May 1991 for a two-year term. The Government are currently considering the future of the committee.

Water Supply

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce legislation to require water companies to make open to the public any investigative report of a major fault in the water supply which has put water supplies to the public at risk.

Mr. Maclean: The Water Supply (Water Quality) Regulations 1989 require water undertakers to notify the relevant local authority and district health authority of any event which by reason of its effect or likely effect on the water supplied by it gives rise to, or is likely to give rise to, a significant risk to health, and to supply such information relating to the event and its consequences as the authorities may reasonably require.

Directions given under section 202 of the Water Industry Act 1991 require water undertakers to report such events to the Secretary of State. The conclusions of consequent investigations by the drinking water inspectorate are made available to the relevant local authorities and district health, and to any other concerned parties who have expressed an interest.

I have no plans for further legislation.

Homelessness

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what is the current number of homeless families in each London borough; and what is the current number of homeless people in bed and breakfast accommodation in each London borough;

(2) what is the current total number of homeless people in London; and if he will list the figures by borough.

Mr. Baldry: Information on the number of households for which local authorities in England accept responsibility to secure permanent accommodation under the homelessness provisions of the Housing Act 1985 is reported in part E of the quarterly P1 return.

Details of the numbers of homeless households are published quarterly in a DOE Information Bulletin—"Households found accommodation under the homelessness provisions of the 1985 Housing Act 1985: England". Tables 1(a) and 4(a) of the latest bulletin, which gives statistics for the fourth quarter 1992, contain figures on total homeless households and households temporarily accommodated in bed-and-breakfast hotels in London. Details of figures reported by individual local authorities in London can be found in the suplementary table to the bulletin. Copies of both are in the Library.

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his Department's current estimate of the number of people sleeping rough within the Greater London area.

Mr. Baldry: My Department does not make estimates of the numbers of persons sleeping rough. The 1991 census recorded the numbers of persons found sleeping rough at pre-identified sites in Greater London on census night, 21-22 April 1991; the total number recorded was 1,197.

A count conducted in November 1992 by voluntary organisations that work with homeless people found 419 homeless people sleeping rough in central London; this compares with a figure of over 1,000 prior to the introduction of the Department's rough sleepers initiative in 1990.

Housing Starts

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the number of new local authority and housing association housing starts for the last three years for which figures are available; and what is his Department's estimate of the number of new housing starts for each of the next 10 years in each London borough.

Mr. Baldry: Estimates are shown in the table for the total number of housing association and local authority housebuilding starts in England during the last three years. Housing associations are now the main providers of additional social sector housing.

	Number of dwellings
Year	Housing associations	Local authorities
1990	14,400	6,500
1991	15,700	3,000
1992	27,400	1,400

Estimates of housebuilding starts for each London borough are published in "Local Housing Statistics". Issue No. 103 contains annual figures up to 1991; issue No. 104 contains estimates for the first nine months of 1992. Copies of these publications are in the Library.

The Department does not prepare forecasts of housebuilding activity.

Environmental Protection

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what advice and guidelines on environmental protection, land and wildlife conservation his Department has given to London-wide bodies; and how often he updates the advice.

Mr. Baldry: Advice and guidance is issued, and revised as required, nationally and sent to London-wide bodies where appropriate to their statutory functions.

Forestry

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to reply to the first report of Session 1992-93 from the House of Commons Environment Committee on forestry and the environment.

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 2 April 1993]: The Government expect to respond within two months.

Council Tax

Mr. Channon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list those local authorities which are assuming less than a 98 per cent. success rate in levying council tax for the year 1993-94.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 14 April 1993]: There are 228 authorities which have assumed a collection rate of less than 98 per cent. I have arranged for the available information to be placed in the Library of the House.

Private Rented Homes

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the average weekly rent for rented accommodation in London, the south-east, the midlands and the private sector which has been let in the last 12 months.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 14 April 1993]: On the basis of data from the 1991 family expenditure survey it is estimated that the average weekly rent in 1991 for all households in rented accommodation that they had moved into in the previous 12 months was £47. The average for those households renting in the private sector, excluding housing association properties, was £65. The sample on which these figures are based is relatively small and the estimates are, therefore, subject to quite large sampling error. The sample size of the FES is too small to provide satisfactory estimates for individual regions.

Construction Industry (Merseyside)

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what measures he has to improve the unemployment situation in the construction industry on Merseyside; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 14 April 1993]: My Department has a substantial programme of capital spending on Merseyside which will create new opportunities for employment in the construction sector. In housing almost £100 million will be provided in 1993-94 through the estate action and housing investment programmes, while the Housing Corporation will support about £95 million of housing association expenditure. The Liverpool housing action trust will be spending over £100 million over the next seven to 10 years on improvements to tower blocks. The three Merseyside city challenges currently anticipate the creation of over 200,000 person weeks of construction employment, and further opportunities will be created by the ongoing programme of Merseyside development corporation.

In addition, the Liverpool city action team is working with a wide range of agencies and organisations to improve access to construction employment opportunities for local residents.

Archaeologists

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list by local authority the number of archaeologists currently in post; and what the corresponding figure was 10 years ago.

Mr. Brooke: I have been asked to reply.

This information is not held centrally. However, English Heritage estimates that approximately 300 archaeologists are employed by county councils and about 30 by district councils. It is estimated that in 1980 approximately 50 archaeologists were employed by local authorities.

Global Technology Conference

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the benefits to British business of the global technology partnership conference in Birmingham, 23 to 25 March.

Mr. Eggar: I have been asked to reply.

The United Kingdom's global technology partnership conference aimed to encourage greater technology co-operation between businesses in the United Kingdom and those in the more industrialised developing countries. Representatives of British business had the opportunity to establish contact with key business men and women from over 40 different developing countries, to learn of their local needs and difficulties and to offer solutions. The conference also discussed sources of help and funding available to United Kingdom and developing country businesses to assist technology co-operation. It generated much interest overseas and created opportunities for business follow-up. This should be facilitated through the three year follow-on initiative.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many companies from (a) Wales, (b) England, (c) Northern Ireland, (d) Scotland, (e) other nations of the European Community and (f) other nations outside the European Community were represented at the global technology partnership conference in Birmingham, from 23 to 25 March; what revenues were raised from the participation of these companies; and what benefits accrued from their attendance.

Mr. Eggar: I have been asked to reply.

Representatives of companies from all areas of the United Kingdom were invited to the United Kingdom's global technology partnership conference. In addition, key individuals from businesses in 44 developing countries were invited.

There were 189 participants from the United Kingdom, including speaker/participants. Most were present for the three days of the conference, although a number exercised the option to attend for one day only. There were three participants from Wales, 178 from England, one from Northern Ireland and seven from Scotland. A total of 106 key business men and women attended from non-EC countries overseas. In addition, there were four speakers from EC member states.

Revenue raised from these delegates was approximately £26,000 with further sums raised through industrial sponsorship.

There are both potential commercial and environmental benefits for all businesses involved. United Kingdom participants were able to learn first hand of the environmental problems faced by businesses in developing countries and to discuss the solutions available in the United Kingdom. The conference also discussed sources of help and funding available to United Kingdom and developing country businesses to assist technology co-operation.

Sellafield

Mr. Page: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the weekly cost to BNFL of the thermal oxide reprocessing plant remaining idle.

Mr. Eggar: I have been asked to reply.

British Nuclear Fuels plc has said that it assesses the reduction in profit arising from the delay in the THORP project at about £2 million a week.

Electrolysis and Massage

Sir John Hunt: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the fees charged by each of the local authorities in the United Kingdom for licences to operate premises offering special treatments such as electrolysis or massage for which a licence is required by law.

Mr. Charles Wardle: I have been asked to reply.

The information requested is not collected centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

WALES

Radiation

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the health effects of radioactive discharges from (a) Amersham International plc in Cardiff and (b) the atomic weapons establishment at Llanishen.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Discharges of radioactive wastes may only be made in accordance with the terms and conditions of authorisations under the Radioactive Substances Act 1960.

Authorisation is dependent upon the operators demonstrating that discharges will be below levels set by the Government to ensure that the public is not exposed to any significant radiological risk. Regular monitoring by the regulatory authorities has consistently shown that the discharges are made within such levels.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he has taken to increase radiation protection measures for members of the public in Wales following the details of radioactive contamination in the Principality included under each of tables 4.01 to 4.06 and 4.08 to 4.35 of the Environmental Digest for Wales 1992.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The environmental monitoring exercises detailed in the digest form part of a routine monitoring programme which provides an additional check that members of the public are not being exposed to unsafe radiation levels. The data show that radioactivity levels from artificial sources are generally very small and declining, are in total substantially less than the levels resulting from natural sources and present no significant risk to public health. It is not therefore necessary to take steps to increase radiation protection measures for members of the public in Wales.

Contaminated Land

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to the answer of 24 March by the Secretary of State for the Environment to the hon. Member for Halesowen and Stourbridge (Mr. Hawksley), Official Report, column 633-34 on the creation of registers of potentially contaminated land under the Environmental Protection Act 1990, how he will update table 1.48 on potentially contaminated sites by district in the Environmental Digest for Wales 1992.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information in table 1.48 of the Environmental Digest for Wales 1992 is based on a survey of potentially contaminated land undertaken in 1988 on behalf of the Welsh Office. The survey information continues to provide a helpful guide to local authorities in undertaking their statutory duty to identify and tackle sites which pose a public health or environmental hazard; and the need to update it will be kept under review.

General Practitioners

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much and on what basis general practitioners are paid per head in Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The independent Doctors and Dentists Review Body has responsibility for making recommendations to Government on the level of remuneration it considers appropriate for doctors and dentists in the national health service in Great Britain. Specifically, it is responsible for:

(i) the provision to be made for estimated practice expenses for the average GP;
(ii) intended average net income per GP;
(iii) the application of a balancing correction where appropriate;
(iv) a scale of fees and allowances designed to deliver the sum of (i), (ii) and (iii) (intended average gross income) to the average GP.

Following the decision that it would not be appropriate for the review body to make recommendations for 1993-94, announced by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health on 3 December 1992, and in line with the announcement by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer in his autumn statement that public sector pay settlements for 1993-94 will be restricted to no more than 1·5 per cent., the intended average net income for general medical practitioners in England and Wales from 1 April 1993 is £40,610.

Council Tenants (Welfare Services)

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he has taken to consult on the future funding arrangements and powers for local authorities to provide welfare services to council tenants in Wales.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Welsh Office issued a consultation paper to local authorities, their associations and other interested bodies on 5 April. I have placed copies in the Library of the House.

The paper sets out proposals for the longer-term funding and provision of welfare services for tenants of local housing authorities. It proposes that housing authorities should retain powers to provide these services, which are being considered as part of the Housing and Urban Development Bill, until after local government re-organisation. The paper also sets out options for the exclusion of welfare services from the housing revenue account and the possible timing of such changes.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment is consulting separately on these matters in England.

EMPLOYMENT

Travel-to-Interview Scheme

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment (1) what is the maximum financial assistance that can be claimed for overnight subsistence by unemployed people under the travel-to-interview scheme; and if she will make a statement;

(2) what are the maximum travelling expenses that can be claimed by unemployed people who are given assistance under the travel-to-interview scheme when they travel by (a) public or (b) private transport; and how many interviews they can claim assistance for.

Mr. McLoughlin: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mr. M. Fogden to Ms Clare Short, dated 15 April 1993:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State has asked me to write to you direct to respond to your Parliamentary Questions to her about the Travel to Interview Scheme (TIS). This is something which falls within the responsibilities she has delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

It may be helpful if I explain the background to the scheme. TIS was introduced in 1986 to help with travel costs for unemployed people to attend job interviews in the United Kingdom but beyond daily travelling distance of their home area, thus widening the applicants' jobsearch, improving their chances of obtaining work and encouraging labour mobility. During 1991-92 the scheme helped 31,000 applicants at a cost of some £950,000. A few basic conditions must be met before assistance can be granted, to ensure that the limited funds available are concentrated on those unemployed people in most need. A leaflet outlining the scope of the scheme is enclosed.

People who are eligible for help with fares may also qualify for the cost of up to two nights stay which is unavoidable. The actual cost of the overnight accommodation is reimbursed up to a fixed limit which is currently £27·20 per night.

Eligible applicants may choose to travel by public transport or private vehicle. If they choose public transport the full costs of the cheapest convenient service are met by the scheme. Travel by private vehicle is reimbursed at a fixed rate of 16p per mile (increased from 15p on 5 April 1993). However the amount is limited to what it would have cost by convenient public transport.

You also asked about the maximum expenses which may be claimed. There is no ceiling as such on the total expenses which may be paid but any applicant failing to get a job after 20 interviews using TIS assistance would be counselled. Each subsequent interview which required TIS assistance would be considered carefully and assistance refused unless it was felt the applicant had a reasonable chance of getting the job.

I hope this is helpful.

As agreed in the Government's reply to the 1990 Treasury and Civil Service Committee Report "Progress in the Next Steps Initiative", I will place a copy of this letter in the Library of the House and in its Public Information Office.

ACAS

Mr. Burns: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment when she expects to receive the annual report of the Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service.

Mr. McLoughlin: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has received the ACAS report for 1992, which will be laid before both Houses of Parliament on Tuesday 20 April. The report is also to be published on that day and copies will then be available from the Vote Office.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Iraqi Students

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what consideration he has given to making direct payments from frozen Iraqi Government accounts to Iraqi students and their host academic institutions in the United Kingdom for fees and support.

Mr. Nelson: We have always considered applications to debit Iraqi accounts for living and educational expenses of residents of Iraq in the United Kingdom. Reasonable amounts are normally permitted. However, the permission of the account holder must also be obtained before accounts can be debited.

Data Protection Act 1984

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many certificates have been signed under the terms of section 27 of the Data Protection Act 1984 for each year since 1987.

Mr. Nelson: I am aware of none so far as the Treasury is concerned.

Research Institutions

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the current practice on the effect of the receipt of grant income to Government research institutions from EC research programmes on the available resources of those institutions; and what arrangements are made for research institutions which are "next steps" agencies.

Sir John Cope: Payments from EC research programmes are available in full to add to the resources of Government research institutions. The precise level of resources available to a Government research institution is a matter for decision by the departments which are responsible for them. This is so whether or not the research institutions are "next steps" agencies.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what income the Government derived from EC research framework programme grants placed in Government research institutions and agencies in each year since 1990-91.

Sir John Cope: The bulk of EC research framework programme grants coming to the United Kingdom are paid directly to the private sector, including universities. Details of receipts to the private sector are not held centrally. Expenditure in relation to contracts with Government departments, agencies and research councils, which count as public sector receipts, was as follows:

Year	£ million
1990-91	5·0
1991-92	9·5
[1]1992-93	8·6

[1] estimated outturn

EDUCATION

Assisted Places

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Education, pursuant to his answers of 29 March to the hon. Member for Wallsend (Mr. Byers), Official Report, columns 66-75, if he will list the payments made and the average payment per student under the assisted places scheme to (a) Dame Allans Boys, (b) Dame Allans Girls, (c) Central Newcastle High, (d) Kings, Tynemouth, (e) La Sagesse Convent School, (f) Newcastle upon Tyne Church High and (g) the Royal Grammar, Newcastle.

Mr. Forth: The information requested is as follows:

School name	Payments made in academic year 1991-92 £	Average payment per assisted pupil £
Dame Allans Boys	207,082	1,755
Dame Allans Girls	251,519	2,096
Central Newcastle High	218,220	1,898
Kings, Tynemouth	27,533	2,753
La Sagesse Convent	352,868	2,352
Newcastle upon Tyne Church High	33,586	2,239
Royal Grammar, Newcastle	487,375	1,853

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

North Korea

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received regarding the security implications for the Korean peninsula and south-east Asia of North Korea's announcement of its intended withdrawal from the non-proliferation treaty.

Mr. Goodlad: There is widespread concern about the North Korean announcement of its intention to withdraw. We are working actively with other concerned Governments to encourage North Korea to retract its announcement.

Sri Lanka

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the representatives of the civil community which the British high commissioner met during his visit to Jaffna on 18 February; and what issues were discussed at these meetings.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: The high commissioner did not meet representatives of the civil community during his visit to Jaffna on 18 February.

Falkland Islands

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to ensure the maximum economic independence of the Falkland Islands from the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Garel-Jones: Apart from the costs of defence, the Falkland Islands are economically independent of the United Kingdom.

Data Protection Act 1984

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many certificates have been signed under the terms of section 27 of the Data Protection Act 1984 since June 1992.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: I am aware of none so far as the Foreign and Commonwealth Office is concerned.

Channel Islands

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the progress made with the German Government concerning the claims for compensation by Channel Island detainees deported to German internment camps during world war II; if he will make it his policy to raise also the position of merchant seamen from elsewhere in the United Kingdom who were similarly detained; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Garel-Jones: Representatives of the British and German Governments have, since German unification, been discussing the settlement of our claim in respect of the Channel Islanders illegally deported by the German occupation authorities. We have raised this with the Germans on many occasions and at many levels, including that of Foreign Secretary.

The German Government have told us definitively that they are not prepared to give the Channel Islanders any form of compensation or settlement. We are disappointed by the decision, but I regret that we see no realistic prospect that their claims can be met.

Merchant seamen detained by the Germans during the second world war fall into an entirely different category. Their detention was proper according to the rules of war. There is no question of claiming compensation.

Iraq

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to ensure that, either through the United Nations Secretary-General or unilaterally, monitors are sent into northern Iraq under resolution 688, to verify the human rights situation throughout the country.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We have consistently supported the proposal, put forward by the United Nations Special Rapporteur on Iraq in his report of February 1992, for the positioning of human rights monitors throughout Iraq. With our European Community partners we co-sponsored the resolution passed at the Commission on Human Rights on 10 March 1993 which called on the Secretary General to take the necessary measures to send human rights monitors to Iraq. We will continue to do all we can to support him in carrying out this mandate.

Northern Ireland

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps British diplomatic staff in the United States are taking to inform the people there, and in particular the incoming Congressmen, of the true situation in Northern Ireland and of the activities of members of the IRA.

Mr. Lennox-Boyd: Our diplomatic staff in the United States, in close conjunction with the Northern Ireland Office and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, make every effort to ensure that key opinion-formers in the United States, including Congressmen, are aware of the true situation in Northern Ireland. Our information activities there include written and oral briefings, interviews and speeches by British officials, and visits to Northern Ireland by selected American opinion-formers.

China

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent communications Her Majesty's Government have had with the People's Republic of China on (a) nuclear testing and (b) nuclear non-proliferation.

Mr. Garel-Jones: We have recently had discussions with Chinese authorities about the announcement by North Korea of her intention to withdraw from the non-proliferation treaty. We have had no recent bilateral communications with the Chinese on nuclear testing, but both subjects are discussed regularly in United Nations and other multilateral forums.

South Korea

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on his recent visit to the Republic of Korea.

Mr. Goodlad: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary paid a successful visit to the Republic of Korea last week. He had full and useful exchanges with, among others, the President, the Foreign Minister, and the Defence Minister. As well as bilateral matters, their discussions covered regional and international issues including North Korea, market access, trade, technology co-operation, investment and the European Community. This was a very good opportunity to establish contact with the new South Korean Administration. My right hon. Friend also met and had useful discussions with representatives of the British business community.

PRIME MINISTER

South Africa (Arms Shipments)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Rhondda (Mr. Rogers) of 18 March, Official Report, column 357, if he will list the appropriate authorities to whom evidence on unlawful shipments of arms to South Africa should be submitted.

The Prime Minister: Her Majesty's Customs and Excise.

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 15 April.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 15 April.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House I shall be having further meetings later today.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Bail

Mr. Stephen: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many applications were made for bail to (a) the Crown court, (b) the High Court and (c) the Court of Appeal, during the last two years for which figures are available by persons whose application for bail had been refused by a lower court.

Mr. John M. Taylor: This information is not collected.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Data Protection Act 1984

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many certificates have been signed under the terms of section 27 of the Data Protection Act 1984 since April 1982.

Mr. Key: My Department was formed in April 1992 and I assume that the question relates to the period since then. No certificates have been issued so far as the Department of National Heritage is concerned.

Tourism

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what percentage of holidays were undertaken by British domestic tourists in the United Kingdom in each year since 1985 (a) at the seaside, (b) in a small town, (c) in a large town, (d) in London, (e) in the countryside and (f) other.

Mr. Key: The available information is contained in the following table:

Domestic tourists in the United Kingdom/Great Britain
Percentage figures for type of location stayed at on all holidays trips are shown below:

Type of location stayed at	1985 per cent.	1986 per cent.	1987 per cent.	1988 per cent.	1989 per cent.	1990 per cent.	1991 per cent.
Seaside	34	35	31	36	—	40	40
Small town	18	17	17	18	—	17	18
Large town	12	14	14	14	—	18	18
London	7	7	8	6	6	5	5
Countryside	26	25	27	22	—	23	23
Unspecified	6	6	5	7	—	•	•

Sources: 1985 to 1988 figures—British Tourism Survey Monthly.
1989 to 1991 figures—United Kingdom Tourism Survey.

Notes:
1. The British Tourism Survey Monthly (covering the period 1985 to 1988) refers to holidays in Great Britain.
2. The United Kingdom Tourism Survey (covering the period 1989 to 1991) refers to holidays in the United Kingdom.
3. London is not included in the category "Large Town".
4. Holidays by location type were not covered by the 1989 United Kingdom Tourism Survey.

5. The symbol (*) is used to indicate a percentage of less than 0·5 per cent.
6. An individual year's percentages may sum to more than 100 per cent. This occurs because on any single holiday, it is possible to stay at more than one type of location.

Advisory Agencies

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National heritage if he will list the membership of the heritage advisory agencies; what were the dates of appointment and terms of office for each individual; and what qualification was required for appointment.

Mr. Brooke: I have two bodies to advise me on issues relating to the built heritage: the Historic Buildings and Monuments Commission, commonly known as English Heritage, and the Royal Commission on the Historical Monuments of England. The members of these two bodies and their terms of office are listed in the tables.

Details of the qualifications for appointment to these bodies are contained in schedule 3 to the National Heritage Act 1983 for English Heritage, and in the royal warrant issued in 1992 for the royal commission. Copies of both documents are held in the Library of the House.

Note: Appointments made by the Prime Minister.

National Transcommunications Ltd.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many people applied and signed for the information memorandum for the sale of National Transcommunications Ltd.

Mr. Brooke: Fifty copies of the confidential information memorandum were sent out.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many competitive bids were (a) considered and (b) investigated for National Transcommunications Ltd.

Mr. Brooke: Three indicative bids were shortlisted; two continued preparation for bidding up until the final deadline.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how much National Transcommunications Ltd. was sold for on privatisation; and how much it was valued at before sale.

Mr. Brooke: £70 million. This was towards the top end of the indicative valuation of the company. The National Audit Office report, published on 27 November 1992, concluded that the price was satisfactory.

Arts Council

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list the planned summary allocation of Arts Council spending for 1993-94 by regional arts board areas and on a per capita basis.

Mr. Brooke [holding answer 14 April 1993]: The figures requested are as shown in the table. It includes all Arts Council spending whether allocated centrally or regionally:

Regional arts board area	Arts Council and RAB spending[1] 1993-94 (£000)	Population[2] (000)	Per capita (£)
London	[3]72,254	6,794	10·63
Southern	4,778	4,548	1·05
South Eastern	3,196	3,945	0·81
South West	5,377	3,779	1·42
Eastern	7,125	5,708	1·25
East Midlands	4,701	3,342	1·41
West Midlands	[4]15,361	5,219	2·94
Yorkshire and Humberside	10,256	4,952	2·07
North West	11,202	6,474	1·73
Northern	6,361	3,075	2·07

[1] Includes grants to national companies. Does not include touring, for which no regional breakdown is available.
[2] Based on OPCS figures, 1990.
[3] Includes estimate of £3·332 million for support for the Royal Shakespeare Company's London activity.
[4] Includes estimate of £5·138 million for support for the Royal Shakespeare Company in Stratford.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what weight is given to population and to cultural deprivation in the assessment of Arts Council allocations to regional arts boards.

Mr. Brooke [holding answer 14 April 1993]: In assessing allocation to RABs, the Arts Council takes population and cultural deprivation into account along with a range of other factors, one of which is the level of direct funding by the council to organisations within the RAB area.

TRANSPORT

Traffic Congestion

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when his Department intends to provide guidance on the interpretation of the phrase "severe traffic congestion" in section 7 of the Transport Act 1985.

Mr. Freeman: My Department intends to issue guidance to traffic commissioners on their use of traffic regulation conditions under section 7 of the Transport Act 1985 as soon as possible after a decision has been reached on the current appeal to the Secretary of State about the use of these powers in Sheffield. Interpretation of the phrase "severe traffic congestion" is a matter for the traffic commissioner in the light of prevailing traffic conditions.

London Buses

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has on the ages of the current fleet of full-sized buses in London; what provision for investment has been made for the future for buses; and what was the level of past investment in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Norris: The current average age of full-sized buses in the LBL fleet is 13·1 years. Bus investment expenditure is given in the table:

£ million

Year	Investment expenditure 1993-94 prices
1983	52·5
[1]1984-85	31·7
1985-86	20·9
1986-87	13·1
1987-88	3·7
1988-89	8·5
1989-90	15·2
1990-91	15·7
1991-92	24·9
1992-93	26·0

[1] 1984-85 was a 15-month year.

I understand that LBL plans to invest £12 million on new buses in 1993-94, which will be the last full year before the completion of privatisation of the LBL subsidiaries.

Transport Policy (Sustainability)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research his Department is (a) carrying out and (b) commissioning into the sustainability of transport policy.

Mr. MacGregor: The Department has established a group to monitor longer term and transport research. Projects are currently under way or have recently been completed in the following areas:

—demand management and forecasting;
—network modelling;
—transport and the environment;
—transport safety.

Environmental Achievements

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what have been the environmental achievements of the designated Green Minister in his Department during the past year.

Mr. MacGregor: Speed limiters for new heavy goods vehicles were introduced on 1 August 1992. Certain existing vehicles over 16 tonnes will be required to have speed limiters from 1 August this year. These measures will improve fuel consumption and reduce emissions.

Since 31 December 1992 most new cars have required catalytic converters to meet tighter EC emission standards. The United Kingdom Government continues to press for even tighter emissions and noise standards for vehicles and to discuss with other member states and the Commission measures to improve the fuel efficiency of new cars.

In 1992-93 some £4 million was allocated for bus priority measures, which will encourage the use of buses. A further £15·5 million has been allocated for 1993-94.

At the beginning of March the Department published "The Good Roads Guide". The guide is aimed at professionals involved in the design of trunk roads. It is essentially a checklist and source book covering many of the issues that have to be tackled in designing roads to make them as environmentally satisfactory as possible.

We are working on a number of other initiatives for 1993-94, including the publication of: an updated "Manual of Environmental Appraisal", "The Wildflower Handbook" and "The Design Guide for Environmental Barriers".

Pedestrian Routes, London

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what overall strategy for London his Department has undertaken to improve and increase pedestrian routes;

(2) what overall strategy for London his Department has undertaken to co-operate in the improvement and proliferation of pedestrian routes;

(3) what overall strategy for London his Department has undertaken with the Metropolitan police to advise or co-operate with London boroughs on the upgrading, improvement and proliferation of pedestrian routes in the interests of safety.

Mr. Norris: Local authority circular 5/92 (copy in the House of Commons Library) states the Department's policies with respect to facilities for pedestrians in London. The main responsibility for pedestrian routes rests with the London boroughs. Borough schemes that enhance pedestrian safety may be eligible for transport supplementary grant as a local safety scheme. Additionally, the traffic director for London will fund the development and introduction of pedestrian facilities which he approves as part of the priority (red) route local plan process.

DVOIT

Mrs. Roe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will list the names of the companies shortlisted in the tender for the privatisation of the Drivers, Vehicles and Operators Information Technology Agency.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: Companies interested in purchasing DVOIT have put forward their responses to the advertisement in the EC Official Journal, and to subsequent requests for information, in confidence, and it would not be right for me to list them.

M11 Link

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the Hackney M11 link plan.

Mr. Norris: The scheme will provide a strategic link between the A102(M) east cross route at Hackney Wick and the junction of the M11, the A12 and the A406 North Circular road at the Redbridge roundabout east of Wanstead. It will comprise about 3·75 miles of continuous, dual-carriageway trunk road.

It will relieve existing unsuitable roads of strategic traffic. Stratford, Leyton, Leytonstone and Wanstead will all benefit when the heavy through traffic is removed from residential and shopping streets.

Following the recent successful defence of a challenge to the scheme in the High Court, tenders have been reinvited. We aim to start work in Wanstead in the autumn. The whole scheme will take about four years to complete.

Heathrow Airport

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many additional aircraft movements he estimates as a result of the construction of a fifth terminal at Heathrow.

Mr. Norris: My Department does not produce forecasts for aircraft movements. The number of aircraft movements at Heathrow and its relation to terminal capacity may well be a matter for debate at the public inquiry into a fifth terminal.

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his Department's estimate of the number of passengers transferring to the new rail link from Paddington to Heathrow from (a) private cars, (b) tube and (c) road public transport.

Mr. Norris: I understand that the Heathrow link is expected to carry about 6 million passengers a year. The Department has not produced detailed estimates of transfer from each alternative mode.

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many additional passenger journeys to and from Heathrow airport he estimates will result from the construction of a fifth terminal at Heathrow by (a) rail and (b) road; and what is his estimate of the numbers travelling by road by (a) public transport and (b) private cars.

Mr. Norris: The Department will be working on figures as part of its examination of the British Airports Authority's proposals for a fifth terminal.

Some estimates of this kind have been prepared by BAA and are contained in the environmental statement issued in connection with its planning application for a fifth terminal. I am putting a copy in the House Library.

Strategic Authority, London

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations his Department has had from outside bodies calling for a single strategic authority to oversee transport, land use and environment in London; and if he will list them.

Mr. Norris: We have received a number of representations suggesting that some sort of agency is required to oversee transport, planning and related issues.

These have included the former National Economic Development Council in its "Amber Alert" report and the CBI's London region in the interim report of its transport task force.

Aircraft Movements

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many additional aircraft movements he estimates at Gatwick, Luton, Stansted, Heathrow and London City on a year on year basis until 2010.

Mr. Norris: My Department does not produce forecasts for aircraft movements in the format requested. However, the RUCATSE working group on runway capacity to serve the south east will be considering assumptions about aircraft movements. Its report will be published later this year.

British Transport Police

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received about the future of the British Transport police following (a) publication of the consultative document, "The Future Status of the British Transport Police" and (b) 2 February; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: Some 50 responses to the consultation document have been received, two of them since 2 February. In addition, I have met representatives of the British Transport Police Federation. Many of the comments we received emphasised the desirability of the force remaining under public sector control, and the importance of standards of law and order being maintained. The consultation period has now closed and we will publish our conclusions shortly.

I have already announced that it is the Government's intention to ensure that the British Transport police will remain in the public sector as a single unified force. There is no intention to split "L" division from the rest of the force, so policing of the London Underground will continue largely as at present. We propose, through licensing, to make it compulsory for operators to use BTP for law and order purposes.

Railway Investment

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what moves he is considering to create a framework to maximise private sector investment in the railway network; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer announced in the autumn statement on 12 November 1992, Official Report, column 996, the Government's support for joint ventures between the public and the private sector for the construction of infrastructure, along with a £150 million special leasing arrangement for BR in respect of new rolling stock. My right hon. Friend has since announced in the Budget on 16 March 1993, Official Report, column 194, the Government's commitment to joint ventures for the channel tunnel rail link, crossrail and Heathrow express.

These new measures are set in the overall context of the Government's proposals to privatise and liberalise the railway, which will encourage the development of an efficient and modern industry responsive to customer requirements, and thus encourage private sector investment.

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what positive representations he has received from the private sector to build new railways following publication of the Railways Bill; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The Department has received a number of representations from private sector parties interested in the financing and construction of new railways; the details are commercially confidential.

Rail Freight

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what specific criteria he has established for companies seeking grants under section 8 of the Railways Act 1974; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: Applications for freight facilities grants under section 8 of the Railways Act 1974 have to meet both environmental and financial criteria. Applicants have to demonstrate that the provision of rail facilities will result in the traffic in question being moved by rail, rather than over unsuitable roads, and that the proposed facilities could not be justified commercially without assistance.

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many representations he has received following his proposal to sell the British Rail freight business; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The Department has received a number of expressions of interest in the Government's plans for privatising and liberalising rail freight.

Discussions with interested parties have been on a commercially confidential basis.

Railway Heritage Trust

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received about the future of the Railway Heritage Trust; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: I met Mr. Leslie Stone, a director of the Railway Heritage Trust, on 11 February to discuss future funding for the trust. I expect discussions to take place between the Railway Heritage Trust and those concerned in British Rail with the formation of Railtrack to cover future funding of the trust.

Steam Railways

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to ensure the future operation of Britain's steam railways following publication of the Railways Bill; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: The Railways Bill contains powers for the Secretary of State to exempt railways individually or by class from the requirements for licensing, franchising and open access it imposes. The Government will grant appropriate exemptions to preserved railways, and will consult interested parties on the form of exemption.

Rail Fares

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received about the future of the present range of reduced fares and railcards since publication of the Railways Bill; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: My right hon. Friend has received a number of representations about these matters.

After privatisation, the offer of railcards and discounted ticketing arrangements will be a matter for operators' judgment, as it is now for BR. Through tickets will continue to be available in a range of ticket and fare types, but it will be for operators to determine their price by negotiation. In a competitive environment there will be every incentive for operators to seek to attract custom and maximise revenue by offering discounted tickets.

The Government therefore see no need to impose specific requirements on operators to offer particular types of discount facility, with the exception of the disabled persons railcard which is provided voluntarily by British Rail and does not make a profit. We have announced our intention that all passenger rail franchisees should be obliged to offer common discount facilities to disabled people on broadly similar lines to the present arrangements.

Railway Pensions

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received following the publication of "Railway Pensions after Privatisation"; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer that I gave on 1 April to the hon. Member for Cunninghame, North (Mr. Wilson), Official Report, column 362.

Motorways

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals his Department has for (a) new additional motorway service areas and (b) lighting additional sections of unlit motorways; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle [holding answer 1 April 1993]: Under a new policy announced on 6 August 1992, it is now for the private sector rather than the Government to identify where there is a need for further motorway service areas and to secure their development. There are, however, sites on the M6, M11, M20, M25 and M40 (two) where planning clearance for motorway service area use was granted to the Department before the new policy was announced. We are continuing to pursue development of these sites jointly with the private sector.

Motorway lighting is provided, subject to environmental appraisal, where it can be justified on safety grounds, taking account of the savings in night-time accidents. When motorways are widened to four lanes it is general policy to install lighting. Over the period to 1996 I expect lighting to be installed on more than 90 miles of motorway.

SCOTLAND

Equal Opportunities

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when his Department and the Lord Advocate's office last conducted surveys of (a) ethnic origins and (b) the number of women among their employees; when they next plan to do so; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: My Department conducted a voluntary survey of the ethnic origins of staff in 1987 with a follow-up, reminder exercise in 1989 and thereafter all new entrants have been invited to complete questionnaires.

Following the 1987 survey, the employment of persons from ethnic minorities is also constantly monitored by the Lord Advocate's Department.

Neither Department has any plans to conduct additional surveys of ethnic origins.

In both Departments surveys of women employees are unnecessary as the sex of all employees is clearly identified in staff records.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he has taken to recruit women, members of ethnic minorities and disabled people, respectively, in top grades of employment at the Scottish Office and at the Lord Advocate's Department.

Mr. Lang: Recruits to the senior grades (as to any grade in the civil service) are selected on merit on the basis of fair and open competition, unless one of the exceptions permitted under the Civil Service Order in Council 1991 applies. Various steps have been taken by the civil service commissioners to aid recruitment from all sectors of the community including:

extending links with higher education institutions;
equal opportunities training for those involved in selection;
using validated selection procedures.

Mr. Janner: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many and what percentage of officers in each grade from 1 to 7 and overall in his Department and in the Lord Advocate's Office are (a) women, (b) from ethnic minorities and (c) disabled people.

Mr. Lang: The number and percentage of officers in grades 1-7 and in total in my Department who were (a) women (as at 1 April 1992), (b) from ethnic minorities (as at 1 April 1992) and (c) disabled persons (as at 1 July 1992), are as follows:

Grade (and equivalents)	Women	Percentage
3	3	11·5
4	1	6·2
5	17	12·6
6	36	17·1
7	68	14·7
Total (head count)	2,828	44·9

The total number of officers employed in my Department who described themselves as belonging to an ethnic minority was 27 or 0·4 per cent. Of that number one grade 7 is so described (0·2 per cent. of that grade).

At 1 July 1992 there were two registered disabled officers at grade 6 level in my Department which represented 1 per cent of staff in that grade.

The total number of registered disabled staff was 86 which represented 1·4 per cent. of the total staff. In addition there were eight officers who described themselves as disabled, which represented a further 0·1 per cent. of staff. Two of these staff were at grade 7 level.

In the Lord Advocate's Department, the number and percentage of officers in grades 1 to 7 and in total who were (a) women (as at 1.4.92), (b) from ethnic minorities (as at 1.4.92) or (c) disabled persons (as at 1.7.92) are as shown below:

Grade	Women	Percentage
4	—	—
5	3	10
6	4	10
7	63	49
Total (head count)	768	70

There were no officers in the Lord Advocate's Department who described themselves as belonging to an ethnic minority, nor were there any registered disabled persons in grades 1 to 7 of the Department. There were, however, seven registered disabled officers in the Department in total, which represented 0·6 per cent. of the total staff.

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many of the appointments made by him as listed in "Public Bodies 1992" came within the categories set out in paragraphs 49 and 50 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers" and required a submission to the Prime Minister.

Mr. Lang: Twenty-four.

Dental Care

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many non-exempt patients had dental check-ups in each of the last three years.

Mr. Stewart: Information is recorded on individual courses of treatment rather than patients treated. The total number of dental examinations for non-exempt patients is contained in the table.

Number of dental examinations carried out for non-exempt patients in Scotland

Year	Number of examinations
1990	1,587,607
1991	1,794,750
1992	1,815,098

Data Protection Act 1984

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many certificates have been signed under the terms of section 27 of the Data Protection Act 1984 for each year since 1987.

Mr. Lang: No certificates have been signed by myself or my predecessor, my right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Edinburgh, Pentlands (Mr. Rifkind), under section 27 of the Data Protection Act 1984 in the period since 1987.

Huntington's Chorea

Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how much money and resources the Lothian and Strathclyde health boards are providing for sufferers of Huntington's disease;

(2) how many cases of patients with Huntington's disease there are in Lothian and Strathclyde; and how many are in need of constant care;

(3) how many chronically ill Huntington's disease patients in constant care are in charitable institutions in Lothian and Strathclyde.

Mr. Stewart: At 31 December 1992 there were 30 patients in hospital with a diagnosis of Huntington's Chorea who were normally resident in Lothian and Strathclyde. The other information requested is not held centrally.

Hospital Closures

Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what criteria he has given to health boards on alternative use of vacant hospitals or institutions prior to closure.

Mr. Stewart: Current guidance requires that consideration is given to alternative health related use for vacant hospital or other NHS property before it is regarded as surplus to NHS requirements.

Obscenity (Sentences)

Mr. Hood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the sentences available to courts in dealing with obscene, violent and pornographic material; and if he will make a statement.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton (holding answer 2 March 1993]: The table summarises the main statutory offences and maximum penalties in relation to obscene, violent and pornographic material. Additionally, common law offences such as shameless indecency may be relevant. The maximum sentence for a common law offence on conviction on indictment in the sheriff court is an unlimited fine and three years' imprisonment, or in the High Court an unlimited fine and life imprisonment.

Statutory provision	Offence	Maximum sentence
1. Civic Government (Scotland) Act 1982
(a) section 51(1)	Displaying obscene material in a public place.	On summary conviction, a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum (currently £5,000) and 3 months' imprisonment. On conviction on indictment, a fine and 2 years' imprisonment.
(b) section 51(2)	Publishing, selling or distributing or, with a view to its eventual sale or distribution, making, printing, having or keeping obscene material.	As above.
(c) section 51(2A)	Including obscene material in a programme included in a programme service or, with a view to its eventual inclusion in such a programme, making, printing, having or keeping obscene material.	As above.
(d) section 52	Taking, or permitting to be taken, an indecent photograph of a child; or distributing or showing such a photograph; or possessing such a photograph with a view to distributing or showing it; or publishing or causing to be published any advertisement likely to be understood as conveying that the advertiser distributes or shows such a photograph.	As above.

Statutory provision	Offence	Maximum sentence
(e) section 52A	Possessing any indecent photograph of a child.	On summary conviction, a fine not exceeding level 5 on the standard scale (£5,000).
2. Indecent Displays (Control) Act 1981
(a) section 1	Publicly displaying, or causing or permitting the public display of, indecent matter.	On summary conviction, in the district court a fine of £200 and in the sheriff court a fine of the prescribed sum (£5,000). On conviction on indictment, a fine and 2 years' imprisonment.
3. Video Recordings Act 1984
(a) section 9	Supplying, or offering to supply, an unclassified video recording.	On summary conviction, a fine not exceeding £20,000.
(b) section 10	Possessing an unclassified video recording for the purpose of supply.	As above.
(c) section 11	Supplying a classified video recording in breach of its classification.	On summary conviction, a fine not exceeding level 5 (£5,000)
(d) section 12(1)	Supplying or offering to supply, at a place other than a licensed sex shop, any classified video recording whose supply is restricted to licensed sex shops.	As above.
(e) section 12(3)	Possessing a classified video recording, the supply of which is restricted to sex shops, for the purpose of supplying it at any place other than a sex shop.	As above.
(f) section 13	Supplying, or offering to supply, a video recording in breach of labelling requirements.	As above.
(g) section 14(1)	Supplying, or offering to supply, an unclassified video recording that contains a false indication as to its classification.	As above.
(h) section 14(3)	Supplying, or offering to supply, a classified video recording that contains a false indication as to its classification.	As above.
4. Post Office Act 1953
(a) section 11	Sending indecent or obscene material in a postal packet.	On summary conviction, a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum (£5,000). On conviction on indictment, 12 months' imprisonment.

HM Prison, Greenock

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to improve the visitor facilities for disabled visitors to Her Majesty's prison, Greenock.

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 22 March 1993]: A general refurbishment of the reception area for those visiting prisoners was completed at the end of 1992. A ramp provides access for the disabled. Plans have been drawn up for the provision of a toilet for disabled visitors. The installation will be completed by the end of June 1993.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Income Support

Mr. Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the results of the Income Support Statistics Annual Inquiry May 1992 will become available.

Mr. Burt: An announcement will be made shortly on the publication date via the Central Statistical Office's monthly press notice on the release dates of statistical series.

Education Courses

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security whether unemployed income support claimants can undertake courses of higher education under the 21-hour rule; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: People in higher education who are not students following a full-time course of study may receive benefit under the income support 21-hour rule provided they fulfil the normal conditions laid down.

Fuel Bills

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make it his policy to raise the level of invalid care allowance and the carer premium in light of the introduction of value added tax charge on domestic fuel.

Mr. Scott: We have no plans to do so.

VAT on domestic fuel will be introduced in April 1994 and extra help will be given to people on low incomes. An announcement giving details of this extra help will be make this autumn.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make it his policy to extend entitlement to the carer premium to carers over the age of 65 years, following the introduction of a value added tax charge on domestic fuel.

Mr. Burt: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire (Mr. Kirkwood) on 25 January at col. 583.

Council Tax

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many copies of his information folder, "Introduction to Council Tax Benefit," have been published; at what cost; and to whom it has been distributed.

Mr. Burt: The information pack, "Introduction to Council Tax Benefit," was produced primarily for advisory bodies. It has been sent to all Members of Parliament, Citizens Advice Bureaux area offices, War Pensioners Welfare Services offices, DSS information officers, and other interested parties. 1,200 copies have so far been produced at a total cost of £5,835.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Nuclear Energy

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what consultancy contracts his Department has placed with BDO Binder Hamlyn to evaluate nuclear costs over the past year.

Mr. Eggar: None. BDO Binder Hamlyn's report, which verified information provided by Nuclear Electric on the costs of the company's Magnox stations and was used by Ernst and Young in its study for the coal review, was carried out by BDO as external auditors to Nuclear Electric.

Mr. Hood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what material is used in the Sizewell B vessel head penetrations.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 14 April 1993]: This is a matter for Nuclear Electric plc.

Mr. Hood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the lessons to be drawn from vessel head penetration cracking in VHPs made of Inconel 600 in French PWR reactors; and what is their application to Sizewell B.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 14 April 1993]: I understand that the Health and Safety Executive's nuclear installations inspectorate will consider any implications for Sizewell B arising from the discovery of cracking in vessel head penetrations in French PWRs during the pre-operational assessment of the power station which it is currently undertaking. The NII will not allow Sizewell B to start up until it is assured that it is safe to do so.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his oral statement of 25 March, Official Report, column 1227, what changes have been made in the planned scope of the nuclear review originally announced by his predecessor in November 1989 following his decision to bring it forward.

Mr. Eggar: As stated in the White Paper, "The Prospects for Coal", a further announcement about the review of the future prospects for nuclear power will be made later this year.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will set out the definitions of avoidable and unavoidable costs as used in his Department's assessment of the economics of nuclear energy.

Mr. Eggar: The avoidable costs associated with Nuclear Electric's Magnox power stations were defined in Ernst and Young's study to be the difference between the entire future cash outflows of total closure and each of the other scenarios. The unavoidable costs were those costs which were not avoidable.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he received from Nuclear Electric to exclude details of financial costing of its magnox programme from the version of the review of magnox avoidable and unavoidable costs by Ernst and Young prepared for his coal review.

Mr. Eggar: I made clear in my answer to my hon. Friend the Member for Broxtowe (Mr. Lester) on 26 October last year that my intention is to publish all evidence and the findings of the coal review to the fullest extent possible except where information had been provided in confidence and was commercially sensitive. On this basis, my Department agreed with Nuclear Electric to remove such commercially confidential material from Ernst and Young's report. The full report was, however, provided on a confidential basis to the Trade and Industry Committee.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many tonnes of spent Magnox nuclear fuel have been contracted to British Nuclear Fuels and its predecessor company by Nuclear Electric and its predecessor since the first Magnox reprocessing contracts were agreed.

Mr. Eggar: This is a commercial matter for the companies concerned.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade whether the studies he commissioned by Ernst and Young and BDO Binder Hamlyn on magnox costs took into account the liabilities that would be incurred in an accident at a magnox nuclear plant involving a breach of containment of the reactor core.

Mr. Eggar: Nuclear Electric's liabilities under the Nuclear Installations Act for public compensation as a result of an incident at a Magnox station are covered by insurance. The related insurance premiums were included in the costs covered by the Ernst and Young and BDO studies and treated as avoidable.

Data Protection Act 1984

Mr. Cohen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many certificates have been signed under the terms of section 27 of the Data Protection Act 1984 for each year since 1987.

Mr. Eggar: Inquiries completed within the time available indicate that no exemptions under the terms of section 27 of the Data Protection Act 1984 have been signed by the President of the Board of Trade or his predecessors in the period since 1987. Three exemptions were approved by the Secretary of State for Energy in 1987, one in 1988 and none after that up to the merger with the Department of Trade and Industry. If my further inquiries identify that any additional exemptions have been authorised I will respond further to the hon. Member.

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many of the appointments made by him as listed in "Public Bodies 1992" came within the categories set out in paragraphs 49 and 50 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers" and required a submission to the Prime Minister.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. Friend is responsible for a total of over 800 public appointments. Of these 17 require a submission to the Prime Minister.

BNFL

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if he will list the offices British Nuclear Fuels plc has, or plans to, set up in eastern European countries;

(2) what contracts BNFL has signed or been offered under the TACIS and PHARE programmes.

Mr. Eggar: This is a matter for British Nuclear Fuels plc.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the purpose of the BNFL-run information centre in Moscow.

Mr. Eggar: British Nuclear Fuels plc does not operate such an information centre.

Environmental Achievements

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what have been the environmental achievements of the designated Green Minister in his Department during the past year.

Mr. Eggar: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade has designated me as the Green Minister for the Department. During the past year, we have as part of the departmental objective adopted a clear commitment to: take proper account of environmental issues in the development of its policies; stimulate an effective business response to environmental developments; and ensure that the Government's overall environmental policy takes proper account of the impact on business.

DTI's recently published annual expenditure plans report for 1993-94 to 1995-96 highlights a number of our specific environmental achievements. These include the technology partnership initiative, launched by the Prime Minister at a major conference in March, which aims to encourage the transfer of environmental technology and expertise to industrialising developing countries. The Department continues to undertake substantial awareness-raising activities; for example, nearly 4,000 small and medium-sized enterprises attended DTI roadshows last year.

Also, DTI operates a number of major grant schemes for supporting innovation in environmental technology, with grants of around £12·5 million committed to date. In relation to its estate, the Department has recently adopted a green housekeeping policy.

In formulating our policy in the environmental area in general, I attach importance to the advice of the Advisory Committee on Business and the Environment. The committee also provides a useful forum for business to influence the environmental debate and promote better environmental performance.

Civil Servants (Secondment)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the number, grade and destination of civil servants in the Department of Trade and Industry who have been seconded to manufacturing industry for each year since 1979.

Mr. Eggar: The number of DTI staff on long-term secondments to business organisations, including manufacturing industry, in each of the calendar years from 1979 to 1992 were as follows:

	Number
1979	30
1980	33
1981	25
1982	35
1983	41
1984	43
1985	44
1986	37
1987	34
1988	31
1989	40
1990	52
1991	55
1992	53

Additional details on each of these secondments can be produced only at disproportionate cost.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Ronnie Campbell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list, for each of the last five years, the duration, value and nature of contracts awarded by his Department to Arthur Andersen, Andersen Consulting, KPMG Peat Marwick McLintock, Touche Ross, Ernst and Young and Price Waterhouse.

Mr. Eggar: The consultancy contracts awarded by the DTI to KPMG Peat Marwick McLintock, Touche Ross, Ernst and Young and Price Waterhouse in the periods 23 March 1988 to 22 March 1989, 23 March 1989 to 22 March 1990, 23 March 1990 to 22 March 1991, 23 March 1991 to 22 March 1992 and 23 March 1992 to 22 March 1993, giving the duration and nature for each, are listed in the table. The values of individual contracts are commercially confidential. No contracts have been awarded to Arthur Andersen, or Andersen Consulting.

Defence Industries (Conversion)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the benefits that will accrue to the United Kingdom from the European Community's Konver programme for the conversion of defence industries to civilian activities.

Mr. Sainsbury: No decision has been taken on the financial allocation to member states under the Konver programme. We are currently considering the Commission's proposals for its implementation.

Coal Industry

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what response he has made in the Energy Council to the Commission requests to the Council for assent on the Commission draft decision establishing community rules for state aid for the coal industry (SEC(92)2553 Final) of 27 January.

Mr. Eggar: The document has not yet been discussed by the Council.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what arrangements he has made to publish on a regular basis the subsidies given to British Coal in terms of the arrangements announced in his White Paper.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 14 April 1993]: Details of financial assistance to British Coal will be published in my Department's annual expenditure plans report which is presented to Parliament.

Energy Production (Efficiency)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will publish a table showing the comparative average efficiency of (a) all United Kingdom power plants, (b) gas-fired power plants and (c) combined heat and power schemes.

Mr. Eggar: In 1991-92, the average gross thermal efficiency of fossil fuel-burning power stations in the United Kingdom was 34·1 per cent.
[Source: Digest of UK Energy Statistics, Table 52]

The efficiency of combined cycle gas turbines is generally expected to be around 45 per cent.

The efficiency of combined heat and power schemes varies considerably depending on their particular circumstances. Most such schemes in the United Kingdom are thought to have efficiencies in the range 70 per cent to 80 per cent.

Coal Review

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what remit was given to Ernst and Young in its preparation of the report on Magnox avoidable and unavoidable costs, undertaken for his coal review, dated 5 February.

Mr. Eggar: I gave a summary of the terms of reference for Ernst and Young's study in an answer to the hon. Member for Southwark and Bermondsey (Mr. Hughes) on 14 December last year, Official Report, column 25. The full terms of reference are included in appendix A of the Ernst and Young report, a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

British Technology Group

Mr. Steen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the sale of the British Technology Group.

Mr. Leigh: It was announced last year, Official Report, 11 March 1992, columns 559-60, that the British Technology Group had been sold to a management-led consortium. I can now inform the House of the final outcome of discussions to settle the initial proceeds of the sale.

In accordance with clause 6 of the share purchase agreement, completion accounts were prepared by the purchasers for the purpose of determining the consideration to be paid for the purchase of the shares in BTG. It has not been possible for the Government and the purchasers to agree the completion accounts, but it has nevertheless been agreed that no payment should be made either way under the provisions of clause 6 of the agreement. The initial proceeds therefore remain at £27·75 million.

A copy of the letter expressing the agreement of the parties, and the completion accounts as originally submitted by the purchasers, has been placed in the Library of the House. Members will wish to note that the completion accounts were prepared for the sole purpose of determining the consideration to be paid for the purchase of the shares in BTG; they should not be interpreted as describing the trading position of BTG during 1991-92. A report and accounts were published by the company in August 1992, a copy of which has also been placed in the Library of the House.

The House may also wish to be reminded that additional proceeds may arise if over the five years to 31 March 1997 the business performs at a level in excess of the net revenues forecast by BTG management in its 1991 business plan. Further proceeds may also arise from clawback on the proceeds of sale of real property.

One-stop Shops

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the development of the one-stop shops for business support.

Mr. Heseltine: The six areas that will have the first pilot one-stop shops are Birmingham, Halton (North Cheshire), Hertfordshire, Manchester, South and East Cheshire and Tyneside.

Together, these areas provide a range of different models of the one-stop shop concept. Some offer single centres to serve a particular business community like Birmingham, and others offer hub and spoke networks to cover a larger geographical area like Hertfordshire. In total there will be 23 one-stop shops in these six areas. My Department has committed £5·57 million to funding these first pilots over three years.

There are several other areas whose plans have nearly reached the required standard but need some further development. My Department is in discussion with those areas and I look forward to receiving revised plans from them. I hope that this will lead to pilot one-stop shops being established in up to another nine areas in the course of this financial year.

My Department will also be providing support for the development of proposals for a London-wide approach to the establishment of one-stop shops in the capital. A partnership of key organisations in the provision of business support services has already come together to produce initial ideas for a London-wide approach and the development funding will enable detailed proposals to be worked up for a comprehensive network of services with local outlets across London.

I am grateful to the one-stop shop national assessment panel for its help in assessing the shortlisted bids. The standard of bids was high. I hope that all areas will continue to build on the partnerships that have been established.

With this announcement of the first pilot one-stop shops, the plan to revolutionise the delivery of support services for business in England has taken an important step forward. I am confident that those areas selected will deliver a quality of service which will match or better that available to our industrial competitors in Europe and beyond. I am keen to see these first pilots operational as soon as possible and my Department will work closely with them to ensure they are a success.

Laboratory Work

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the value of work commissioned by his Department placed with (a) the Warren Springs Laboratory, (b) the Laboratory of the Government Chemist, (c) the National Engineering Laboratory and (d) the National Physical Laboratory in 1992-93; and what is the value of work planned to be placed in 1993-94.

Mr. Eggar: The following table shows the value of work DTI placed with these laboratories in 1992-93 and the value of work they are aiming to win from DTI in 1993-94.

Laboratory	1992-93 (£)	1993-94 (£)
Warren Spring Laboratory	3,190,000	2,750,000
Laboratory of the Government Chemist	7,200,000	5,509,000
National Engineering Laboratory	9,764,000	8,840,000
National Physical Laboratory	43,230,000	41,057,000

Domestic Fuel Supplies

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his Department's estimate of the number of wholly 65-plus-year-old households that have (a) gas and (b) electricity connected to their homes, for the latest available year.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 14 April 1993]: My Department estimates that in 1991 the numbers of wholly 65-plus-year-old households connected to (a) gas and (b) electricity were 3·6 million and 5·1 million respectively.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his Department's estimate of the total income for (a) gas and (b) electricity undertakings from domestic and standing charges.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 14 April 1993]: My Department estimates that the total amounts raised by gas and electricty undertakings in 1992 from standing charges on domestic customers in the United Kingdom were £0·6 billion and £1·1 billion respectively.

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his oral answer to the hon. Member for Linlithgow (Mr. Dalyell) of 17 March, Official Report, column 271, what documents his Department has been asked to provide to Lord Justice Scott; what documents he has supplied; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Heseltine [holding answer 2 April 1993]: Lord Justice Scott has requested a wide range of documents from my Department and no document requested is being withheld. It would not be appropriate to list them in detail.

Undersea Electricity Link

Mr. Morgan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what consultation he has had with the members of the European Commission responsible for energy policy and regional development, and with his opposite number in the Irish Republic in relation to the funding of the undersea electricity transmission link between the national grid and the Irish electricity system; and what is his current estimate of a start date.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 2 April 1993]: There have been no discussions with the European Commission or with my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade's opposite number in the Irish Republic on the question of funding of the United Kingdom-Ireland electricity link. Further studies need to be undertaken before a reliable estimate of a start date can be given.

Plutonium (Air Transport)

Mr. Salmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the date and route of the next plutonium flight from Carlisle.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 2 April 1993]: This is a matter for the operators concerned.

Recycling

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a study of the German waste disposal system whereby there is an advantageous financial incentive to return used bottles to manufacturers.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 14 April 1993]: Deposit systems were among the mechanisms examined by Environmental Resources Ltd. as part of its study of "Economic Instruments and Recovery of Resources from Waste", commissioned by my Department and the Department of the Environment. This study was published by HMSO in December last year, and copies were placed in the Library of the House. It built on earlier work carried out by ERL on deposit/refund systems for beverage containers, which included an examination of deposit schemes being operated in Germany. Consultation on both these studies has taken place and the comments received will be taken into account by the Government in the development of recycling policy.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proposals he has to promote a returnable outer crate system, and the re-usable MTS Tengelmann container system.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 14 April 1993]: It is for the judgment of those directly involved in distribution and retailing to decide whether to use returnable outer crates, such as the MTS Tengelmann container system. I expect environmental impact and commercial advantage to be among the considerations that they take into account when reaching a decision.

Plastic

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proposals he has to promote the depolymerising of plastic.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 14 April 1993]: My Department is currently supporting a number of projects in the plastics recycling area, although none relating specifically to the polymerising of plastics. I am aware, though, of work in this area being undertaken within industry, both in the United Kingdom and elsewhere, which my Department is following closely.

Electricity

Mr. Spearing: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has received concerning amendments to the Electricity Act 1989.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 14 April 1993]: The Trade and Industry Select Committee made a number of recommendations in its 1992-93 report "British Energy Policy and the Market for Coal" which could, if accepted, have required amendments to the Electricity Act 1989. The Select Committee's recommendations, and the Government's responses, are set out in chapter 16 of the recent White Paper, "The Prospects for Coal".

Mr. Spearing: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has received concerning amendment of the Electricity Act 1989 to make the duty to protect the interests of the consumer one of the Secretary of State's primary statutory responsibilities; and what response he has given.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 14 April 1993]: The Trade and Industry Select Committee recommended that the duties of the Director General of Electricity Supply should be amended to make the protection of consumers one of his primary duties. The Director General has said that he does not believe such an amendment would be necessary to enable him to protect the interests of customers. Chapter 16 of the Government's recent White Paper, "The Prospects for Coal", makes it clear that the Director General already has a duty to protect consumers in terms of prices and other terms of supply and that the main protection for consumers is the development of effective competition. The promotion of competition is one of the Director General's primary duties.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what consideration he has given to amending the Electricity Act 1989 to ensure the full costs of radioactive waste management and nuclear decommissioning associated with nuclear generated electricity are charged to electricity consumers on their electricity bills.

Mr. Eggar The Electricity Act 1989 already allows the Secretary of State to make regulations to impose a levy on all licensed suppliers of electricity in order to compensate the regional electricity companies for the additional costs incurred in contracting with Nuclear Electric, and the non-fossil generators, rather than fossil-fuelled sources. The premium paid to Nuclear Electric, together with income from electricity sales at the market price, enable the company to meet the full costs of generating electricity from its stations, including the full costs of radioactive waste management and decommissioning.

Mixed Oxide Fuel

Mr. Hood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the mixed oxide fuel demonstration facility (MDF) is expected to be operational.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 14 April 1993]: This is a matter for the Atomic Energy Authority and British Nuclear Fuels plc.

DEFENCE

Upholder Class Submarines

Mr. Churchill: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Carrick, Cumnock and Doon Valley (Mr. Foulkes) of 15 February, Official Report, column 71, when he expects to reach a decision about the future of Upholder class submarines.

Mr. Aitken: We are still considering some aspects of our future force structure to ensure that it aligns with our commitments and available resources. Decisions will be taken when our deliberations are complete.

Helicopters Adriatic

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when four of the 846 Naval Air Squadron Sea Kings were withdrawn from HMS Ark Royal; by what means they were returned to the United Kingdom; for what reasons they have been withdrawn; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Archie Hamilton: Four Sea King helicopters from 846 Naval Air Squadron deployed to the Adriatic as part of the HMS Ark Royal group in January returned to the United Kingdom on board RFA Fort Austin in mid-March. The return to the United Kingdom of the light gun battery personnel enabled the helicopters to be released for other duties.

RFA Fort Victoria

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when RFA Fort Victoria was taken to FMRO Portsmouth; what unprogrammed work is required, and at what cost; what penalties will be applied to the contractor; when the ship is currently programmed to be accepted by the Royal Fleet Auxiliary; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Aitken: RFA Fort Victoria was accepted from her builders, Harland and Wolff, on 24 March, and arrived at Portsmouth on 7 April where she will be based for a six-month programme of trials before entering service with the Royal Fleet Auxiliary. A number of defects remain and others may emerge during the trials. These will be rectified using the resources of FMRO Portsmouth as part of a co-ordinated programme. The cost of this work will be met by Harland and Wolff.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Crime Prevention

13. Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what new crime prevention initiatives his Department will be taking in 1993.

Mr. Jack: New major developments are the setting up of a National Board for Crime Prevention and the reconvening of the ministerial group on crime prevention. We shall also be working on the expansion of our successful safer cities programme and we have commissioned a new good practice guide to help communities tackle their local crime problems in the most effective way.

Metropolitan Police

14. Mr. Cyril D. Townsend: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the future political control of the Metropolitan police.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I have already received representations about this subject from a large number of hon. Members. As I announced on 23 March, I propose to establish new police authority arrangements for the Metropolitan police. I will be developing my proposals in more detail over the next few months and set out more details when I publish my White Paper.

Police Funding

15. Mrs. Angela Knight: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how he intends to improve the system of police funding.

Mr. Charles Wardle: My right hon. and learned Friend's proposals include giving police authorities and police forces greater freedom to manage their own resources within a cash limit.

Operation Jackpot

16. Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he next plans to visit Stoke Newington police station to discuss Operation Jackpot.

Mr. Charles Wardle: My right hon. and learned Friend has no plans to visit Stoke Newington police station.

Illegal Weapons (Advertisements)

17. Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received concerning problems arising from the distribution of magazines containing advertisements for illegal and offensive weapons.

Mr. Charles Wardle: My right hon. and learned Friend has received a number of letters from hon. and right hon. Members, and from members of the public, about a mail order catalogue distributed here from the United States. He has also answered four parliamentary questions on this subject, and he has noted the concern expressed in an early-day motion.

Young Offenders

18. Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received about measures to reduce juvenile crime.

Mr. Jack: I have received a number of representations from hon. Members and others concerned about offences committed by juveniles. The statement made by my right hon. and learned Friend on 2 March gave a clear indication of the nature of the Government's response by committing it to the development of a new policy particularly aimed at dealing with the persistent juvenile offender.

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many young offenders have been held in cells without window glass at Glen Parva young offenders centre in the last six months; and for what periods of time they were being held in those cells.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mr. D. Lewis to Mr. Mike O'Brien, dated 14 April 1993:

I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the numbers of young offenders held in cells without window glass at Glen Parva Young Offenders Institution.

There are no statistics available to show how many young offenders are located in cells without window glass or for how long they are held in those cells. Most cell windows are broken by prisoners and on many occasions by those due to attend court and who hope they will not be returning. If the prisoner responsible for the damage to the cell is returned to Glen Parva he will be normally located in the same cell until repairs can be done. However, it is local policy to avoid placing young offenders newly allocated to Glen Parva in cells with broken window panes. There is a continuous replacement programme for broken windows and the cost in the last financial year was over £14,000.

Mr. Jim Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received concerning his proposals to provide secure accommodation for young offenders.

Mr. Jack: As I stated in my reply to a question from the hon. Member for Cardiff, South and Penarth (Mr. Michael) on 17 March 1993, Official Report, column 248, before my right hon. and learned Friend made his statement on 2 March Ministers and officials considered representations and views about the problem of persistent juvenile offenders from a wide range of individuals and organisations. Since 2 March, meetings have been held at official and ministerial levels with representatives from the public, private and voluntary sectors. A series of further meetings is planned. In addition, my right hon. and learned Friend has specifically invited the comments of more than 40 organisations in the field of working with juvenile offenders including the views of both sentences and also potential providers of secure accommodation.

28. Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has to deal with young offenders.

Mr. Jack: I refer my hon. Friend to the oral answer given earlier today to the hon. and learned Member for Leicester, West (Mr. Janner).

29. Mr. Gill: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for increasing the provision of secure accommodation.

Mr. Jack: The provision of secure accommodation for juveniles is the responsibility of local authorities who are overseen in this regard by the Department of Health. We are currently working on plans for the provision of the secure accommodation that will be necessary for persistent juvenile offenders subject to the secure training orders referred to by my right hon. and learned Friend in his statement on 2 March.

25. Mr. Thomason: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has to make parents more accountable for the behaviour of their children.

Mr. Jack: The Criminal Justice Act 1991, which came into force on 1 October last year, strengthened the powers of the courts to make parents more accountable. Courts can now bind over the parents of juvenile offenders to look after their children properly where they are satisfied that this would help prevent further offending; and, order parents to attend court with their children and to pay their children's fines. We are monitoring the effects of these provisions.

Prison Staff (Portland)

19. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people are employed directly and indirectly by the Prison Department on Portland; and how many inmates and staff are planned for the future.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I understand from the director general that there are two establishments on Portland, the Young Offender Institution and the Verne prison.

The combined total employed at both establishments is 567½, of which 27½ are indirectly employed by the Prison Department, the balance of 540 being directly employed. A further 61½ people are engaged on a sessional basis providing essential educational, religious, medical, dental and ophthalmic services.

The combined inmate population is approximately 1,000.

There are no current plans to change established staffing levels or inmate numbers.

Police Committees

20. Mr. Enright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what canons of selection he will establish for appointments to police committees; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: My right hon. and learned Friend has not yet decided how the members of the new police authorities will be chosen. He will want to make sure that the membership of the police authority as a whole broadly reflects the experience and expertise which it needs.

Terrorism

21. Sir Fergus Montgomery: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he has in hand to review the operation of the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1989; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1989 forms an essential part of the Government's response to terrorist crime. The powers which it provides are kept under regular review and the operation of the Act is reviewed each year by a person appointed for that purpose.

24. Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1989; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: It is difficult to measure the effectiveness of what is essentially a preventative measure but the Prevention of Terrorism Act plays an important part in the prevention and investigation of terrorist crime and in restricting the movement of terrorists and their equipment. In 1992, 497 persons were charged in the United Kingdom following detention under the Act.

Sunday Trading

22. Sir George Gardiner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give further details of his plans for the reform of the law on Sunday trading; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I have nothing to add to the reply my right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary gave on 22 March to my right hon. Friend the Member for Westminster, North (Sir J. Wheeler); we shall publish a draft Bill before the summer recess.

Police Reform

23. Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has held since his oral statement of 23 March, Official Report, column 765, on reorganising police forces in Wales using conterminous boundaries with the other emergency services.

Mr. Charles Wardle: None.

Wiltshire Police Force (Merger)

26. Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received concerning a possible merger of the Wiltshire police force.

Mr. Charles Wardle: None. I have no view at present on whether or not Wiltshire should amalgamate.

Immigration (USA)

27. Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will visit the United States of America to discuss immigration policy.

Mr. Charles Wardle: My right hon. and learned Friend has no present plans to do so.

Prison Service Dog Section

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff and dogs are currently employed and used in the prison service dog section; and what plans the Home Office has for the dogs in the event of a decision to contract out the section.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mr. D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 15 April 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to write to you in reply to your Parliamentary Question about the staff and dogs used in the Prison Dog Service and our plans for the dogs in the event of a decision to contract out the dog service.

A total of 434 staff are employed as dog handlers and 441 dogs are used for this work.

If the work of the dog service were to be contracted out all dog handlers would be asked whether they wished to keep their dogs. Any dog not taken on by their handlers would be offered to the Armed Forces, Customs and Excise or the Police in an effort to find them suitable work placements. If sufficient work placements could not be found then consideration would have to be given to having the dogs destroyed. While every effort would be made to avoid this position these are working dogs trained to bite and the options for suitable placements are limited.

Medomsley Prison

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the prison department made available for sale the former HM prison Medomsley; how the sale particulars are described; what is the asking price; how much money has been spent on this establishment in each of the past five years; what have been its previous usages; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mr. D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 15 April 1993:

Former HM Prison Medomsley

I have been asked by the Home Secretary to write to you in response to your Parliamentary Question about the former HM Prison Medomsley.

The property was placed on the market for sale as being surplus to requirements in December 1990 with Agents, Messrs Chesterton of Newcastle, and is described in the sale particulars as a 35 acre site with the opportunity for refurbishment or development. The property is offered for sale by private treaty and offers are invited. No purchase price has been quoted but the Agents are advising that offers should be in excess of £500,000.

The establishment formerly operated as a Detention Centre for Young Offenders until early 1987. It was then used temporarily as a Category C Prison for male adults until closing in November 1987. There has since been some occasional use for Control and Restraint training.

The expenditure in each of the past five years, mainly on skeleton staff and essential maintenance, was as follows:

	£K
1988-89	53
1989-90	47
1990-91	22
1991-92	20
1992-93	nil

I hope this is helpful.

London Fire and Civil Defence Authority

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is to be the precise nature of the market testing exercise he proposed should be undertaken in repect of the work of the fire brigades' workshops currently run by the London fire and civil defence authority; and when he expects it to begin.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Officials of my Department are currently discussing with representatives of local authorities and chief fire officers the precise nature of the market testing exercise and how it will be carried forward.

Prison Education Service

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to make education in prison compulsory for all offenders under the age of 25 years.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Young Offender Institution Rules 1988 currently provide that arrangements shall be made for inmates under the age of 17 to participate in education and training courses for at least 15 hours a week. The Prison Service will be considering, as part of its work on the development of a code of standards, what education facilities and entitlements should generally be available to prisoners.

Not all prisoners under the age of 25 years require education programmes, but they may benefit from opportunities to address their offending behaviour and other needs. The extension of sentence planning is directed to ensuring that prisoners' individual needs are increasingly identified and, where possible, met.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners in (a) 1990, (b) 1991 and (c) 1992 took public examinations; and what was the pass rate.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mr. D. Lewis to Mr. Harry Greenway, dated 15 April 1993:

I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about prisoners taking public examinations.

The available information held centrally is as follows:

Academic Year	Inmates Entered	Pass Rate Per cent.
Education and vocational training[1]
1990-91	9,826	87
1991-92	8,977	82
Other Examinations[2]
1990	3,436	66
1991	4,251	90
1992	4,159	93

[1] Organised and supervised by education departments.
[2] Construction industry training, Catering, other industrial and farms and gardens qualifications.

Wandsworth Prison

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans his Department has to improve the waiting facilities for visitors to inmates being held in Wandsworth prison; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mr. D. Lewis to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 15 April 1993:

I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about visitors' waiting facilities at Wandsworth Prison.

Work is soon to begin converting a property which is close to the prison. We expect this work to be completed within two months.

Police Horses

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police horses are currently in service in the metropolitan area; how many were in service (a) in 1983 and (b) in 1973; what is the future of Imber Court training centre under his projected proposals for police reorganisation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: There are currently 190 horses in service with the Metropolitan police. At 31 December 1983 there were 176, at 31 December 1973 195.

It is not possible to say at this stage what impact the proposed reorganisation will have on Imber Court.

Veterinary Surgeons

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will ensure that anyone with a commercial interest in a designated establishment is not appointed as named veterinary surgeon for the establishment under the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986, to avoid conflicts of interest.

Mr. Charles Wardle: My right hon. and learned Friend cannot lawfully exclude all veterinary surgeons with a commercial interest in a designated establishment from being considered for appointment as named veterinary surgeon. The suitability of every proposed named veterinary surgeon is considered before inclusion in a certificate of designation; where my right hon. and learned Friend has any reason to doubt the suitability of the proposed appointment, he will require a new name to be suggested.

Employment Protection

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will make it his policy to seek external legal advice on the application of the transfer of undertakings regulations in every case where contracting out is contemplated or may be contemplated for future action.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: No. Home Office legal advisers will be consulted about the application of the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981.

Market Testing

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make available existing scoping reports on potential market testing exercises to the relevant staff associations and unions; and if he will place copies of the reports in the Library.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Scoping Study reports will be made available to Home Office trade unions, except where they contain classified material. As the reports are internal management documents I do not consider it appropriate to place them in the Library.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what will be the financial implications of the application of the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981 to Home Office functions which have been identified for market testing during 1993-94.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Potential contractors will be required to take account of the implications of the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981 and the EC Acquired Rights Directive in their bids. Only at that stage will it be possible to make any assessment of the financial implications.

Port Controls

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what will be the security implications of contracting out of any port control functions of the immigration and nationality department; and what safeguards would be introduced.

Mr. Charles Wardle: There are no plans to market test the work of immigration officers at ports of entry.

Remands Contract Unit

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff are employed in the remands contract unit at the Home Office for the latest date available; and how many of them are legally trained.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mr. D. Lewis to Mr. Alun Michael, dated 15 April 1993:

REMANDS CONTRACTS UNIT STAFF

The Home Secretary has asked me to write to you in response to your Parliamentary Question about the staffing of the Remands Contracts Unit.

The Unit currently has 29 members of staff of whom 7 are engaged in on the spot monitoring of contract performance and associated work. None of its staff are legally trained; like other Home Office divisions, the Unit looks to the Department's Legal Adviser's Branch to meet its need for assistance or advice on any legal matter.

Prisoners (Childhood Background)

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has about the proportion of sentenced male and female prisoners respectively who spent some or all of their childhood in care.

Mr. Peter Lloyd [holding answer 14 April 1993]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mr. D. Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 15 April 1993:

I have been asked to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the proportion of the prison population who have been in care.

In answer to the question "were you ever taken into Local Authority care as a child up to the age of 16?" in the National Prison Survey, which was carried out in January and February 1991, 25 per cent. of sentenced male and 21 per cent. of sentenced female prisoners said they had been taken into care.

Written Answers to Questions

Friday 16 April 1993

ENVIRONMENT

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many of the appointments made by him as listed in "Public Bodies 1992" came within the categories set out in paragraphs 49 and 50 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers" and required a submission to the Prime Minister.

Mr. Howard: There were 27 appointments to the bodies listed in "Public Bodies 1992", sponsored by my Department, which required prior consultation with the Prime Minister under paragraph 50 of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers".

Data Protection Act 1984

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many certificates have been signed under the terms of section 27 of the Data Protection Act 1984 for each year since 1987.

Mr. Howard: None.

Investment (Hackney)

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what investment packages are available to private sector investors in Hackney to create jobs and housing.

Mr. Baldry: The following DOE programmes are available in Hackney:

City Challenge: £37·5 million over five years, to develop and improve the local business economy, develop the skills of local people and raise the quality and management of homes.

Housing: Following the Chancellor's autumn statement, an additional £10·8 million for housing associations to purchase homes and provide cash grants to enable housing association and council tenants to move into owner occupation. The estate action programme has also been successful in drawing private sector investment into the refurbishment of council estates.

City grant: The private sector in Hackney is able to bid for funding of individual projects.

Hackney task force: Provides loans/grants of up to £5,000 to small and and start up businesses.

Urban partnership funding: £125,000 for enterprise projects will lever in over £500,000 from the private sector as a result of this initiative.

London Residuary Body

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to reassign the functions and responsibilities of the London residuary body (a) prior to abolition and (b) following abolition.

Mr. Squire: My right hon. and learned Friend has no such plans. It is envisaged that the London residuary body will discharge its present functions and responsibilities until it is wound up.

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects the London residuary body to be wound up; and when its final accounts will be published.

Mr. Squire: The date of the winding up of the London residuary body (and hence the date of the publication of its final accounts) will depend upon the timing of the disposal of the County hall site and buildings.

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what were the running costs of the London residuary body for each year to date.

Mr. Squire: Expressed in current prices, net expenditure by the London residuary body on general management or administrative services, including preparation and transfer of records to successor bodies by the London residuary body's administration department, was as follows in the years 1986-87 to 1992-93:

1986-87	7,077
1987-88	4,285
1988-89	3,698
1989-90	3,043
[1]1990-91	7,599
1991-92	3,048
[2]1992-93	1,859

[1] On 1 April 1990 the London residuary body took on responsibility for winding up the affairs of the Inner London education authority.

[2] The figures for 1992-93 are from the London residuary body's 1992-93 original budget while for other years they come from the London residuary body's annual report and accounts.

County Hall

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the future of the north, south and island blocks of County hall; how much they are valued at; and if he will make a statement on potential buyers.

Mr. Squire: The disposal of these properties is a matter for the London residuary body, which is at present actively marketing the land and buildings concerned.

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the London residuary body will receive the proceeds of the sale of the main building of London's County hall; how much they are expected to be; and how they will be distributed.

Mr. Redwood: The timing and the amount of the receipt of the proceeds of the sale of the riverside building of County hall are matters of commercial confidentiality between the London residuary body and the purchasers. It is, however, expected that the ensuing capital receipt will be distributed to the London boroughs by 31 December this year. The method of distribution will be the subject of consultation between the Department and the London boroughs.

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects the disposal of all the buildings in the County hall complex to be completed.

Mr. Baldry: The disposal of the County hall site and buildings is a matter for the London residuary body, which is under a duty to sell the land and buildings concerned for the best obtainable price.

Gas Appliances

Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 30 March, Official Report, columns 133-34, how many prosecutions have been brought under (a) the Housing (Management of Houses in Multiple Occupation) Regulations 1990 and (b) the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985 for failure to maintain and repair gas appliances; and how many of these prosecutions have resulted in convictions.

Mr. Baldry: The survey of local authorities in England and Wales contained in the Institution of Environmental Health Officers annual report 1990-91 reports that 90 convictions were obtained for failure to comply with section 369 of the Housing Act 1985, under which the Housing (Management of Houses in Multiple Occupation) Regulations 1990 are made.

The survey also reports that 719 notices were served under section 372 (power to require execution of works to remedy neglect of management). 403 of these were complied with (including those complied with by means of the local authority carrying out the works), and 12 convictions were obtained for failure to comply with a notice.

Information on the number of prosecutions specifically for failure to maintain and repair gas appliances, and on the number of prosecutions under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1985, is not held centrally.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to invite contributions from local authorities and other interested parties to his review of standard spending assessments.

Mr. Howard [holding answer 14 April 1993]: Officials in my Department have written to all local authorities in England inviting them to make representations on the review of standard spending assessments and to provide evidence to support any proposed changes.

There will also be regular meetings between my officials and representatives of the local authority associations until September to discuss the technical aspects of the review.

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will set out the staffing resources and the financial provision for external research that he proposes to devote to his review of standard spending assessments.

Mr. Howard [holding answer 14 April 1993]: The review of standard spending assessments will involve work by my own Department in consultation with other Government Departments and the local authority associations. Work is already in progress using existing resources. Some external research is under way and more will be carried out where this is felt necessary.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

The Crescent, Buxton

Mr. Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what action he will take to prevent further deterioration in the condition of the grade I listed former St. Ann's hotel in The Crescent, Buxton.

Mr. Key: In view of the lack of progress with the repairs specified in last December's repairs notice, my right hon. Friend has today authorised the service on the owners, Capitalrise Ltd, of a compulsory purchase order under section 47 of the Planning (Listed Buildings and Conservation Areas) Act 1990.

This is the first time that my right hon. Friend's powers under section 47 have been used. This reflects the outstanding importance of the building. My right hon. Friend and I are not prepared to see it deteriorate further through neglect and indecision.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Terrorism

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the total number of persons arrested under the Northern Ireland Emergency Provisions Act 1991 and the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1989 for the period (a) September 1991 to December 1992 and (b) January 1993 to the present date.

Mr. Mates: The available information is as follows:

Period	Number of persons arrested in Northern Ireland under the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1991	Number of persons arrested in Northern Ireland under the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1989
1 September 1991—31 December 1992	92	2,382
1 January 1993—31 March 1993	Not yet available	438
Total	92	2,820

Note:
If an individual is arrested on more than one occasion he/she will be added to the statistics on each occasion.

Housing

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps it is intended to take to resolve housing needs in east and south Belfast, including the Castlereagh and Lisburn boroughs.

Mr. Atkins: The Housing Executive and housing associations have new building plans, which together with relets, are aimed at meeting housing needs. A total of 854 dwellings are presently under construction or planned by the Housing Executive over the next three years in east and south Belfast including the Castlereagh and Lisburn boroughs in addition to an estimated annual figure of some 1,970 relets. This will be complemented by housing association schemes currently under construction or planned to commence over the same period to provide 654 dwellings together with 109 bed spaces in shared accommodation.

Under the Government's house purchase scheme announced by the Chancellor in the autumn statement the Housing Executive and housing associations (including the Co-ownership Association) purchased a total of 126 dwellings in the area and these will further assist in meeting housing needs.

The Belfast urban area plan (BUAP) 2001 zoned land for housing development in the greater Belfast area to cover the period up to 1993. The Department of the Environment recently announced that it had commenced a mid-term reassessment of housing land needs in that area. This reassessment will be made with the assistance of the 1991 census figures for population and housing to establish the extent of housing land needs and to meet housing needs up to the year 2001.

IRA Prisoners

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what arrangements are currently in force for the police to be permitted to interview convicted Irish Republican Army prisoners in connection with incidents which have taken place (a) while they are in HM prison and (b) before they become inmates; and what assessment he has made of the adequacy of these.

Sir Patrick Mayhew: Where any convicted prisoner is suspected of involvement in any criminal offence either in or outside prison, rule 60 of the Prison Rules (NI) 1982 provides that "a police officer may, on production of an order issued by or on behalf of the Chief Constable of the Royal Ulster Constabulary, interview any prisoner willing to see him."

The police and the prison authorities in Northern Ireland are satisfied that these arrangements are adequate.

Data Protection Act 1984

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many certificates have been signed under the terms of section 27 of the Data Protection Act 1984 for each year since 1987.

Mr. Mates: None.

Students

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many students from Northern Ireland applied for places at university in Great Britain, and how many were accepted, in the last year for which figures are available.

Mr. Hanley: Information provided by the Universities Central Council on Admissions is that in 1992, 8,121 students from Northern Ireland applied for places at university in Great Britain of whom 1,794 accepted the offer of a place.

Life Sentences

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will publish a table to show for as many years for which the information is conveniently available the number of persons sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder of (a) police officers, (b) prison officers, (c) regular Army, (d) Ulster Defence Regiment members and (e) civilians who have been in each year released from prison; what was the average number of years and months served in each case; whether the life sentence had a minimum recommendation imposed by the court which was not served; and in which cases there was a terrorist involvement.

Sir Patrick Mayhew: The information is as follows:

Equal Opportunities

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the annual cost of monitoring the religious affiliation of the employees of BBC Northern Ireland.

Mr. Brooke: I have been asked to reply.

I understand from the BBC that the estimated annual cost is £30,000.

EMPLOYMENT

Social Fund

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if she will make a statement on the implementation of objective 4 of the European Community social fund.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Assistance from the European social fund under objective 4 is aimed at improving the employment prospects of young people by supporting their vocational training. In 1992, £132 million was approved under objective 4 to support training for some 155,000 young people in the United Kingdom.

The regulations governing the EC structural funds are currently being reviewed.

Industrial Tribunals

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many applications were made to industrial tribunals since the beginning of 1989 in which the grounds of the application was wholly or partly based on a claim that the applicant had been disadvantaged in, or dismissed from, his employment because of his trade union membership; and how many of these cases resulted in a decision in favour of the applicant.

Mr. McLoughlin: The figures are as follows:

	1989-90	1990-91	1991-92	1992-93
Registered applications	513	709	475	411
Decision in favour of applicant	95	30	25	—

I regret that figures for the outcome of hearings are not yet available for 1992-93.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many applications have been made to industrial tribunals since the beginning of 1989; how many resulted in a hearing; and how many resulted in decisions in favour of the applicant.

Mr. McLoughlin: The figures are as follows:

	1989-90	1990-91	1991-92	1992-93
Registered applications	34,697	43,243	67,448	71,821
Hearings	10,229	11,430	13,773	—
Decision in favour of applicant	4,598	5,503	7,017	—

I regret that the figures for hearings and their outcome are not yet available for 1992-93.

The majority of applications to tribunals do not come to hearing, being settled or withdrawn, often after conciliation by the Advisory, Conciliation and Arbitration Service.

Giro Cheques

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps she has taken to ensure that Giro cheques reported lost are replaced with the minimum of delay.

Mr. McLoughlin: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mr. M. Fogden to Mrs. Helen Jackson, dated 16 April 1993:

As the Employment Service is an Executive Agency, the Secretary of State has asked me to write direct to respond to your Parliamentary Question to her about replacing girocheques that are reported as lost. This is something which falls within the responsibilities she has delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

I should explain that the policy of the Employment Service is to issue a prompt replacement whenever a girocheque is reported as not received, lost or destroyed unless there is reason to doubt the report is genuine.

As decided by the Administration Committee of the House of Commons, Chief Executive replies to written Parliamentary Questions will now be published in the Official Report. I will also place a copy of this letter in the Library of the House.

Social Affairs Council

Mr. Foreman: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what was the outcome of the meeting on 6 April of the Social Affairs Council in Luxembourg; and if she will make a statement.

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: I attended the meeting of the Labour and Social Affairs Council in Luxembourg on 6 April.

One proposal was agreed—a directive relating to the health and safety of workers exposed to biological agents at work. This directive, on the classification of biological agents, will amend the existing directive on the protection of workers from these risks.

A general debate was held on the employment situation in the Community in open session. This stemmed from the Social Affairs Council resolution on unemployment agreed during the United Kingdom presidency. In my remarks, I stressed the need for the Community to have full regard to its wider international competitiveness, and the importance of not damaging the prospects for jobs growth by increased regulation and higher costs.

Most of the rest of the agenda consisted of policy debates on outstanding proposals for directives, including those on European Works Councils and Protection of Young People at Work, on both of which the presidency had raised specific issues for discussion. There was also a brief discussion of outstanding issues on the Working Time Directive. No decisions were taken, but the presidency indicated that it hoped to bring these proposals back to the Council on 1 June.

Finally, there was a brief report from the presidency on the conference on the social dialogue, held in Copenhagen last month, and a progress report on negotiations on a directive on health and safety on fishing vessels.

TRANSPORT

Cyclists

Mr. Booth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research has been conducted into the safety and protection from injury as provided by headgear for the users of bicycles.

Mr. Kenneth Carlisle: The Transport Research Laboratory report "Pedal Cycle Accidents—A Hospital Based Study" estimated that if helmets were universally worn more than 4,000 casualties would be prevented and the severity of 3,000 serious casualties would be reduced each year.

Data Protection Act 1984

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many certificates have been signed under the terms of section 27 of the Data Protection Act 1984 for each year since 1987.

Mr. Norris: I am aware of none so far as the Department of Transport is concerned.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his estimate of the reduction in number of passengers travelling by air from London regional airports as a result of the channel tunnel rail link (a) when the tunnel opens and (b) when a high-speed rail link is completed.

Mr. Norris: The Department's 1991 air traffic forecasts project a reduction of 5·3 to 6·6 million passengers per annum travelling through London airports in 2000 as a result of the channel tunnel. These forecasts assume a high speed rail link. Estimates of the reduction in air passengers when the tunnel opens are not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

MV Braer

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to receive the report from the Marine Accident Investigation Branch into the grounding of the MV Braer on Shetland in January.

Mr. Norris: The Marine Accident Investigation Branch investigation is progressing well, but it is too early to give an indication of when the report of the chief inspector of marine accidents will be available.

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many formal or informal representations have been received by him or his departmental Ministers and officials to the effect that a formal investigation under merchant shipping legislation should not be instituted in respect of the grounding of the MV Braer on Shetland in January.

Mr. Norris: None.

Transport Delays

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate has been made of the costs to businesses caused by transportation delays, on a yearly basis since 1969.

Mr. Norris: These costs are undoubtedly considerable, but no reliable estimate of them, by roads or by other modes, is available. It is an aim of the Department's expenditure and policies to reduce congestion and delay where it is economic to do so, and to make the best possible use of all modes of transport. By ensuring the maintenance of standards in British Rail's passengers charter and the London Underground charter we aim to ensure that public transport delays are kept to a minimum.

Security Alerts

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information is held on the number of delays on British Rail and London Underground caused by security alerts, on a yearly basis since 1969.

Mr. Norris: British Rail and London Underground maintain records of such delays, though not back to 1969. It is not their policy to publish such information and thereby to give publicity to the activities of terrorists.

PRIME MINISTER

Scott Inquiry

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister (1) if the costs of legal and other advisers attending the Scott inquiry will be covered by the resources made available by Her Majesty's Government to support Lord Justice Scott's investigation;

(2) what criteria will govern the repayment of costs for witnesses at the Scott inquiry; and what expenses will be regarded as reasonable.

The Prime Minister: The inquiry will meet the expenses of a witness or adviser necessarily incurred in attending to give evidence to the inquiry. Legal costs will be met by the inquiry if Lord Justice Scott decides that they were necessary in the interests of justice. They will be assessed by the costs branch of the Treasury Solicitor's Department on the standard basis (as defined in order 62, r.12(1) of the rules of the Supreme Court). The legal costs of Government witnesses or advisers will be met by the Department in which they were serving at the relevant time.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister if he will place in the Library a copy of the minutes of the meeting held between the Cabinet Secretary and Lord Justice Scott on 12 February.

The Prime Minister: No. The Cabinet Secretary and Lord Justice Scott discussed the procedures which Lord Justice Scott will adopt during the course of his inquiry and that discussion was reflected in the notes of procedures published by Lord Justice Scott on 31 March 1993.

British Legion

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Prime Minister what recent representations he has received from the national chairman of the Royal British Legion; what reply he is sending; what action he is taking; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 15 April 1993]: A letter has been received expressing concerns over the recent introduction into war pensions legislation of a 20 per cent. disablement threshold for claims for noise-induced sensorineural hearing loss, and the new community care arrangements.

A reply has been sent which emphasises that the package on war pensions which included the change on hearing loss claims also included, gains of up to £5 a week for almost 200,000 war disablement pensioners. The Government consider that the concentration of limited resources on the most severely disabled war pensioners is the right way forward.

The reply explains that it is now for local authorities to make sure that they discharge their community care responsibilities effectively. Ministers in the Department of Health have encouraged organisations such as the Royal British Legion to seek discussions with the local authority associations.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has on the use of the International Atomic Energy Agency's international centre for theoretical physics in Trieste by potential proliferator nations to obtain information which could contribute to the development of nuclear weapons.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The international centre for theoretical physics (ICTP) at Trieste is supported by the IAEA, UNESCO and the Government of Italy. It seeks to promote international co-operation among scientists from both industrialised and developing countries. A small proportion of its activity concerns the peaceful uses of nuclear energy. We have no information that the centre has been used in the way suggested.

Middle East

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the countries he visited on his recent visit to the middle east; which Ministers or Government officials he met; and what matters in regard to nuclear non-proliferation and arms exports were discussed.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs has not been to the middle east since May last year, when he visited Egypt, Kuwait and Saudi Arabia. In Egypt he met President Mubarak, the Foreign Minister Mr. Amre Moussa, and the Secretary General of the Arab League

Dr. Abdel Meguid. In Kuwait he met the Amir, His Highness Shaikh Jabir al Sabah, the Crown Prince Shaikh Saad al Sabah, and the then Foreign Minister Shaikh Salem. In Saudi Arabia he met His Majesty King Fahd. He discussed a range of security issues, including the question of weapons of mass destruction and the United Kingdom contribution to the maintenance of peace in the Gulf.

Russia

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he had on nuclear proliferation and the forthcoming preparatory committee meeting for the fifth review conference of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty during his recent visit to Russia.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs discussed North Korea's announcement of her intention to withdraw from the non-proliferation treaty and the importance of upholding the treaty. There was no discussion about the first preparatory committee meeting of the 1995 extension review conference.

Sudan

Mr. Gareth Wardell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what evidence he has of the presence of Iranian troops, together with heavy military support equipment in southern Sudan; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The evidence is limited, but we shall continue to monitor the situation.

Forestry

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will make a statement on decisions taken during the 11th meeting of the FAO's Committee on Forestry in Rome during March;

(2) what action will be taken by the United Kingdom in accordance with decisions taken at the 11th meeting of the FAO's Committee on Forestry held in Rome during March.

Sir Hector Monro [holding answer 2 April 1993] I have been asked to reply.

The biennial meetings of FAO's Committee on Forestry provide an opportunity for the exchange of views on important subjects related to forestry and for the provision of advice to FAO on its forestry activities. The Committee acts in an advisory capacity and does not take executive decisions.

At its 1993 meeting, the Committee reviewed and commented on FAO's regular programmes, criticised the reduction in FAO's forestry budget, and discussed the increasing political recognition of the importance of forestry, the implementation of the Forest Principles agreed in Rio de Janeiro, the role of the UN Commission on Sustainable Development and the future of the Tropical Forests Action Programme.

HEALTH

Nutrition (Children)

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many reported cases there have been of malnutrition in children in the last five years;

(2) what steps she is taking to ensure that children are getting their recommended daily calorie intake.

Mr. Sackville: Malnutrition is a term which covers a wide variety of single or combined deficiencies of nutrients and/or energy, none of which are notifiable. Current surveillance does not indicate that, on average, children in the United Kingdom are malnourished in terms of any specific nutrient or energy.

Estimated average requirements for the daily calorie intakes appropriate for those aged 0 to 18 years in the United Kingdom are set out by the Committee on Medical Aspects of Food Policy in its report on Dietary Reference Values published in 1991. A copy is available in the Library.

Improved surveillance, through the Government-funded national study of health and growth and the national diet and nutrition survey programme, will provide more detailed information on children's health status in relation to energy and nutrient intake.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to ensure that all children and their parents are aware of what constitutes a healthy and balanced diet.

Mr. Sackville: Within the national curriculum, the science order for each key stage covers diet and nutrition in the context of personal health. The Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Department of Health are contributing funds to the production of a comprehensive education pack "Food—A Fact Of Life" which the British Nutrition Foundation is producing for use in schools.

The Health Education Authority (HEA) provides information and advice on healthy eating to the public through its publications and local and national campaigns. In addition the Government have produced "Eight Guidelines for a Healthy Diet" as well as a range of booklets in the "Food Sense" series, copies of which are available in the Library.

The nutrition task force set up under "The Health of the Nation" as a partnership between Government and key outside organisations is currently considering action to improve and target advice on healthy eating and weight control for all population groups.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps she is taking to ensure that children who have parents on a low income have access to a healthy and balanced diet; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: A healthy and balanced diet can be achieved in a variety of ways and need not be more expensive than the current average diet. Children whose parents are in receipt of income support are entitled to free school meals and the welfare food scheme continues to provide a nutritional safeguard for children in low-income families.

Elderly People

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evaluation she has made of the effect of the European Year of the Elderly in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Yeo: It is too early to evaluate the effect of the year, which commenced in January, but I am confident that it will bring real and lasting benefits to older people.

Orthopaedic Operations

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what percentage of orthopaedic hand operations carried out in the last 14 years have required revision;

(2) what percentage of knee replacement operations carried out in the last 14 years have required revision.

Mr. Sackville: It is not possible to identify precisely what proportion of operations required revision, but in 1989-90 and 1990-91 respectively, an estimated 6·3 per cent. and 5·3 per cent. of knee joint replacements were revisions. Equivalent information for hand operations is not available.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans she has to introduce a national register of knee replacements and revisions to provide an accurate measure of revision rate.

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 14 April at column 610.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which knee replacement implants which have been used in the NHS in the last 14 years have (a) the highest success rate and (b) the highest failure rate.

Mr. Sackville: Information on the outcome of knee replacement operations is not available centrally. It is the responsibility of clinicians to give advice to patients on the various types of knee implants available, based on the needs of the patient.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what tests are carried out on knee replacement implants before they can be marketed.

Mr. Sackville: There are no statutory requirements for the marketing of knee replacement implants.

Since 1986, knee implants have been controlled by the voluntary Department of Health manufacturer registration scheme, which requires that new designs should undergo appropriate testing prior to their release for general sale. There are currently 23 registered manufacturers of knee implants and the vast majority of these products implanted in the United Kingdom are from registered sources.

From 1 January 1995, the European Directive on Medical Devices will place the control of knee implants on a formal statutory basis, and manufacturers will be required to submit details of manufacturing and design to third party assessment.

Consultation Procedures

Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will set out the process of consultation that will apply to the proposed changes to health services by local health authorities.

Mr. Sackville: District health authorities (DHAs) are required by the Community Health Council (CHC) Regulations 1985 (SI No. 304), as amended, to consult the relevant CHC on proposals they are considering which would result in substantial changes to the services in the district.

Information about the proposed changes should be provided to the relevant CHC and other interested parties, and a date prescribed by which comments should be made. The DHA will then reconsider the proposal in the light of the comments and, if there is no objection from the CHC, may proceed with implementation.

Ministers make decisions on contested closure proposals. Where a CHC wishes to object formally to a proposal, involving the closure or change of use of a health building, the DHA refers it to the regional health authority (RHA). If the RHA supports the DHA's proposal, it will refer the proposal to the Secretary of State for final decision.

Health Districts (Budgets)

Mr. Channon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the 10 health districts in England which had the lowest revenue budgets per head of the population in the most recent available five-year period.

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 30 March 1993]: The information requested for a five-year period could be compiled only at disproportionate cost.

The budgets of district health authorities are set by regional health authorities and detailed information is not collected centrally. However, lists derived from information which relates the expenditure of district health authorities to their resident populations for the years 1989-90 to 1991-92 are shown in the table.

The district health authority figures for 1991-92 are not comparable with those for earlier years as they show the authorities primarily as purchasers rather than providers of health care. Figures of expenditure per head of population for district health authorities will inevitably vary. Those for years prior to 1991-92 will reflect patterns of local service provision and the effects of patient flows across health authority boundaries while the figures for 1991-92 should be regarded as transitional as each regional health authority moves towards allocating funds to district health authorities on a weighted capitation basis. Figures for spending per capita include other resources (such as regional budgets and local income) in addition to allocations for resident populations.

Sources:

Annual accounts of district health authorities in England 1989-90 to 1991-92.

Mid-year estimates of resident population—1989 to 1991 (Office of Population, Censuses and Surveys).

Notes to the table:

1. The figures for the DHAs are based upon their total revenue expenditure on the services which they managed or accounted for in the relevant financial years. Those for 1991-92 cover their total revenue expenditure including that on purchases of health care and directly related services, administrative and purchasing functions and other expenditure.

2. Capital expenditure incurred by the DHAs and all expenditure incurred by regional health authorities is excluded. Expenditure on family health services, which is accounted for by family health services authorities and cannot strictly be attributed to particular districts, is similarly excluded.

3. The population figures used make no allowance for residents of particular districts who receive treatment in others. The figures used for mid-1991 are provisional and based on the 1991 census.

WALES

Housing

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many new lettings were made by housing associations in Wales for each year since 1979; and what proportion of new lettings were made to tenants receiving housing benefit.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information is not available centrally.

SCOTLAND

Infertility Treatment

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many women have in vitro fertilisation treatment each year; how many are undertaken by the national health service; and how many in the private sector.

Mr. Stewart: Prior to August 1991 and the advent of the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority (HFEA), data was collected on the number of treatment cycles rather than the number of women treated. If did not differentiate between the NHS and the private sector. Figures are as follows:

Year	Number
1989	456
1990	570
1991	390

The 1991 figures are for January to July only. Data about the number of women given IVF treatment from August to December 1991 will be available in July this year. The HFEA will not be able to give information about the number of women treated by the NHS because of the complexity of funding arrangements.

NATIONAL FINANCE

National Debt

Mr. Jopling: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give in cash terms the level of the national debt at the end of each financial year since 1979, together with his forecasts for its level at the end of each year until 1997-98 using the public sector borrowing requirement forecasts published with his Budget.

Mr. Lamont: The table shows data for net public sector debt at end-March for each year from 1979 to 1992, plus projections for 1993 and 1994 consistent with the Budget forecast.

Net public sector debt (end-March figures)

	£ billion	Percentage GDP
1979	92·0	49·50
1980	100·6	45·50
1981	115·2	47·00
1982	126·1	47·00
1983	134·0	45·75
1984	146·5	46·50
1985	160·3	46·75
1986	166·4	44·75
1987	172·3	42·50
1988	177·1	38·00
1989	157·2	31·50
1990	151·0	28·00
1991	153·9	27·25
1992	167·9	28·25
1993	204·0	33·50
1994	255·0	39·25

Projections for 1994-95 to 1997-98 for net public sector debt as a percent of GDP are shown in chart 2.5 of the 1993-94 Financial Statement and Budget Report. The projections are illustrative and depend on the assumptions made about the growth of the economy.

Oil Taxation

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment the Treasury made of the possible jobs impact of the Budget oil taxation changes; if he will publish details of the impact assessment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: The Budget tax proposals increase the post-tax costs and increase the post-tax profits that would have been subject to PRT. The effect on jobs depends on the extent to which companies would have been deterred from worthwhile investment by the current levels of taxation, or have planned more exploration and appraisal activity than is economically justified.

The Government expect little net effect on employment levels as a result of the proposed PRT changes.

Arrears Payments

Mr. Robin Cook: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what guidance he, or the Commissioners of the Inland Revenue, have issued in the past 12 months changing the instructions on restricting the acceptance of payment of arrears by instalments.

Mr. Dorrell: There has been no change to the instructions issued regarding the acceptance of payment of arrears of tax by instalments. The Inland Revenue recognises that people may face temporary financial difficulties and in such circumstances the collector should be contacted at the earliest opportunity to discuss how the difficulty may be resolved. All reasonable offers of payment, including payment by instalments, are considered. There are no plans to change this practice.

Consumer Statistics

Ms Abbott: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information is collated on consumption by (a) low income families, (b) middle income families and (c) high income families over the last 12 months for (i) food, drink and tobacco, (ii) furniture and house maintenance, (iii) fuel, electricity and gas, etc., (iv) clothing and (v) entertainment.

Mr. Nelson: Information on expenditure by households on all items, including categories (i) to (v), was obtained in the last 12 months through the Family Expenditure Survey. Analyses of expenditure by level of household income will be included in the report "Family Spending", to be published in the autumn. A copy of the latest report, for 1991, is available in the Library.

Small Businesses

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how long he gave the Bank of England to prepare the report on bank charges to small businesses which he reported to the House on 20 January, Official Report, columns 623-25.

Mr. Nelson: The bank was asked on 16 November to undertake the study. Its final report, which was based on a number of exchanges with the commercial banks and the information provided by them, was published on 26 January. The period from initial request to final publication was 71 days.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 26 January, Official Report, columns 623-25, how many small business customers were interviewed in the instance on which he has based his statement.

Mr. Nelson: The answer of 26 January concerned a report produced by the Bank of England based on information which it had gathered from the banks. Although my right hon. Friend the Chancellor had commissioned the report because of the number of complaints which the Government had received from small business customers, none was interviewed as part of that study. However, as the answer made clear, the bank's conclusions were supported by another report commissioned from Nottingham university and published, a few weeks earlier, by the Forum of Private Business. The Nottingham university study had been based on information provided by small business customers.

Oil Taxation

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment the Treasury has made of the possible impact on exploration and appraisal activity in the United Kingdom continental shelf of the Budget oil taxation changes; and if he will express the impact in terms of numbers of drilling wells in each of the next five years.

Mr. Dorrell: Exploration and appraisal activity has proved highly volatile and difficult to forecast, irrespective of tax changes. The Government do not publish five-year forecasts of this or other components of North sea activity.

The increasing use of 3D seismic surveys means that the level of drilling activity is becoming a less effective measure of total exploration and appraisal activity. One of the aims of the Budget proposals is to encourage companies to improve their international competitiveness by giving them greater rewards for innovation and for more effective working methods.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish details of the Treasury's impact assessment of the Budget oil taxation changes on the forecast number of exploration and appraisal drilling wells, in the United Kingdom continental shelf, in each of the next five years; and if he will make a comparison with those forecasts made prior to the Budget changes.

Mr. Dorrell: The Budget proposals shift the emphasis away from adding to oil and gas discoveries and towards developing existing finds. That is likely to influence how companies allocate their funds between exploration, appraisal, development and enhanced recovery.

The Budget tax changes are one, and only one, factor affecting future exploration and appraisal levels. A significant number of wells are drilled by companies which do not expect to get early PRT relief for the expenditure. There is no reason to suppose such activity would be affected. To the extent that companies with discoveries made more attractive by PRT abolition wanted to get them into production earlier, there should be some increased appraisal activity. However, to the extent that companies have planned their E and A programmes essentially to obtain PRT tax relief at 75 per cent. rather than on pre-tax economics, some decline in future E and A activity is to be expected.

Immigration and Nationality Department

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer in what circumstances the Inland Revenue passes information on individual cases to the Immigration and Nationality Department of the Home Department without the express consent of the individual.

Mr. Dorrell: The Inland Revenue does not disclose to other Government Departments any information it holds on taxpayers without their consent except as authorised by statute. There is no legislation which requires the Inland Revenue to pass such information to the immigration and nationality department of the Home Office.

Securities and Investments Board

Mr. Burns: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he expects to receive the report by the chairman of the Securities and Investments Board on the board's regulatory responsibilities.

Mr. Nelson: Pursuant to the answer given to the hon. Member for Bradford, North (Mr. Rooney) on 3 November 1992, Official Report, column 121, my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer now expects to receive the report in the next few weeks.

VAT

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the total capital income from value added tax at 8 per cent. and 17½ per cent. from (a) gas and (b) electricity bills in 1994-95 and 1995-96.

Sir John Cope [holding answer 14 April 1993]: Estimates of total revenue from VAT on fuel on power at 8 per cent., and 17½ per cent. were given in the Budget speech. No estimate was made for the separate revenue from gas bills and electricity bills.

Intra-Community Trade

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give the intra-Community trade declared despatch arrival values for January to February 1993 as a percentage of the corresponding values for January to February 1992 period.

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 14 April 1993]: Details of the value of intra-Community arrivals into and despatches from the United Kingdom in January and February 1993 are not yet available. As such, the requested figures cannot be calculated at this time.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Wild Birds (Transport)

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to the answer of 22 May 1992, Official Report, column 271, what further progress has been made in persuading European Community partners to introduce special safeguards on the transport of live wild birds; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: The Commission has established a working group of experts to consider what additional measures should be adopted under the directive on the protection of animals during transport. Amongst the subjects being addressed is the trade in wild-caught birds. We have urged the Commission to bring forward its proposals quickly.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Market Testing

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the criteria used by the Home Office to select outside tenderers for Home Office tasks which are the subject of market testing exercises.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Evaluation criteria will be contained, where appropriate, in the EC Journal notice advertising the relevant market tests, or in the invitation to tender documents.

Prisoner Escort Services

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the estimated current cost of court escorts; and how much might be saved if the function was contracted out in England and Wales.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the director general of the prison service. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mr. D. Lewis to Mr. Alun Michael, dated 1 April 1993:

COURT ESCORT AND CUSTODY WORK

The Home Secretary has asked me to write to you in response to your Parliamentary Question about the costs of court escort and custody work.

Court escort and custody work has been the responsibility of individual prison establishments and police forces: information on costs is not centrally collected but a study in 1991 estimated the costs then at £92m. A number of studies have indicated that the provision of a contracted out, unitary service dedicated to court escort and custody work would reduce costs although the estimates of percentage savings have varied from study to study. Detailed costing work is undertaken as each area of the country is considered for contracting out.

Terrorism

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate has been made of the costs to the Exchequer of bomb damage, terrorist violence or threat of violence in (a) London, (b) the rest of Great Britain and (c) Northern Ireland, in terms of compensation paid to victims for (i) personal injury, (ii) loss of business and (iii) damage to property, on a yearly basis since 1969.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The Criminal Injuries Compensation Board, which is responsible for administering the criminal injuries compensation scheme in Great Britain, does not record centrally information about claims for personal injury arising from terrorist incidents as distinct from other forms of crime. Such information could not be provided without disproportionate cost. Compensation is not paid for loss of business or damage to property arising from terrorist incidents in Great Britain. Compensation matters in Northern Ireland are the responsibility of the Compensation Agency.

Mr. Don Treshman

Mr. Blair: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on how Mr. Don Treshman was able to enter the United Kingdom on Sunday 28 March after an exclusion order had been made on Friday 26 March.

Mr. Charles Wardle: My right hon. and learned Friend decided during the evening of Friday 26 March that Mr. Treshman should be excluded from the United Kingdom on the ground that his presence was not conducive to the public good. The asylum and special cases division communicated the decision to the ports directorate at 10.30 am on Saturday 27 March, the expectation being that Mr. Treshman would arrive at Heathrow on 28 March. In the event, Mr. Treshman arrived at Gatwick South at 10.45 on Saturday 27 March before his details had been circulated to all ports. The failure to notify the ports of the decision on Friday evening was regrettable and arrangements have been put in place to ensure that in future there is no delay in communicating details of exclusion decisions to ports of entry.

Protection of Animals Act

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will introduce legislation to provide a minimum banning order of five years for those convicted under the Protection of Animals Act 1911;

(2) if he will conduct a study of the range of times for which banning orders have been applied by the courts under the Protection of Animals Act 1911.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Minimum sentences are not in general a feature of the criminal justice system in this country. It is for the courts, subject to the maximum penalty prescribed by Parliament and in the light of all the relevant factors, to decide upon the appropriate penalty in an individual case.

My right hon. and learned Friend has no present plans to initiate a study of the courts' use of their power under the 1911 Act to disqualify an offender from having custody of an animal.

Shotgun Certificates

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish a table to show for those constabularies in England and Wales which keep such records the number of persons holding shotgun certificates who are presently 12 years, 13 years, 14 years, 15 years, 16 years, 17 years and 18 years respectively, or such age or ages definition as is convenient, or is used by police; and what were the numbers three and five years ago for each police force.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The information which is readily available is given in the table. This shows the number of shotgun certificates which were on issue to persons aged under 16 in six police force areas in England and Wales on 1 December 1992.

Information about other police force areas and previous years is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Shotgun certificates

Police force	Number of shotgun certificates on issue to persons aged under 16 (see note)
Metropolitan	46
Devon and Cornwall	80
Gwent	9
Thames Valley	59
West Yorkshire	30
Avon and Somerset	89
Total (six forces)	313

Note: Certificates on issue as at 1 December 1992 to persons aged under 16 on that day.

Racism

Mr. Booth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps the Government are taking to combat racism.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: The Government are committed to eliminating racism and reducing racial disadvantage. The Race Relations Act 1976 and Public Order Act 1986 provide statutory protection for ethnic minorities and are kept under review. In 1992 the inter-departmental racial attacks group published a second report on initiatives which tackled the problem of racially motivated violence and the response by police and local agencies. We are also taking steps both in European and in international forums to promote the value of anti-discrimination legislation and of non-legislative measures to increase racial harmony.

Market Testing

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish the Home Office scoping reports thus far completed in respect of the market testing of any Home Office function.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: No. Scoping study reports are internal management documents made available to local management and, where practicable, to trade unions.

Refugees and Asylum Seekers

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to increase funds to London boroughs to deal with refugees and asylum seekers; and what plans he has to implement a strategic approach in London.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The Department of the Environment is providing special financial assistance to local authorities worst affected by the influx of displaced persons from the former Yugoslavia in 1992-93. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment announced on 3 February at col. 343 that a similar scheme will operate in 1993-94 and that assistance will also be given in respect of unaccompanied refugee children. Local authorities, including London boroughs, will be given an opportunity to make claims for financial assistance in due course.

We are conscious of the pressure on services due to the number of refugees and asylum seekers wishing to settle in London. Where refugees are being brought to the United Kingdom under Government-sponsored schemes, every effort is made to settle these people outside London.

Prison Education Service

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the private firms involved in tendering for the prison education service.

Mr. Peter Lloyd: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Sherwood (Mr. Tipping) on 14 January at col. 798. Responsibility for this matter has now been delegated to the director general of the prison service. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mr. D. Lewis to Harry Greenway, dated 16 April 1993:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about firms tendering for the Prison Education Service.

Mr. Lloyd announced on 11 February the award of the contracts for 68 prisons and young offender institutions. A list of those to whom contracts have been awarded is enclosed. Contracts for 57 prison establishments have still to be awarded.

Crime Statistics

Mr. McWilliam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list by English police authority (a) the population covered by that authority, (b) the authorised police establishment for that authority, (c) the actual police establishment for that authority, (d) the total arrests made in that authority, (e) the number of arrests made per actual police officer, (f) the total number of reported crimes, (g) the number of crimes per officer, (h) the total number of crimes per thousand population and (i) the total number of reported crimes unsolved per thousand population for the last 10 years for which figures are available and for 1978-79.

Mr. Charles Wardle [holding answer 15 April 1993]: The information for items (a) to (c) can be found in the appendix to the annual report of Her Majesty's chief inspector of constabulary and information for items (f) and (h) are published annually in chapter 2 of "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales"; copies of these publications are available in the Library. The other information requested is given in the tables, with the exception of item (i) which is available only at disproportionate cost.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Nuclear Energy

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what form the planned review of the nuclear power industry will take.

Mr. Eggar: As stated in the White Paper, "The Prospects for Coal", a further announcement about the review of the future prospects for nuclear power will be made later this year.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what are the current delays in the installation of security systems at Trawsfwynnd, Haysham, Oldbury and Dungeness nuclear power stations; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what Government scrutiny there has been in the awarding of security contracts by Nuclear Electric; and what complaints have been received concerning the completion of the contracts;

(3) what tendering arrangements were made for security systems at Britain's nuclear power stations; and to whom the contract was awarded.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 14 April 1993]: Security schemes at nuclear power stations are subject to agreement with the Government. The awarding of contracts in relation to security schemes is a commercial matter for the operator concerned.

Export Control

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Waveney (Mr. Porter) of 31 March, Official Report, column 212, if he will make a statement on the relationship between his Department's export control office and his export intelligence system under the contract extension for Prelink Ltd.

Mr. Needham: The export intelligence system contracted to Pre-Link publishes information about overseas sales opportunities. It does not remove the requirement, where that exists, for a seller to obtain an export licence.

Direct Selling

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many complaints about illegal direct selling schemes were received by trading standards officers in (a) 1989, (b) 1990, (c) 1991 and (d) 1992.

Mr. Leigh: There is no obligation for trading standards officers to keep statistics on matters such as this, for which they have no powers or obligations.

Export Credits Guarantee Department

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much in existing guarantees by the ECGD was (a) at risk, (b) in default, (c) written off and (d) still being used in each year from 1985 to privatisation; and what is the extent of Government liability for such accumulated and risks.

Mr. Needham: The information requested has been published in ECGD's trading accounts from 1985-86, copies of which can be found in the Library. For convenience the relevant details are brought together in the following table:

	Amount at risk[1] £ million	Amount in default[1] (paid claims and interest) £ million	Amount written off (annual) £ million	Total provision[1] £ million
1985-86	27,770	2,107·6	35·8	976·4
1986-87	23,794	2,623·6	25·5	1,481·9
1987-88	23,154	4,017·0	25·2	3,147·5
1988-89	21,584	5,103·4	66·2	4,176·1
1989-90	20,717	6,364·8	59·9	7,916·5
1990-91	19,533	7,071·3	38·5	8,511·9
1991-92	17,958	8,118·5	47·9	8,539·5

[1] Balance as at 31 March.

Amounts at risk
These amounts represent ECGD's gross contingent liability under extant guarantees excluding unrecovered claims payments.

Amounts in default
These comprise gross paid claims, plus interest, which have not been recovered or written off.

Amounts written off
These sums relate to the amounts in relation to which recovery action has been abandoned during the year in question.
In order to give a more rounded picture the table also includes the total provision in respect of losses on unrecovered claims and amounts at risk. This represents the cumulative amounts which have been charged to ECGD's trading accounts.

Relocation

Mr. Janner: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the criteria on which decisions on his Department's relocations are based.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 14 April 1993]: The key factors in deciding whether and where to relocate the work of the various parts of my Department are achieving the best value for money and operational efficiency.

Mixed Oxide Fuel

Mr. Hood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what the timetable is for the construction of the new Sellafield mixed oxide fuel plant (SMP); and when he expects it to be operational.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 14 April 1993]: Work on the proposed Sellafield mixed oxide fuel plant has not yet reached the stage of taking a decision to proceed with construction.

Ministerial Engagements

Mr. Wallace: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list (a) his official engagements and (b) those of the hon. Member for Enfield, North (Mr. Eggar) on (i) 30 March, (ii) 31 March and (iii) 1 April.

Mr. Eggar [holding answer 14 April 1993]: Following the debate on the Government's coal review on 29 March, both my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade and I had a full programme of official engagements on the following three days.

My right hon. Friend attended Cabinet on 1 April as well as two Cabinet Committees and other meetings with Cabinet colleagues and overseas visitors in this period. I had a bilateral with the Danish Minister for Energy on 1 April and three constituency engagements during those three days. We both voted in the House on 30 and 31 March.

Post and Telecommunications Services

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to seek further advice from Kleinwort Benson, KPMG, Price Waterhouse and others on the Post Office review in the 1993-94 financial year; and what provision has been made for payment for this advice in the current year's budget for his Department.

Mr. Leigh [holding answer 15 April 1993]: My Department will continue to take advice from external consultants on the Post Office review as necessary. Payment for any such work in 1993-94 would be made from the total sum allocated by my Department for consultancy (£6,429,000) on sub-heading C3(2) of class IV, vote 1 (HC 495-IV). Final allocations have not yet been made within this overall figure.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the balance of payments in (a) post and (b) telecommunications services in the last five years, distinguishing between the balance of payments with other countries of the European Community and elsewhere.

Mr. Needham [holding answer 15 April 1993] Separate information for (a) post and (b) telecommunication services is not available. Information on overall United Kingdom overseas transactions in post and telecommunication services is published by the Central Statistical Office in "The Pink Book, United Kingdom Balance of Payments" which is available in the Library of the House.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 222

SESSION 1992–93

29th March, 1993—16th April, 1993

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc, between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instrument etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading Speaker's rulings and statements.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates, Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates etc (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Com = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
